KOREAN TALKS REMAIN STALLED

Pentagon Ends Huge Task In POW Checks

Few Discrepancies Found In Listings

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — The Christmas-time drama that brought joy into countless American homes and heartbreak to many others virtually ended today as the Pentagon sifted the last few names on the Communist list of American prisoners of war in Korea.

By mid afternoon, officials said about 200 "special problems"—mostly cases of confused identities—remained to be clarified on the enemy's original list of 3,198 names.

Some Listed As Dead

The Army said 20 names on the Communist POW list were those of American soldiers listed on official U. S. casualty rolls as "killed in action."

In some cases, the soldier's $10,000 government insurance had already been paid to the next of kin.

The army said the names of the 20 will not be made public pending the outcome of field investigations by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway's headquarters in Tokyo.

Except for cases involving special problems, the Pentagon completed the gigantic task of double-checking the Red POW list against its own official missing-in-action records at 7:03 a. m. today.

The end came 38 hours and 33 minutes after the first batch of names on the long list began to flow into the Pentagon via cable from Tokyo at 4:30 p. m. Tuesday.

The Associated Press completed transmission of the Pentagon-checked list at 9:19 a. m., having sent about 60,000 words to newspapers and radio stations across the country in identifying some 3,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen.

Few Discrepancies Found

Contrary to early official warnings that the Communists might have padded the POW lists with fake names, Pentagon authorities so far had not reported a single case of fictitious identification.

The Defense Department cautioned at the outset that it could not vouch for the accuracy of the Red POW reports because "the incidence of errors, omissions or fictitious additions" was unknown.

For the most part, officials said there were few known discrepancies in the Communist roster. However, there was still no way of knowing, for sure, of course, whether all those listed are still alive or whether the list is complete.

Inmate Drowns Taking A Bath

LAUREL, Md., Dec. 20 (AP) — A 15-year-old girl inmate with paralyzed limbs and a stunted mind drowned in a bath tub at the District of Columbia training school, the superintendent said today, and her nurse has been placed on involuntary leave.

Dr. Thorsten Smith said the suspended nurse is Elsie Stambach, who is in her 40's and lives at the school.

He said his investigation indicated she was negligent in leaving the inmate in the bathtub while she left the room for a few minutes. The nurse had instructed another mentally retarded girl to watch the first, he added.

Dr. Smith identified the drowning victim as Geraldine Griggs of Washington.

New Jersey Arrives

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 20 (AP)—The battleship New Jersey arrived at Norfolk today after seven months in Korean waters.

The big battlewagon and her four escorts, the destroyer Stormes and the destroyer escorts Waller, Conway and Cony, received a rousing welcome by a band and hundreds of wives and children of their crews.

Too Many Husbands

Pfc. William C. Sasser and his wife, Agnes, are shown enroute to Cape May, N. J., after visiting Sasser's parents in LaGrange, N. C. The 22-year-old bride of a few months learned that her first husband was listed as a prisoner of war in Korea. He first had been reported as killed in action last May. The couple have not yet decided what steps they will take if the report is verified that her first husband is alive.

U. N. Admits Greece Into Its Council

Hands Russia Bloc Two Bitter Defeats

PARIS, Dec. 20 (AP) — The United Nations handed two defeats to the Soviet bloc today. Greece defeated White Russia for a seat in the U. N. security council. And over bitter Russian protests, the general assembly named a five-nation commission to investigate the possibility of free all-German elections.

Victory for Greece came in a record-breaking 19th ballot in the assembly.

This gave the United States one of its hardest-won victories in a contest which split London and Washington temporarily and provoked screams of protest from Moscow.

The final vote was 39 for Greece to 16 for White Russia. Four countries abstained and South Africa was absent. This made the total votes cast 55 and the required two-thirds majority was 37, giving Greece two more than necessary.

The ballot was secret but there were well-informed reports that Britain finally came around on the last few ballots to vote for Greece so she could get the two-thirds majority.

The United States fought for weeks to avoid what would have been its most serious set-back in the U. N. if White Russia had won the contest. The Russians were said to have been backed by a tight coalition of Arab and Asian votes along with some scattered strength from other small nations.

Immediately after the security council vote, the assembly administered another defeat to the Soviet bloc. It created a five-nation commission with instructions to inquire into the possibility of holding free elections in advance and made it clear the group would not be admitted to East Germany.

The vote on the German commission was 45 to 6 with 8 abstentions. The Soviet bloc and Israel voted against it.

The assembly named Brazil, Iceland, the Netherlands, Pakistan and Poland to the commission but Poland already has announced it would not serve. The Russian bloc denounced the group as "illegal" and as an "insult to the German people" but western spokesmen insisted the U. N. had to take positive action.

U. S. Army Deserters Get Political Refuge From Reds

BERLIN, Dec. 20 (AP)—The U. S. Army announced tonight three of its soldiers, described as 'fugitives from military justice," had deserted to Communist-ruled East Germany and been granted political refuge there.

The identity of the three was withheld. One was slated for a bad conduct discharge at the end of a six-month sentence on charges of absence without leave and breach of arrest, the announcement said. The other two were reported awaiting court martial on charges of assault and battery.

Communist police picked up the three after they deserted to the Russian sector of Berlin Dec. 2. The army announcement said they then "requested political asylum in the East zone rather than return to confinement in the army stockade."

The U. S. commandant, Maj. Gen. Lemuel Mathewson, sent notes Dec. 7 and Dec. 18 protesting "the illegal action of the People's Police in detaining representatives of the U. S. Army" and demanding the return of the three soldiers.

The Soviet Control Commission replied today that the three had requested and been granted protection by the "German Democratic Republic" of the Soviet zone. The reply was accompanied by photostatic copies of statements the soldiers were said to have made after they had been in Soviet military custody for several days.

This Fellow Has 'Better To Give' Christmas Spirit

OMAHA, Dec. 20 (AP) — The Christmas spirit is catching on!

A woman shopper reported approaching her car for which parking meter time was running out. She spotted a man stopping at each meter, including the one by her car.

"Are you checking the meters?" she asked.

"No, I'm just going up and down putting in nickels," the man said. "I don't like to see anyone get into trouble at this season."

11 Feared Dead In Ship Fire

ASTORIA, Ore., Dec. 20 (AP) — Flames swept the Danish ship Erria at the mouth of the Columbia River today, and 11 persons were feared dead.

The fire broke out in early morning darkness as the ship rested at anchor, waiting clearing weather before crossing the bar at the mouth of the river into the Pacific Ocean.

The flames spread rapidly, and only the nearness of a Coast Guard station prevented the death toll from mounting high. The Coastguardsmen were less than a mile away, and they directed the rescue of 103 of the 114 aboard.

The other 11 — three crewmen and eight passengers — were feared drowned or trapped aboard the 460-foot vessel.

The Coast Guard held hope for hours that the 11 were aboard a lifeboat, but later Lt. Commander Victor Johnson of the Coast Guard said all lifeboats were accounted for.

As the fire turned the Erria into a burning cauldron, the vessel listed to a precarious 25-degree angle, and the Coast Guard said there was danger it would capsize, making firefighting efforts of Coast Guard and Navy pumpers hazardous.

The 23 passengers and 80 crew members accounted for were under Red Cross care at the John Jacob Astor Hotel here. Most of them left all their belongings behind when the order to abandon ship quickly followed the first alarm.

Parents Out Shopping, Boy Dies In Fire

TAFT, Calif., Dec. 20 (AP) — A three-year-old boy burned to death today while his parents shopped for a big red fire truck, his Christmas present.

Five big red fire trucks and crews poured water on the house for two hours before firemen could enter to find Charles Holt huddled under his bed.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tivia Holt, had taken four other children with them. Another child, Patricia, 14, at school nearby when the alarm came in, was burned about the neck and arms trying to rescue her brother. Her condition is not serious.

Mail Record Seen

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—This year's Christmas mail appears likely to set a record. Post office officials said today preliminary surveys indicate the volume this year will be considerably higher than in 1950.

Solon Asserts Waste Sapping European Aid

Ellender To Report Views To Congress

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—Senator Ellender (D-La) charged today that "scandalous" waste and graft are sapping the multi-billion-dollar European aid program and that some top American officials abroad are "living like princes."

Asked if he plans to air his accusations when Congress returns in January, Ellender told newsmen:

To Air His Views

"You're damn right. You're going to hear the damnedest scandals in the spending of all that money."

He said he will demand that Congress attach strings to further economic aid to Western Europe.

Informed of Ellender's blast, Mutual Security Director W. Averell Harriman, in charge of the aid program, contended that the United States is giving its European allies "relatively small sums in terms of mutual security," and he declared:

"We are not throwing money away."

Ellender called a news conference on Capitol Hill to voice his charges on returning from a trip to Europe.

So angry that his voice shook, the Louisiana Senator bitterly accused France of "milking" the aid-to-Europe program. The French are begging for American help, he said, while their industrial production is soaring higher than before World War II.

Ellender said he found John J. McCloy, U. S. high commissioner in Western Germany, and members of his staff living "like princes" at the expense of U. S. taxpayers.

Among other things, he said a hotel near Bonn, Germany, had been converted into "luxury" quarters for McCloy and his staff.

Asked if he had uncovered evidence of graft in the handling of European aid funds, Ellender replied:

"Yes."

Pay For Troops

The Senator said that France, Belgium and the Netherlands, with U. S. aid, have built up their industrial and agricultural output to such a high level that now "they expect us to help them dispose of the surpluses."

"There's no excuse for that," he said.

Ellender said another thing he found was that Russia, Britain and France demand and get 150,000,000 schillings a year each from the Austrian government to pay for their occupation forces in Austria.

But the United States, he said, pays Austria $150,000,000 "in cold cash" for American occupation troops.

Girl Asks Santa For Boxing Bag

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 20 (AP) — There's a mixture of feminine and tom boy in one letter for Santa Claus at the Columbus post office.

Printed in a little girl's scrawl, it asks Santa for "a toy lipstick, powder, finger polish, mirror, in a box—punching bag."

The explanation for the punching bag request is in the final sentence. It reads:

Witness Fails To Talk To House Probers

Grunewald Seeks Open Hearings

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — House tax investigators met secretly today with Henry W. Grunwald their mystery witness, but they didn't get a word out of him.

"He didn't even say hello," William P. Maloney, Grunewald's attorney, reported as the pair emerged from a 90-minute private session with a ways and means subcommittee headed by Rep. King (D-Calif).

The reason given for Grunewald's silence is that he is insisting on an open hearing.

Willing To Talk

"His name was bandied about in public hearings and he is entitled to answer from the forum from which he was vilified," Maloney told reporters.

Grunewald, grinning broadly, appeared willing to talk to the reporters, but his lawyer wouldn't let him. "Not a single word," Maloney cautioned.

The King committee has been digging into a series of scandals connected with tax fraud prosecutions. It has been after Grunewald for weeks for an explanation of his interest in tax fraud cases and his friendship with high government officials.

While he was under treatment in Georegtown Hospital recently for nervous tension and a gastro-intestinal complaint, King and several other members of the committee visited his bedside in an unsuccessful attempt to question him.

Grunewald refused to talk at that time on advice of his attorney. But he expressed willingness to testify later at a public hearing.

Subpoenaed Again

Grunewald's name has been mentioned indirectly in connection with the $500,000 shakedown story told to the committee by Abraham Teitelbaum, Chicago lawyer.

He also has been described as an old friend of George Shoeneman, former internal revenue commissioner, and Charles Oliphant, recently resigned chief counsel for the Internal Revenue Burau, has acknowledged borrowing $1,300 from him.

But Grunewald's exact place in the picture has never been established.

Before he was excused, Grunewald was subpoenaed for another session at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

B-29's Bomb Red Airstrips

SEOUL, Korea, Friday, Dec. 21 (AP) — U. S. Superfortresses blasted a Communist airfield deep in North Korea and dropped deadly air-bursting bombs along the front lines Thursday night without opposition from Communist fighters.

The Far East air forces announced six B-29s dropped 60 tons of high explosives on the Communist airfield at Sinanju and met only meager anti-aircraft fire.

Six other Superforts from Okinawa attacked Red troop concentrations and ground installations along the front.

The bomber raid followed a slashing daylight raid by F-80 Shooting Stars which knocked out a complex of nine locomotive repair shops east of Pyongyang, the North Korean capital.

U. S. Sabre jet fighters swept north again but failed to sight a single Red plane over MIG alley of Northwest Korea.

The air action continued to be the major activity while the Korean ground front was largely calm.

The U. S. Eighth Army communique reported that Allied elements gave up one advanced position on the Central front, east of the Pukhan River after an attack by a Communist company for three hours and 10 minutes.

On the Western front, northwest of Yonchon, a U. S. patrol was "moderately engaged" for an hour, the Eighth Army said. Allied troops withdrew under cover of mortar and artillery fire in the early morning darkness.

4,000 Korean Vets Greeted At Docks

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20 (AP) — Some 4,000 Korean war veterans were greeted today with band music and plumes of water from a fireboat as the transport General John Pope docked here.

The ship, second in a "home for Christmas" parade of transports from the Far East, carried 2,900 combat leathernecks, 953 army men, 318 navy, 33 air force and 248 civilians.

Nation Cringes Under New Series Of Storms

By The Associated Press

Nature dumped a new big dose of weather misery on the storm-buffeted northern two-thirds of the nation Thursday.

Ice storms crippled transportation in parts of the midwest and east.

Rural areas of South Dakota, battered by a week long series of severe storms, approached a helpless state. Pilots began flying in emergency coal and livestock supplies. Four prospective mothers were flown to hospitals.

A blizzard piled up huge drifts in the Hereford-Grover area of northeastern Colorado forcing the closing of schools. Another blizzard buffeted northeastern New Mexico.

With a fresh snowstorm raging in already snow-logged Chicago, motorists were advised to call off any planned out-of-town trips and "sit at home."

A new batch of polar air rolled down into New England and the northern Rockies and northern Great Plains.

Traffic was tied into knots when freezing rain sheathed thoroughfares in the Kansas City area. Many schools and business houses shut down.

Snow and sleet also crippled transportation in Michigan. Many schools were forced to close and state police warned motorists to stay off certain roads.

The ice storm moved into the east and the U. S. Weather Bureau at Albany, N. Y., warned that severe icing conditions would result.

The mercury dipped to 25 below zero in Havre, Mont., and -19 at Sheridan, Wyo. Albany, N. Y., also shivered in -19 weather—coldest since -20 recorded March 4, 1950.

The snow storm pelting the midwest extended from the Great Lakes region to the northern and central plains. Sub zero weather was forecast in the wake of the new snow.

Storm deaths reported since December opened its barrage of weather fury a week ago have reached at least 242. They include:

Maryland 6, Tennessee 4, and Virginia 1.

But in America's "ice box" states where winters are always rugged—Montana, North and South Dakota and Minnesota—not a single death attributable to the storms or cold has been reported.

Steel Mediators Fail To Agree, Hopes Are Dim

Unions Beleve Jan. 1 Strike Is Inevitable

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — Government mediators reported no progress today after all-day conferences seeking to avert a threatened New Year's Day strike in the steel industry. Hopes for any agreement continued dim.

Cyrus S. Ching, federal mediation service director, said the steel firms had come forward with no offer yet in response to CIO President Philip Murray's demand for an average 18½ cent-an-hour pay boost for steel workers.

Major Crisis Seen

"It seems to me this is a major domestic crisis," Ching told reporters after the meetings with Murray and representatives of 10 key steel firms.

Ching said he had no deadline on how long he would keep the government-sponsored negotiations going — before reporting a deadlock to President Truman.

He said there was no agreement on any one of the union's 22 demands.

Ching said the steel companies emphasized again that they will need price relief if they are to raise wages.

He arranged to meet with the management group tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. (EST) and with the union at 10:30.

Ching told reporters he wants to get the union and management positions down clearly, then work for a settlement. The government fears the effect a strike would have on the mobilization effort.

Strike Is Inevitable

Murray said he still considers a strike inevitable. The steelworkers union, which Murray also heads, is asking a 15-cents-an-hour general pay increase plus a change in job classification differentials estimated to average another 3½ cents an hour, plus other benefits. The men now average just a little under $2.00 an hour including overtime.

U. S. Steel has said it can't raise wages unless the government permits it to raise prices accordingly. How much of a price increase the government would allow is still undecided.

The 10 steel companies represented here produce about 70 per cent of the nation's steel. They are U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Jones & Laughlin, Armco, Youngstown, Wheeling, Inland, Sharon and Great Lakes Steel companies.

Russian Embassy Plaques "Stolen"

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Russian Embassy asked today, for the second time this week, that the State Department get after the "unknown hooligans" it said tore down brass name plates at the Embassy.

They should be "apprehended and punished," the Embassy said in a note disclosed by the Department today.

The Russians reported two instance of "hooliganism"—the disappearance of a plate at the Embassy service entrance Sunday night, and the theft of a big brass plate—bearing the hammer and sickle—from the front entrance last night.

The Romanian legation, blocks away but close to the Russians in ideals also reported that someone had stolen a plaque from that building Sunday night.

Pork Crop Decrease Seen By Government

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — The government today forecast a 9 per cent reduction in next spring's pig crop, virtually dashing previous hopes of a larger supply of meats in butcher shop next year.

It also may mean noticeably higher meat prices, on the average.

A larger quantity of beef is expected, but it will be offset by a reduction in pork if farmers carry out present hog production plans. This year's meat supply has been estimated at an average of about 141 pounds for each person. Officials had hoped for an average of around 145 pounds next year.

Plane Is Landed Safely In Storm

COBOURG, Ont., Dec. 20 (AP)—A transcontinental plane, lost in a snowstorm, barely missed plunging into Lake Ontario today as it made a forced belly landing near here with both engines dead.

The landing in a farmer's pasture was so smooth, however, that none of the 47 persons aboard was injured and two babies in arms slept on.

The twin-engine C-46 of the unscheduled major air coach system was off its course on a flight between Burbank, Calif., and Newark, N. J., when one engine went dead and the radio went out. It was losing altitude as it crossed 70-mile-wide Lake Ontario. The second engine went out just as Pilot Bruce L. Smelser of Burbank spotted land.

A veteran of 10,000 hours in the air, Smelser brought the plane down only half a mile from the lake and a mile west of Cobourg. The plane cleared a house safely, carried away a fence and skidded wheels up in the snow to within a few yards of a farm home.

No Inductions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — Marine draftees scheduled to be inducted today and tomorrow will not be called up until after Christmas, Rep. Javits (R-Lib-NY) said today.

Reds Drum Up New Charges Against Allies

Lower Level Talks Planned In Dispute

MUNSAN, Korea, Friday, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Reds drummed up fresh propaganda controversy over the stalled prisoner exchange question Thursday while rival negotiators sought a new approach to the old problem of supervising a Korean armistice.

The Reds hinted they might consider a compromise on supervision, but the price looked high to Allied negotiators and was rejected.

However, United Nations and Communist staff officers scheduled a meeting in Panmunjom at 10 a. m. today (8 p. m. Thursday, EST) after working on a set of rules for policing the truce.

No Meeting Held

Regardless of the outcome of this single-shot staff officer effort to crack down, the regular joint subcommittee on truce supervision was due to meet three hours later, at 1 p. m. (11 p. m. Thursday, EST).

For the second consecutive day there was no meeting Thursday on the vital prisoner exchange question. There was no word when talks on prisoners would be resumed.

The United Nations command, grimly anxious to recover every possible man from Red prison camps, searched long and hard for discrepancies on the list of 11,559 U. N. captives submitted by the communists Tuesday. The Communists said the list was a complete roster of all prisoners held through the end of November, but the U. N. command was skeptical, for this was only about one-tenth of the total missing.

On the list were 3,198 Americans and only 7,142 South Koreans.

Communist propagandist Alan Winnington, who frequently reflects official Red views, alleged the U. S. had "rigged phony figures" of missing by the "simple device of leaving corpses on the battlefield and listing them as missing."

At the same time the Allies were re-listing in North Korean and Chinese the names of 132,000 Red prisoners held in Allied camps.

Staff Officers Meet

In an unprecedented move Thursday, the U. N. command suggested handing the vital policing job to staff officers. It was hoped that such lower level talks would succeed where Allied Communist generals had failed.

The Reds quickly accepted the offer. It was made as the subdelegates wound up another angry-toned and unproductive session Thursday.

The U. N. move to drop the armistice problem in the laps of two colonels — Don O. Darrow of the air force and North Korean Col. Chang Chun — stirred speculation that some compromising might be in sight. But there was no official confirmation of this.

The Communists dropped a hint Thursday they "might consider" swapping concessions to the U. N. on rotation and re-stocking equipment in return for an Allied withdrawal from three other U. N. demands.

An official release from the U. N. advance headquarters said the Reds wanted the Allies to accept:

1. Red demands to construct and repair airfields.

2. Inspections by neutral teams

Villagers Attend Dance To Honor Friend Despite Storm

WEST MINOT, Me., Dec. 20 (AP) — Over a hundred villagers braved a raging snowstorm to dance farewell to Jerry in the Grange Hall here tonight.

It was the "100th birthday dance" and the last light-hearted tribute to the jovial cheesemaker who died 26 years ago.

A small town man with a big heart for his neighbors, Jerry — Jairue Hilborn — willed that a dance be held in his memory until his 100th birthday.

His smiling, white haired widow, Mrs. Bertha Hilborn, 78, was on hand to greet the dancers and see that Jerry's last wishes were observed.

A moment of silence between the gay square dances was all he asked in return.

As the merrymakers whirled through the dance there was talk of the villagers continuing the annual frolic at their own expense in return for Jerry's generosity.

"Jerry has entertained us for 26 years, let's do the same for him," was the way Grocer Thomas Slattery described the general feeling.

Slattery has attended every dance since the first, when he was a lad of 13. He recalls how Jerry loved children.

"Jerry could always be counted upon to pull an all-day sucker out of his jacket pocket," Slattery said.

Tonight Slattery danced Jerry's favorite dance, "The Haymaker's Jig," with Jerry's spry widow.

Villagers recall that Jerry had the first gramophone. Oldsters tell how he carried it to the steps of the general store and played tunes for the passers by.

Neighbors also relate how on a fine summer day Jerry would turn the key in the door of his cheese shop and take a rolicking troop of youngsters on a train ride to the seashore.

Townpeople tonight presented "Mrs. Jerry" with a bouquet of flowers. Others collected a purse to help repay his widow for the cost of the dances.

U. N. Admits Greece Into Its Council

Immediately after the security council vote, the assembly administered another defeat to the Soviet bloc. It created a five-nation commission with instructions to inquire into the possibility of holding free elections in advance and made it clear the group would not be admitted to East Germany.

The vote on the German commission was 45 to 6 with 8 abstentions. The Soviet bloc and Israel voted against it.

The assembly named Brazil, Iceland, the Netherlands, Pakistan and Poland to the commission but Poland already has announced it would not serve. The Russian bloc denounced the group as "illegal" and as an "insult to the German people" but western spokesmen insisted the U. N. had to take positive action.

OMAHA, Dec. 20 (AP) — The Christmas spirit is catching on!

11 Feared Dead In Ship Fire

ASTORIA, Ore., Dec. 20 (AP) — Flames swept the Danish ship Erria at the mouth of the Columbia River today, and 11 persons were feared dead.

The fire broke out in early morning darkness as the ship rested at anchor, waiting clearing weather before crossing the bar at the mouth of the river into the Pacific Ocean.

The flames spread rapidly, and only the nearness of a Coast Guard station prevented the death toll from mounting high. The Coastguardsmen were less than a mile away, and they directed the rescue of 103 of the 114 aboard.

The other 11 — three crewmen and eight passengers — were feared drowned or trapped aboard the 460-foot vessel.

The Coast Guard held hope for hours that the 11 were aboard a lifeboat, but later Lt. Commander Victor Johnson of the Coast Guard said all lifeboats were accounted for.

As the fire turned the Erria into a burning cauldron, the vessel listed to a precarious 25-degree angle, and the Coast Guard said there was danger it would capsize, making firefighting efforts of Coast Guard and Navy pumpers hazardous.

The 23 passengers and 80 crew members accounted for were under Red Cross care at the John Jacob Astor Hotel here. Most of them left all their belongings behind when the order to abandon ship quickly followed the first alarm.

Parents Out Shopping, Boy Dies In Fire

TAFT, Calif., Dec. 20 (AP) — A three-year-old boy burned to death today while his parents shopped for a big red fire truck, his Christmas present.

Five big red fire trucks and crews poured water on the house for two hours before firemen could enter to find Charles Holt huddled under his bed.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tivia Holt, had taken four other children with them. Another child, Patricia, 14, at school nearby when the alarm came in, was burned about the neck and arms trying to rescue her brother. Her condition is not serious.

Solon Asserts Waste Sapping European Aid

Ellender To Report Views To Congress

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—Senator Ellender (D-La) charged today that "scandalous" waste and graft are sapping the multi-billion-dollar European aid program and that some top American officials abroad are "living like princes."

Asked if he plans to air his accusations when Congress returns in January, Ellender told newsmen:

To Air His Views

"You're damn right. You're going to hear the damnedest scandals in the spending of all that money."

He said he will demand that Congress attach strings to further economic aid to Western Europe.

Informed of Ellender's blast, Mutual Security Director W. Averell Harriman, in charge of the aid program, contended that the United States is giving its European allies "relatively small sums in terms of mutual security," and he declared:

Ellender called a news conference on Capitol Hill to voice his charges on returning from a trip to Europe.

So angry that his voice shook, the Louisiana Senator bitterly accused France of "milking" the aid-to-Europe program. The French are begging for American help, he said, while their industrial production is soaring higher than before World War II.

Ellender said he found John J. McCloy, U. S. high commissioner in Western Germany, and members of his staff living "like princes" at the expense of U. S. taxpayers.

Among other things, he said a hotel near Bonn, Germany, had been converted into "luxury" quarters for McCloy and his staff.

Asked if he had uncovered evidence of graft in the handling of European aid funds, Ellender replied:

"Yes."

Pay For Troops

The Senator said that France, Belgium and the Netherlands, with U. S. aid, have built up their industrial and agricultural output to such a high level that now "they expect us to help them dispose of the surpluses."

"There's no excuse for that," he said.

Ellender said another thing he found was that Russia, Britain and France demand and get 150,000,000 schillings a year each from the Austrian government to pay for their occupation forces in Austria.

But the United States, he said, pays Austria $150,000,000 "in cold cash" for American occupation troops.

Witness Fails To Talk To House Probers

Grunewald Seeks Open Hearings

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — House tax investigators met secretly today with Henry W. Grunwald their mystery witness, but they didn't get a word out of him.

"He didn't even say hello," William P. Maloney, Grunewald's attorney, reported as the pair emerged from a 90-minute private session with a ways and means subcommittee headed by Rep. King (D-Calif).

The reason given for Grunewald's silence is that he is insisting on an open hearing.

Willing To Talk

"His name was bandied about in public hearings and he is entitled to answer from the forum from which he was vilified," Maloney told reporters.

Grunewald, grinning broadly, appeared willing to talk to the reporters, but his lawyer wouldn't let him. "Not a single word," Maloney cautioned.

The King committee has been digging into a series of scandals connected with tax fraud prosecutions. It has been after Grunewald for weeks for an explanation of his interest in tax fraud cases and his friendship with high government officials.

While he was under treatment in Georgetown Hospital recently for nervous tension and a gastro-intestinal complaint, King and several other members of the committee visited his bedside in an unsuccessful attempt to question him.

Grunewald refused to talk at that time on advice of his attorney. But he expressed willingness to testify later at a public hearing.

Subpoenaed Again

Grunewald's name has been mentioned indirectly in connection with the $500,000 shakedown story told to the committee by Abraham Teitelbaum, Chicago lawyer.

He also has been described as an old friend of George Shoeneman, former internal revenue commissioner, and Charles Oliphant, recently resigned chief counsel for the Internal Revenue Burau, has acknowledged borrowing $1,300 from him.

But Grunewald's exact place in the picture has never been established.

Before he was excused, Grunewald was subpoenaed for another session at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

B-29's Bomb Red Airstrips

SEOUL, Korea, Friday, Dec. 21 (AP) — U. S. Superfortresses blasted a Communist airfield deep in North Korea and dropped deadly air-bursting bombs along the front lines Thursday night without opposition from Communist fighters.

The Far East air forces announced six B-29s dropped 60 tons of high explosives on the Communist airfield at Sinanju and met only meager anti-aircraft fire.

Six other Superforts from Okinawa attacked Red troop concentrations and ground installations along the front.

The bomber raid followed a slashing daylight raid by F-80 Shooting Stars which knocked out a complex of nine locomotive repair shops east of Pyongyang, the North Korean capital.

U. S. Sabre jet fighters swept north again but failed to sight a single Red plane over MIG alley of Northwest Korea.

The air action continued to be the major activity while the Korean ground front was largely calm.

The U. S. Eighth Army communique reported that Allied elements gave up one advanced position on the Central front, east of the Pukhan River after an attack by a Communist company for three hours and 10 minutes.

On the Western front, northwest of Yonchon, a U. S. patrol was "moderately engaged" for an hour, the Eighth Army said. Allied troops withdrew under cover of mortar and artillery fire in the early morning darkness.

4,000 Korean Vets Greeted At Docks

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20 (AP) — Some 4,000 Korean war veterans were greeted today with band music and plumes of water from a fireboat as the transport General John Pope docked here.

The ship, second in a "home for Christmas" parade of transports from the Far East, carried 2,900 combat leathernecks, 953 army men, 318 navy, 33 air force and 248 civilians.

Nation Cringes Under New Series Of Storms

By The Associated Press

Nature dumped a new big dose of weather misery on the storm-buffeted northern two-thirds of the nation Thursday.

Ice storms crippled transportation in parts of the midwest and east.

Rural areas of South Dakota, battered by a week long series of severe storms, approached a helpless state. Pilots began flying in emergency coal and livestock supplies. Four prospective mothers were flown to hospitals.

A blizzard piled up huge drifts in the Hereford-Grover area of northeastern Colorado forcing the closing of schools. Another blizzard buffeted northeastern New Mexico.

With a fresh snowstorm raging in already snow-logged Chicago, motorists were advised to call off any planned out-of-town trips and "sit at home."

A new batch of polar air rolled down into New England and the northern Rockies and northern Great Plains.

Traffic was tied into knots when freezing rain sheathed thoroughfares in the Kansas City area. Many schools and business houses shut down.

Snow and sleet also crippled transportation in Michigan. Many schools were forced to close and state police warned motorists to stay off certain roads.

The ice storm moved into the east and the U. S. Weather Bureau at Albany, N. Y., warned that severe icing conditions would result.

The mercury dipped to 25 below zero in Havre, Mont., and -19 at Sheridan, Wyo. Albany, N. Y., also shivered in -19 weather—coldest since -20 recorded March 4, 1950.

The snow storm pelting the midwest extended from the Great Lakes region to the northern and central plains. Sub zero weather was forecast in the wake of the new snow.

Storm deaths reported since December opened its barrage of weather fury a week ago have reached at least 242. They include:

Maryland 6, Tennessee 4, and Virginia 1.

But in America's "ice box" states where winters are always rugged—Montana, North and South Dakota and Minnesota—not a single death attributable to the storms or cold has been reported.

Steel Mediators Fail To Agree, Hopes Are Dim

Unions Beleve Jan. 1 Strike Is Inevitable

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — Government mediators reported no progress today after all-day conferences seeking to avert a threatened New Year's Day strike in the steel industry. Hopes for any agreement continued dim.

Cyrus S. Ching, federal mediation service director, said the steel firms had come forward with no offer yet in response to CIO President Philip Murray's demand for an average 18½ cent-an-hour pay boost for steel workers.

Major Crisis Seen

"It seems to me this is a major domestic crisis," Ching told reporters after the meetings with Murray and representatives of 10 key steel firms.

Ching said he had no deadline on how long he would keep the government-sponsored negotiations going — before reporting a deadlock to President Truman.

He said there was no agreement on any one of the union's 22 demands.

Ching said the steel companies emphasized again that they will need price relief if they are to raise wages.

He arranged to meet with the management group tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. (EST) and with the union at 10:30.

Ching told reporters he wants to get the union and management positions down clearly, then work for a settlement. The government fears the effect a strike would have on the mobilization effort.

Strike Is Inevitable

Murray said he still considers a strike inevitable. The steelworkers union, which Murray also heads, is asking a 15-cents-an-hour general pay increase plus a change in job classification differentials estimated to average another 3½ cents an hour, plus other benefits. The men now average just a little under $2.00 an hour including overtime.

U. S. Steel has said it can't raise wages unless the government permits it to raise prices accordingly. How much of a price increase the government would allow is still undecided.

The 10 steel companies represented here produce about 70 per cent of the nation's steel. They are U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Jones & Laughlin, Armco, Youngstown, Wheeling, Inland, Sharon and Great Lakes Steel companies.

Russian Embassy Plaques "Stolen"

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Russian Embassy asked today, for the second time this week, that the State Department get after the "unknown hooligans" it said tore down brass name plates at the Embassy.

They should be "apprehended and punished," the Embassy said in a note disclosed by the Department today.

The Russians reported two instance of "hooliganism"—the disappearance of a plate at the Embassy service entrance Sunday night, and the theft of a big brass plate—bearing the hammer and sickle—from the front entrance last night.

The Romanian legation, blocks away but close to the Russians in ideals also reported that someone had stolen a plaque from that building Sunday night.

Pork Crop Decrease Seen By Government

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — The government today forecast a 9 per cent reduction in next spring's pig crop, virtually dashing previous hopes of a larger supply of meats in butcher shop next year.

It also may mean noticeably higher meat prices, on the average.

A larger quantity of beef is expected, but it will be offset by a reduction in pork if farmers carry out present hog production plans. This year's meat supply has been estimated at an average of about 141 pounds for each person. Officials had hoped for an average of around 145 pounds next year.

Plane Is Landed Safely In Storm

COBOURG, Ont., Dec. 20 (AP)—A transcontinental plane, lost in a snowstorm, barely missed plunging into Lake Ontario today as it made a forced belly landing near here with both engines dead.

The landing in a farmer's pasture was so smooth, however, that none of the 47 persons aboard was injured and two babies in arms slept on.

The twin-engine C-46 of the unscheduled major air coach system was off its course on a flight between Burbank, Calif., and Newark, N. J., when one engine went dead and the radio went out. It was losing altitude as it crossed 70-mile-wide Lake Ontario. The second engine went out just as Pilot Bruce L. Smelser of Burbank spotted land.

A veteran of 10,000 hours in the air, Smelser brought the plane down only half a mile from the lake and a mile west of Cobourg. The plane cleared a house safely, carried away a fence and skidded wheels up in the snow to within a few yards of a farm home.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — Marine draftees scheduled to be inducted today and tomorrow will not be called up until after Christmas, Rep. Javits (R-Lib-NY) said today.

Reds Drum Up New Charges Against Allies

Lower Level Talks Planned In Dispute

MUNSAN, Korea, Friday, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Reds drummed up fresh propaganda controversy over the stalled prisoner exchange question Thursday while rival negotiators sought a new approach to the old problem of supervising a Korean armistice.

The Reds hinted they might consider a compromise on supervision, but the price looked high to Allied negotiators and was rejected.

However, United Nations and Communist staff officers scheduled a meeting in Panmunjom at 10 a. m. today (8 p. m. Thursday, EST) after working on a set of rules for policing the truce.

No Meeting Held

Regardless of the outcome of this single-shot staff officer effort to crack down, the regular joint subcommittee on truce supervision was due to meet three hours later, at 1 p. m. (11 p. m. Thursday, EST).

For the second consecutive day there was no meeting Thursday on the vital prisoner exchange question. There was no word when talks on prisoners would be resumed.

The United Nations command, grimly anxious to recover every possible man from Red prison camps, searched long and hard for discrepancies on the list of 11,559 U. N. captives submitted by the communists Tuesday. The Communists said the list was a complete roster of all prisoners held through the end of November, but the U. N. command was skeptical, for this was only about one-tenth of the total missing.

On the list were 3,198 Americans and only 7,142 South Koreans.

Communist propagandist Alan Winnington, who frequently reflects official Red views, alleged the U. S. had "rigged phony figures" of missing by the "simple device of leaving corpses on the battlefield and listing them as missing."

At the same time the Allies were re-listing in North Korean and Chinese the names of 132,000 Red prisoners held in Allied camps.

Staff Officers Meet

In an unprecedented move Thursday, the U. N. command suggested handing the vital policing job to staff officers. It was hoped that such lower level talks would succeed where Allied Communist generals had failed.

The Reds quickly accepted the offer. It was made as the subdelegates wound up another angry-toned and unproductive session Thursday.

The U. N. move to drop the armistice problem in the laps of two colonels — Don O. Darrow of the air force and North Korean Col. Chang Chun — stirred speculation that some compromising might be in sight. But there was no official confirmation of this.

The Communists dropped a hint Thursday they "might consider" swapping concessions to the U. N. on rotation and re-stocking equipment in return for an Allied withdrawal from three other U. N. demands.

An official release from the U. N. advance headquarters said the Reds wanted the Allies to accept:

1. Red demands to construct and repair airfields.
2. Inspections by neutral teams

Villagers Attend Dance To Honor Friend Despite Storm

WEST MINOT, Me., Dec. 20 (AP) — Over a hundred villagers braved a raging snowstorm to dance farewell to Jerry in the Grange Hall here tonight.

It was the "100th birthday dance" and the last light-hearted tribute to the jovial cheesemaker who died 26 years ago.

A small town man with a big heart for his neighbors, Jerry — Jairue Hilborn — willed that a dance be held in his memory until his 100th birthday.

His smiling, white haired widow, Mrs. Bertha Hilborn, 78, was on hand to greet the dancers and see that Jerry's last wishes were observed.

A moment of silence between the gay square dances was all he asked in return.

As the merrymakers whirled through the dance there was talk of the villagers continuing the annual frolic at their own expense in return for Jerry's generosity.

"Jerry has entertained us for 26 years, let's do the same for him," was the way Grocer Thomas Slattery described the general feeling.

Slattery has attended every dance since the first, when he was a lad of 13. He recalls how Jerry loved children.

"Jerry could always be counted upon to pull an all-day sucker out of his jacket pocket," Slattery said.

Tonight Slattery danced Jerry's favorite dance, "The Haymaker's Jig," with Jerry's spry widow.

Villagers recall that Jerry had the first gramophone. Oldsters tell how he carried it to the steps of the general store and played tunes for the passers by.

Neighbors also relate how on a fine summer day Jerry would turn the key in the door of his cheese shop and take a rolicking troop of youngsters on a train ride to the seashore.

Townpeople tonight presented "Mrs. Jerry" with a bouquet of flowers. Others collected a purse to help repay his widow for the cost of the dances.

KOREAN TALKS REMAIN STALLED

Few Discrepancies Found In Listings

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — The Christmas-time drama that brought joy into countless American homes and heartbreak to many others virtually ended today as the Pentagon sifted the last few names on the Communist list of American prisoners of war in Korea.

By mid afternoon, officials said about 200 "special problems"—mostly cases of confused identities—remained to be clarified on the enemy's original list of 3,198 names.

Some Listed As Dead

The Army said 20 names on the Communist POW list were those of American soldiers listed on official U. S. casualty rolls as "killed in action."

In some cases, the soldier's $10,000 government insurance had already been paid to the next of kin.

The army said the names of the 20 will not be made public pending the outcome of field investigations by Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway's headquarters in Tokyo.

Except for cases involving special problems, the Pentagon completed the gigantic task of double-checking the Red POW list against its own official missing-in-action records at 7:03 a. m. today.

The end came 38 hours and 33 minutes after the first batch of names on the long list began to flow into the Pentagon via cable from Tokyo at 4:30 p. m. Tuesday.

The Associated Press completed transmission of the Pentagon-checked list at 9:19 a. m., having sent about 60,000 words to newspapers and radio stations across the country in identifying some 3,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen.

Few Discrepancies Found

Contrary to early official warnings that the Communists might have padded the POW lists with fake names, Pentagon authorities so far had not reported a single case of fictitious identification.

The Defense Department cautioned at the outset that it could not vouch for the accuracy of the Red POW reports because "the incidence of errors, omissions or fictitious additions" was unknown.

For the most part, officials said there were few known discrepancies in the Communist roster. However, there was still no way of knowing, for sure, of course, whether all those listed are still alive or whether the list is complete.

Inmate Drowns Taking A Bath

LAUREL, Md., Dec. 20 (AP) — A 15-year-old girl inmate with paralyzed limbs and a stunted mind drowned in a bath tub at the District of Columbia training school, the superintendent said today, and her nurse has been placed on involuntary leave.

Dr. Thorsten Smith said the suspended nurse is Elsie Stambach, who is in her 40's and lives at the school.

He said his investigation indicated she was negligent in leaving the inmate in the bathtub while she left the room for a few minutes. The nurse had instructed another mentally retarded girl to watch the first, he added.

Dr. Smith identified the drowning victim as Geraldine Griggs of Washington.

New Jersey Arrives

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 20 (AP)—The battleship New Jersey arrived at Norfolk today after seven months in Korean waters.

The big battlewagon and her four escorts, the destroyer Stormes and the destroyer escorts Waller, Conway and Cony, received a rousing welcome by a band and hundreds of wives and children of their crews.

U. N. Admits Greece Into Its Council

Hands Russia Bloc Two Bitter Defeats

PARIS, Dec. 20 (AP) — The United Nations handed two defeats to the Soviet bloc today. Greece defeated White Russia for a seat in the U. N. security council. And over bitter Russian protests, the general assembly named a five-nation commission to investigate the possibility of free all-German elections.

Victory for Greece came in a record-breaking 19th ballot in the assembly.

This gave the United States one of its hardest-won victories in a contest which split London and Washington temporarily and provoked screams of protest from Moscow.

The final vote was 39 for Greece to 16 for White Russia. Four countries abstained and South Africa was absent. This made the total votes cast 55 and the required two-thirds majority was 37, giving Greece two more than necessary.

The ballot was secret but there were well-informed reports that Britain finally came around on the last few ballots to vote for Greece so she could get the two-thirds majority.

The United States fought for weeks to avoid what would have been its most serious set-back in the U. N. if White Russia had won the contest. The Russians were said to have been backed by a tight coalition of Arab and Asian votes along with some scattered strength from other small nations.

Immediately after the security council vote, the assembly administered another defeat to the Soviet bloc. It created a five-nation commission with instructions to inquire into the possibility of holding free elections in advance and made it clear the group would not be admitted to East Germany.

The vote on the German commission was 45 to 6 with 8 abstentions. The Soviet bloc and Israel voted against it.

The assembly named Brazil, Iceland, the Netherlands, Pakistan and Poland to the commission but Poland already has announced it would not serve. U. S. Army Deserters Get Political Refuge From Reds

BERLIN, Dec. 20 (AP)—The U. S. Army announced tonight three of its soldiers, described as 'fugitives from military justice," had deserted to Communist-ruled East Germany and been granted political refuge there.

The identity of the three was withheld. One was slated for a bad conduct discharge at the end of a six-month sentence on charges of absence without leave and breach of arrest, the announcement said. The other two were reported awaiting court martial on charges of assault and battery.

Communist police picked up the three after they deserted to the Russian sector of Berlin Dec. 2. The army announcement said they then "requested political asylum in the East zone rather than return to confinement in the army stockade."

The U. S. commandant, Maj. Gen. Lemuel Mathewson, sent notes Dec. 7 and Dec. 18 protesting "the illegal action of the People's Police in detaining representatives of the U. S. Army" and demanding the return of the three soldiers.

The Soviet Control Commission replied today that the three had requested and been granted protection by the "German Democratic Republic" of the Soviet zone. The reply was accompanied by photostatic copies of statements the soldiers were said to have made after they had been in Soviet military custody for several days.

"His name was bandied about in public hearings and he is entitled to answer from the forum from which he was vilified," Maloney told reporters.

Grunewald, grinning broadly, appeared willing to talk to the reporters, but his lawyer wouldn't let him. "Not a single word," Maloney cautioned.

The King committee has been digging into a series of scandals connected with tax fraud prosecutions. It has been after Grunewald for weeks for an explanation of his interest in tax fraud cases and his friendship with high government officials.

While he was under treatment in Georgetown Hospital recently for nervous tension and a gastro-intestinal complaint, King and several other members of the committee visited his bedside in an unsuccessful attempt to question him.

Grunewald refused to talk at that time on advice of his attorney. But he expressed willingness to testify later at a public hearing.

Subpoenaed Again

Grunewald's name has been mentioned indirectly in connection with the $500,000 shakedown story told to the committee by Abraham Teitelbaum, Chicago lawyer.

He also has been described as an old friend of George Shoeneman, former internal revenue commissioner, and Charles Oliphant, recently resigned chief counsel for the Internal Revenue Burau, has acknowledged borrowing $1,300 from him.

But Grunewald's exact place in the picture has never been established.

Before he was excused, Grunewald was subpoenaed for another session at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

B-29's Bomb Red Airstrips

SEOUL, Korea, Friday, Dec. 21 (AP) — U. S. Superfortresses blasted a Communist airfield deep in North Korea and dropped deadly air-bursting bombs along the front lines Thursday night without opposition from Communist fighters.

The Far East air forces announced six B-29s dropped 60 tons of high explosives on the Communist airfield at Sinanju and met only meager anti-aircraft fire.

Six other Superforts from Okinawa attacked Red troop concentrations and ground installations along the front.

The bomber raid followed a slashing daylight raid by F-80 Shooting Stars which knocked out a complex of nine locomotive repair shops east of Pyongyang, the North Korean capital.

U. S. Sabre jet fighters swept north again but failed to sight a single Red plane over MIG alley of Northwest Korea.

The air action continued to be the major activity while the Korean ground front was largely calm.

The U. S. Eighth Army communique reported that Allied elements gave up one advanced position on the Central front, east of the Pukhan River after an attack by a Communist company for three hours and 10 minutes.

On the Western front, northwest of Yonchon, a U. S. patrol was "moderately engaged" for an hour, the Eighth Army said. Allied troops withdrew under cover of mortar and artillery fire in the early morning darkness.

4,000 Korean Vets Greeted At Docks

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20 (AP) — Some 4,000 Korean war veterans were greeted today with band music and plumes of water from a fireboat as the transport General John Pope docked here.

The ship, second in a "home for Christmas" parade of transports from the Far East, carried 2,900 combat leathernecks, 953 army men, 318 navy, 33 air force and 248 civilians.

Nation Cringes Under New Series Of Storms

By The Associated Press

Nature dumped a new big dose of weather misery on the storm-buffeted northern two-thirds of the nation Thursday.

Ice storms crippled transportation in parts of the midwest and east.

Rural areas of South Dakota, battered by a week long series of severe storms, approached a helpless state. Pilots began flying in emergency coal and livestock supplies. Four prospective mothers were flown to hospitals.

A blizzard piled up huge drifts in the Hereford-Grover area of northeastern Colorado forcing the closing of schools. Another blizzard buffeted northeastern New Mexico.

With a fresh snowstorm raging in already snow-logged Chicago, motorists were advised to call off any planned out-of-town trips and "sit at home."

A new batch of polar air rolled down into New England and the northern Rockies and northern Great Plains.

Traffic was tied into knots when freezing rain sheathed thoroughfares in the Kansas City area. Many schools and business houses shut down.

Snow and sleet also crippled transportation in Michigan. Many schools were forced to close and state police warned motorists to stay off certain roads.

The ice storm moved into the east and the U. S. Weather Bureau at Albany, N. Y., warned that severe icing conditions would result.

The mercury dipped to 25 below zero in Havre, Mont., and -19 at Sheridan, Wyo. Albany, N. Y., also shivered in -19 weather—coldest since -20 recorded March 4, 1950.

The snow storm pelting the midwest extended from the Great Lakes region to the northern and central plains. Sub zero weather was forecast in the wake of the new snow.

Storm deaths reported since December opened its barrage of weather fury a week ago have reached at least 242. They include:

Maryland 6, Tennessee 4, and Virginia 1.

But in America's "ice box" states where winters are always rugged—Montana, North and South Dakota and Minnesota—not a single death attributable to the storms or cold has been reported.

Steel Mediators Fail To Agree, Hopes Are Dim

Unions Beleve Jan. 1 Strike Is Inevitable

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — Government mediators reported no progress today after all-day conferences seeking to avert a threatened New Year's Day strike in the steel industry. Hopes for any agreement continued dim.

Cyrus S. Ching, federal mediation service director, said the steel firms had come forward with no offer yet in response to CIO President Philip Murray's demand for an average 18½ cent-an-hour pay boost for steel workers.

Major Crisis Seen

"It seems to me this is a major domestic crisis," Ching told reporters after the meetings with Murray and representatives of 10 key steel firms.

Ching said he had no deadline on how long he would keep the government-sponsored negotiations going — before reporting a deadlock to President Truman.

He said there was no agreement on any one of the union's 22 demands.

Ching said the steel companies emphasized again that they will need price relief if they are to raise wages.

He arranged to meet with the management group tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. (EST) and with the union at 10:30.

Ching told reporters he wants to get the union and management positions down clearly, then work for a settlement. The government fears the effect a strike would have on the mobilization effort.

Strike Is Inevitable

Murray said he still considers a strike inevitable. The steelworkers union, which Murray also heads, is asking a 15-cents-an-hour general pay increase plus a change in job classification differentials estimated to average another 3½ cents an hour, plus other benefits. The men now average just a little under $2.00 an hour including overtime.

U. S. Steel has said it can't raise wages unless the government permits it to raise prices accordingly. How much of a price increase the government would allow is still undecided.

The 10 steel companies represented here produce about 70 per cent of the nation's steel. They are U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Jones & Laughlin, Armco, Youngstown, Wheeling, Inland, Sharon and Great Lakes Steel companies.

Russian Embassy Plaques "Stolen"

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Russian Embassy asked today, for the second time this week, that the State Department get after the "unknown hooligans" it said tore down brass name plates at the Embassy.

They should be "apprehended and punished," the Embassy said in a note disclosed by the Department today.

The Russians reported two instance of "hooliganism"—the disappearance of a plate at the Embassy service entrance Sunday night, and the theft of a big brass plate—bearing the hammer and sickle—from the front entrance last night.

The Romanian legation, blocks away but close to the Russians in ideals also reported that someone had stolen a plaque from that building Sunday night.

Pork Crop Decrease Seen By Government

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — The government today forecast a 9 per cent reduction in next spring's pig crop, virtually dashing previous hopes of a larger supply of meats in butcher shop next year.

It also may mean noticeably higher meat prices, on the average.

A larger quantity of beef is expected, but it will be offset by a reduction in pork if farmers carry out present hog production plans. This year's meat supply has been estimated at an average of about 141 pounds for each person. Officials had hoped for an average of around 145 pounds next year.

Plane Is Landed Safely In Storm

COBOURG, Ont., Dec. 20 (AP)—A transcontinental plane, lost in a snowstorm, barely missed plunging into Lake Ontario today as it made a forced belly landing near here with both engines dead.

The landing in a farmer's pasture was so smooth, however, that none of the 47 persons aboard was injured and two babies in arms slept on.

The twin-engine C-46 of the unscheduled major air coach system was off its course on a flight between Burbank, Calif., and Newark, N. J., when one engine went dead and the radio went out. It was losing altitude as it crossed 70-mile-wide Lake Ontario. The second engine went out just as Pilot Bruce L. Smelser of Burbank spotted land.

A veteran of 10,000 hours in the air, Smelser brought the plane down only half a mile from the lake and a mile west of Cobourg. The plane cleared a house safely, carried away a fence and skidded wheels up in the snow to within a few yards of a farm home.

No Inductions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP) — Marine draftees scheduled to be inducted today and tomorrow will not be called up until after Christmas, Rep. Javits (R-Lib-NY) said today.

Reds Drum Up New Charges Against Allies

Lower Level Talks Planned In Dispute

MUNSAN, Korea, Friday, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Reds drummed up fresh propaganda controversy over the stalled prisoner exchange question Thursday while rival negotiators sought a new approach to the old problem of supervising a Korean armistice.

The Reds hinted they might consider a compromise on supervision, but the price looked high to Allied negotiators and was rejected.

However, United Nations and Communist staff officers scheduled a meeting in Panmunjom at 10 a. m. today (8 p. m. Thursday, EST) after working on a set of rules for policing the truce.

No Meeting Held

Regardless of the outcome of this single-shot staff officer effort to crack down, the regular joint subcommittee on truce supervision was due to meet three hours later, at 1 p. m. (11 p. m. Thursday, EST).

For the second consecutive day there was no meeting Thursday on the vital prisoner exchange question. There was no word when talks on prisoners would be resumed.

The United Nations command, grimly anxious to recover every possible man from Red prison camps, searched long and hard for discrepancies on the list of 11,559 U. N. captives submitted by the communists Tuesday. The Communists said the list was a complete roster of all prisoners held through the end of November, but the U. N. command was skeptical, for this was only about one-tenth of the total missing.

On the list were 3,198 Americans and only 7,142 South Koreans.

Communist propagandist Alan Winnington, who frequently reflects official Red views, alleged the U. S. had "rigged phony figures" of missing by the "simple device of leaving corpses on the battlefield and listing them as missing."

At the same time the Allies were re-listing in North Korean and Chinese the names of 132,000 Red prisoners held in Allied camps.

Staff Officers Meet

In an unprecedented move Thursday, the U. N. command suggested handing the vital policing job to staff officers. It was hoped that such lower level talks would succeed where Allied Communist generals had failed.

The Reds quickly accepted the offer. It was made as the subdelegates wound up another angry-toned and unproductive session Thursday.

The U. N. move to drop the armistice problem in the laps of two colonels — Don O. Darrow of the air force and North Korean Col. Chang Chun — stirred speculation that some compromising might be in sight. But there was no official confirmation of this.

The Communists dropped a hint Thursday they "might consider" swapping concessions to the U. N. on rotation and re-stocking equipment in return for an Allied withdrawal from three other U. N. demands.

An official release from the U. N. advance headquarters said the Reds wanted the Allies to accept:

1. Red demands to construct and repair airfields.

2. Inspections by neutral teams

Villagers Attend Dance To Honor Friend Despite Storm

WEST MINOT, Me., Dec. 20 (AP) — Over a hundred villagers braved a raging snowstorm to dance farewell to Jerry in the Grange Hall here tonight.

It was the "100th birthday dance" and the last light-hearted tribute to the jovial cheesemaker who died 26 years ago.

A small town man with a big heart for his neighbors, Jerry — Jairue Hilborn — willed that a dance be held in his memory until his 100th birthday.

His smiling, white haired widow, Mrs. Bertha Hilborn, 78, was on hand to greet the dancers and see that Jerry's last wishes were observed.

A moment of silence between the gay square dances was all he asked in return.

As the merrymakers whirled through the dance there was talk of the villagers continuing the annual frolic at their own expense in return for Jerry's generosity.

"Jerry has entertained us for 26 years, let's do the same for him," was the way Grocer Thomas Slattery described the general feeling.

Slattery has attended every dance since the first, when he was a lad of 13. He recalls how Jerry loved children.

"Jerry could always be counted upon to pull an all-day sucker out of his jacket pocket," Slattery said.

Tonight Slattery danced Jerry's favorite dance, "The Haymaker's Jig," with Jerry's spry widow.

Villagers recall that Jerry had the first gramophone. Oldsters tell how he carried it to the steps of the general store and played tunes for the passers by.

Neighbors also relate how on a fine summer day Jerry would turn the key in the door of his cheese shop and take a rolicking troop of youngsters on a train ride to the seashore.

South European Air Arm Begins To Flex Muscles

By JAMES E. PARLATORE

ROME—(AP)—The air arm in the defense of the Southern European area is beginning to flex its muscles.

The strength comes from the knowledge, experience, resources of its American, Italian, English and French personnel working together for a common benefit.

Established in Florence, Italy, early in September, the headquarters for Allied Air Forces Southern Europe, now is operating "smoothly and on schedule," according to its commander, Maj. Gen. David M. Schlatter.

Several minor problems arising from the difference in background, training and language of the civilian and military personnel staffing the headquarters, rapidly are being solved.

Although a large part of the work can be carried on only through interpreters, language classes have been started to make for a more harmonious relationship and better understanding.

The new addition to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's NATO forces was begun with a handful of U. S. Air Force and Italian air force officers and airmen.

The headquarters is directly responsible to Adm. Robert B. Carney, commander in chief of Allied Forces Southern Europe, with headquarters at Naples.

"We have no precedent to go by," Gen. Schlatter said. "We are helping form an Allied military organization during a time of peace. That is our goal and we will accomplish it."

The general said that underlying his mission is the real purpose of NATO forces, which is simply the realization that in the world today free nations must be strong and must remain strong if they are to resist aggression or aggressive political pressure.

Gen. Schlatter was transferred to Italy in August, 1951, to assume command of AAFSE. A pilot since 1924, he was deputy commanding general of the U. S. Strategic Air Force in Europe during 1945.

Deputy commander to the general is Air Division Gen. Sergio Lalatta, one of Italy's top airmen. He has been a pilot since 1930.

Publisher's Will Helps Home-Makers

WHEELING, W. Va.—(AP)—A philanthropist's generosity may make a dream come true for some families who've wanted a home of their own but couldn't afford it.

Goerge A. Laughlin's will is the answer. It make it possible for families to borrow money to buy a home, without having to pay interest.

The former industrialist and newspaper publisher left a half million dollars worth of securities, which yield some $20,000 a year in interest.

Laughlin died 15 years ago. His will provided the interest would be used for home loans when his wife died. Mrs. Laughlin, who had been using the money for a livelihood, died recently. So now the interest will be available to any "sober" man who has a job and three or more children for use in building a $5,000 to $10,000 home.

The $2 wage hike is retroactive to March 31, 1951 and will amount to about $80 for each of the 70 union members affected. The wage hike approval was requested jointly by the Retail Clerks and by Local 322 Meat Cutters Union, AFL.

Stutzman said the American Stores has promised to have the checks ready for Christmas.

Many officials were swept out of office in city elections in November.

The result sindicated dissatisfaction on the part of voters.

Dissatisfaction of a similar sort has brought about reforms in the system that provides fees for public office holders.

But an Associated Press survey shows moves for a change require leadership by legislators, newspapers or organizations of citizens.

Someone, or some group, has to blow the whistle.

For example:

A Senate investigating committee in Texas made a report in 1933. It contained what may well be a classic example of the use, of misuse, of the fee system.

"In a number of counties the fee system has caused a multiplicity of trials and sentences," the committee said.

It cited the interrelated cases of three men who were convicted, among other things, of robbery, burglary and theft in three different counties. It added:

"In all, these three companion defendants were convicted in 134 cases in three counties, and the state treasurer paid the officials who participated in their trials sums aggregating $6,322.95."

The committee figured such defendants could be tried once under an habitual criminal statute and put away for life at considerable less cost to the state.

An amendment to the Texas constitution was adopted in 1935. It limited the fee system to counties of less than 20,000 population. A 1948 amendment made a further cut in the number of fee-paid officers by putting all constables, sheriffs and sheriff's deputies on a salary.

The Charleston, W. Va., AP bureau provides his account of an attack on sheriffs' fees in West Virginia:

"The fee system for sheriffs was abolished by the 1947 Legislature. The Charleston Gazette spearheaded a campaign which enlisted the support of other newspapers. It was hailed as a victory for the state press.

"Under the system, sheriffs were paid a salary (they also function as treasurers of the counties) but their principal source of income was from fees for feeding county jail prisoners committed to their care.

"They were allowed a fixed sum as feeding costs, then allowed to pocket the excess after meeting actual charges. It was charged during the bitter 1947 legislative fight that sheriffs of the more populous counties made vast sums from this practice."

The Iowa Bar Association has a continuing campaign to get rid of justices of the peace. The Des Moines AP bureau reports:

"The association tried it at previous legislative sessions without success. It will try again in 1953.

"The association is concerned not so much with the fee system as with the fact that most JPs know so little about law. Its plan is to set up a modernized magistrate system with the same jurisdiction as justice courts but requiring the magistrates to be lawyers and to be paid a straight salary."

Public health groups in Iowa made a futile effort to revamp the coroner system.

The coroner has been under criticism elsewhere on grounds that he can take office without any scientific qualifications — without necessarily knowing cyanide from sugar.

His job — investigating deaths which occur under violent or suspicious circumstances—has been taken over by medical examiners who are physicians in five states and New York City.

Foes of the fee system have used varying methods but none, very probably, more extraordinary than those detailed in this report from the Tallahassee, Fla., AP bureau:

"In Leon county (Tallahassee) the activities of justices of the peace and constables became so unpopular that the county commission in 1940 cut the number of JP districts down to the two required by the constitution.

"Then candidates ran for the two JP posiitons and the two constables' jobs on the firm promise to do nothing if elected.

Ever Upward

The usual perliminaries are over—the helter-skelter rush to make sure no one is forgotten in the exchange of gifts the preparations in households for family gatherings, the planning to make time and money square with the crowded schedule.

But these are only the trappings of Christmas, like the tinsel on the tree, not the inward spirit which is one with the flash of the Star of Bethlehem.

This birthday of Christ is being celebrated against the somber background of a powerful world challenge to the Christian ethic. Men of vast ambitions have organized populous nations into war machines. They have designedly undermined the morality of their people, purposing to substitute the worship of the state for that of God. The aim of the despots is to make Christianity unpreachable and forgotten.

"My kingdom is not of this world," said Jesus. He also insisted that while giving Caesar his just dues, men must continue in the service of God. So men have concluded that they must fight the godless, horrible as war is and barren as it has been of visible good results in this half century.

They must fight for the freedoms which have become part of life itself, for the right to decorate Christmas trees in their own homes, for the joy that comes from the gleaming eyes of children, for the right to help the helpless, to love mercy, to nurture the spirit on good deeds and add to the content of civilization.

If thoughts of the future make faces tense and eyes careworn, it isn't the first time in human history that men had to surrender peace of mind for the greater goal of an eventually safe environment.

And the course of man has been ever upward.

Snafuing Parcel Post

Accompanying higher postage rates for post cards, etc., effective January 1, will be new regulations on parcel post. Beginning on that date packages will be limited in size to 72 inches in length and girth combined—the sum of the length of the parcel and the measurement around the parcel—and to 40 pounds in weight if for delivery in a local zone.

Under the old regulations the limit on weight has been 70 pounds, and on size 100 inches of the length and girth combined.

So far everything seems clear. But now is where the snafuers' work becomes evident.

The new regulations limiting weight to 40 pounds and size to 72 inches, length and girth combined, will not apply if the parcel is sent from a second, third or fourth class post office to a first class post office, or from one second, third or fourth class post office or rural route, to another post office or rural route of the same classification.

The new reduced weight limit and size limits will apply only to parcel post between first class post offices. If things seem to have become un-snafued, more or less, read on.

While post office regulations state that no one will be permitted to mail a parcel from or to a post office other than first class with the purpose of evading the new limitations, such parcels "may be accepted at such offices even though the return addresses may be those of patrons of first class post offices."

Think you understand it now? Well, continue reading.

In another section of the new regulationss it is stated that postmasters of second, third and fourth class post offices "shall not accept parcels bearing the return card of patrons of first class post offices mailed in violation of the" new limitations on size and weight "when there is good reason to believe such shipments originated in and were prepared for mailing in a community served by a first class post office."

Catch? Well, why not just drop the whole thing and send it by express.

Money No Object

As several recent hearings have disclosed, there is good basis for the recommendation by the National Planning Association that an independent agency be created to assure the proper use of money and manpower by the Department of Defense.

The need for the continuing inquiry thus proposed was strikingly pointed up at the investigation of procurement policies. Here the chief counsel of the Ordnance Department testified he had discovered more than 5,000 cases of identical bids for Army supplies. Here also it was revealed, among other things, that enough of certain jeep parts to last 104 years had been bought. Also, that the Army had on hand 921,000 front axle gaskets, though only 8,800 of them were used in the three years between 1946 and 1949. That there was on hand a 74-year supply of covers for the steering column oil hole.

Obviously, there is no excuse for this sort of reckless spending. Extravagance by any government department not only increases the taxes paid by every citizen but weakens the nation's economy.

Yes, It Can Be Shocking

Already the Senate's Preparedness Committee can see the results from a recent survey it made of naval ships and bases and Marine bases. The report called attention to "shocking waste" of men, money and materials. That hit the Navy in a spot always tender.

Historically in peacetime that service always fumed and fretted at the tendency of Congress to clamp down on funds for operating ships. Many an old-line naval officer has complained bitterly of not having enough fuel or ammunition for training exercises. Many a ship and station went to an extreme in economies to avoid any chance of criticism.

In war there are often considerations more important than economy as an end in itself. Fuel and ammunition, for example, may often be expended very properly without any concern for the taxpayer. Getting there fast and hitting hard are what count.

Therein lies the danger. It is easy for officers and men to feel that because supplies are freely expendable, everything else is, too.

The Navy's reaction to the committee report is a plan to rate officers on cost consciousness. What every skipper and his engineer officer must be conscious of, can and should be a part of the indoctrination of every young officer. Even in battle there is a big difference between expenditure and waste.

It is charged that coffee is being used for floor sweep at military facilities. Does this clear up the mystery of why some restaurants serve coffee which tastes like it had been made from floor sweep?

How To Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases.

Discharging Ears

Sulfonamides, penicillin, and all of the other wonder drugs have been a boon to the ears. They have played a role in preventing infections from reaching the hearing apparatus and helped immeasurably in treating disease should it develop. In addition, mastoid infections are becoming so rare that many hospitals have gone years without having a single admission for this condition.

These innovations also have had an effect upon chronic ear disturbances. Prior to 1935 most physicians had any number of patients complaining of a discharging ear. Many told a story similar to that of Roger, who was having difficulty along this line. His history dates back to the fall of 1929 when he was 14 years old. A nasty head cold spread to his left ear and for several hours he suffered from throbbing pain. His mother tried to ease it by inserting several drops of warm sweet oil. Relief came but not because of the oil; the drum broke, thus permitting the escape of pus that had been pent up in the middle ear.

The young man then felt well enough to return to school and the physician was not consulted until it became obvious that drainage was not subsiding. Since that time the ear closes and reopens at intervals, particularly when he develops a cold. The wonder drugs came to his rescue finally but Roger is sure that the repeated attacks left him with a mild form of deafness. So many are left with hearing defects that ear infections are listed as one of the principal causes of deafness. It is here that prevention enters the picture and in the future, this cause may drop from the No. 1 to the last position on the list of origins of deafness.

Roger was fortunate in another way. The wonder drugs are helpful but do not cure all cases. In some instances, surgery is needed, especially when there is mastoid involvement. In others the ear continues to drain because the disorder is kept alive by a co-existing infection in the sinuses. Apparently bacteria reach the hearing apparatus via the Eustachian tube; mucus is forced up this passageway by coughing or sneezing. So long as this focus remains the ear infection smolders. Treating the sinus ultimately pays dividends by improving local ear conditions. Ear specialists also utilize all of the other tricks of the trade. The ear is kept meticulously clean and local antiseptics are instilled to reduce the concentration of bacteria. There are many products along this line varying from powders to strong solutions.

Estimates vary on the number of individuals in this country suffering from chronic discharging ear. Many are not handicapped except for keeping the ear clean. Others are bothered by diminished hearing, dizziness, headache, or the disagreeable odor associated with the condition. Some find it difficult to obtain life insurance and young men may be rejected for military duty. Others cannot obtain employment because they are deemed an added risk. It is a difficult problem to solve but expert care offers the best chance of recovery.

NEUROTIC

H. T. writes: When you use the word neurotic in your column just what kind of a person do you mean?

REPLY

One who looks and acts like anyone else but his illnesses usually are of emotional origin. In other words, his reactions to stress and strain differ from those of more phlegmatic individuals.

VITAMIN STORAGE

G. S. writes: Does the body retain or store up excess vitamins?

REPLY

The amount of storage varies with the vitamin. Once the body is saturated the excess is eliminated unless the amount administered is so large it taxes the excretory mechanism. Vitamins A and D are in the latter category and hypervitaminosis has been noted.

ALLERGY VS. COLDS

B. Y. writes: Are there any types of colds that are not catching?

REPLY

This depends upon the definition of a cold. If allergy is included we can safely say that colds of this origin are not contagious.

BREAST FEEDING

Mrs. H. writes: I can never nurse my infants after the first few days but would like to try again when my next baby is born. Is there any way that the milk supply can be promoted?

REPLY

This project begins with the proper care of the breasts before the baby is born to prevent fissures and inflammation. Afterward, a trial of at least a week is in order because there is nothing as good as nursing to stimulate the milk supply.

SEES, BLACK

H. Y. writes: What causes me to see black for a few seconds after getting up from a bed or a chair?

REPLY

A sudden drop in blood pressure or changes in circulation are possibilities. Consult your physician and have him test the pulse and blood pressure before and after standing.

Treasury Secretary Snyder Has Managed To Duck Criticism; Unfair Tax System Leads To Communism; Snyder Should Have Awakened Two Years Ago

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Today Drew Pearson tells the story of tax-collecting complacency in the treasury, in his series on how to pull wires and not pay taxes.)

WASHINGTON — It is either a political miracle or a tribute to his mousey personality that the man in charge of the bureau where most of the tax scandals have occurred, Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, so far has managed to duck any large volume of criticism.

His cabinet colleague, Attorney General McGrath, has been the target for far more criticism—though less tax finagling has occurred in his Justice Department.

In contrast, John Snyder is much closer to the tax picture, much closer to President Truman, and has held office much longer. However, he has traveled on his official routine blissfully ignorant—or else indifferent—to the fact that more crookedness was occurring in his department than at any time since the days of President U. S. Grant—perhaps more than at any time in history.

Personally Mr. Snyder is an entirely honest man. The idea that dishonesty would occur near him has and does shock him. Yet he does not seem to realize that part of honestly is not complacence but vigilance.

Secretary Snyder has been tenacious about the necessity of paying higher taxes in order to pay for our huge arms program. But he has not realized how he has knocked the slats out of his own tax program by failing to collect taxes on an honest basis. For, when people see tax-finagling at the top, tax-finagling is certain to spread at the bottom.

Grave Embarrassment

Mr. Synder's failure may be due in part to a personal weakness, which, according to some people, isn't kosher to mention. However, when a railroad engineer drinks on the job he is fired, when a motorist drinks while driving he is jailed—especially if there has been a smash-up. Therefore, when one of the 10 top members of government, charged with collecting the nation's taxes with honesty and equality, drinks on the job, the public is entitled to know it.

For with Snyder at the wheel there has been a distastrous smash-up in our tax-collecting system.

Unfortunately, Secretary Snyder's periodic drinking not only has caused moments of embarrassment before the governors of the World Bank and at the French Embassy, but sometimes has caused him to remain in bed away from his work for periods of time.

It happens that collecting taxes is a tough, day-and-night job, requiring vigilance and great strength of character almost 24 hours a day. It requires the eagle-eyed watchfulness that Henry Morgenthau became famous for. And Secretary Snyder, with all his personal honesty and all his good intentions regarding higher taxes, simply has not been alert. In fact, he has been a dismal failure.

Encouraging Communism

Both in St. Louis where he was a bank cashier, and in Washington, Secretary Snyder has been a political conservative. He would be horrified at the idea that he had done anything to encourage Communism. Yet history will probably show that, more than any other cabinet officer, he has helped plant what could become a basic cause for Communism. For Snyder's unfair, unequal tax-collecting system is wiping out the middle-class of Americans, the normal bulwark against Communism.

What Secretary Snyder may not realize is that, in Europe, the countries with the unequal tax systems are those showing the greatest leanings toward Communism. Outside of Russia, the two countries with the greatest Communist populations—about one-third each—are France and Italy. And in both countries the tax systems are notoriously unfair, unequal and dishonest. In both countries, the wealthy pay few taxes, the working class bear the chief burden.

What Secretary Snyder also may not realize is the effect on the American workingman and the white-collar worker who read about graft in our tax-collecting system today.

He sees his own income taxes taken out in withholding taxes, giving him no opportunity to cheat the government even if he wanted to. In contrast he reads in the newspapers that millions of dollars in tax money are not being paid by those who can afford to hire expensive lawyers and take key officials on junkets in private airplanes. This is what has encouraged Communism in Europe, and, come a depression, it will encourage Communism here.

Serene Mr. Snyder

The tragedy is that Secretary Snyder, complacent as he sometimes is, could have awakened to what was going on in his own department two years ago. All he had to do was read the newspapers.

In column after column, beginning exactly two years ago this month, I listed the amazing tax-fixes that were going on right under Snyder's nose — the big Guaranty Finance gambling case in Los Angeles (Dec. 16, '49); The Gionotti and Georgetti cases at San Francisco (Jan. 16, '50); The bribing of five revenue agents in New York (Jan. 30, '50); The fixing of the Ripps-Mitchell Case in Mobile (Dec. 16, '49). I even named some of the revenue agents and told in detail how they appeared to be fixing the cases. Yet Secretary Snyder sat serene.

He could not have helped knowing that a racket was developing right under his nose and that a new class of black-market millionaires was growing up—all through tax evasion. He must have known, if he read the papers, that around 1,400 tax cases at one time were stalled in the Justice Department and 1,200 in the Treasury; that his Internal Revenue Bureau was going after the little taxpayers and the big taxpayers were getting off almost free.

The big boys were getting off because they had developed the technique of hiring tax lawyers and buying influence. The tax lawyers ask for conference after conference, haggle with government attorneys, wear out their patience, finally get a civil fraud penalty settlement, thereby saving their clients from going to jail.

Thousands of cases have been settled that way. Meanwhile, the boy who swipes a second-hand jalopy and takes it across a state line gets slapped into prison. His crime was only a spur-of-the moment prank, not a deliberate, carefully planned steal. But he doesn't know how to pull wires and influence officials.

Those are some of the inequities in our tax-collecting system which developed under the nose of the Secretary of the Treasurer and the Attorney General—inequities which will be cited chapter and verse in tomorrow's column.

Truman's Scandals

By MARK SULLIVAN

Republicans say that scandals associated with the Truman administration will be a factor in the Presidential campaign next year, that it will defeat Mr. Truman if he is the Democratic candidate and in any event defeat the party. History does not bear this out. There was scandal in the first term of President Grant but this did not prevent his election to a second term. There was scandal during the Republican Administration of President Harding, but revelation of it after his death in office did not prevent Republican victory in the two succeeding elections. It would be difficult to find in our political history a case in which scandal acounted for defeat of a party in power. Scandal may contribute to defeat but it is rarely what political-minded William Jennings Bryan shrewdly called "the paramount issue."

What Republicans have in mind probably starts with a conclusion—that the Democrats will be defeated and that a large part of the cause of defeat will be the record of President Truman. The record, as Republicans see it, gives an important place to the current scandals; and to the scandals themselves as a detriment to Mr. Truman, many are likely to add the attitude Mr. Truman has taken about them. This was apparent at a press conference Mr. Truman held at a time when public concern about the current scandals was acute.

Mr. Truman's manner was belligerent. He declared that he and the Executive department had taken action on scandals whenever they arose and that he would continue to do this. He said the scandals would be cleaned up before the election and would not figure in the campaign. He took credit to himself and the Executive department for, ferreting out scandal and taking action about it; denied credit to investigating committees of Congress, said that Congress came in afterward and got the headlines.

Campaign Issue

Mr. Truman's attitude about the current scandals will undoubtedly be distasteful to many. The scandals as such may figure in the campaign next year. But to think of them as the determining factor in the election would be to underrate one of the great tragedies in history. When Mr. Truman took office in April, 1945, the country was on the eve of victory over Germany and Japan, the victory was completed during the fifth month of his administration, the second world war had been won. In the seventh year of Mr. Truman's administration, and at the beginning of a Presidential campaign year, the country is confronted by the menace of a third world war. Only by studied under-statement are we justified in assuming that what we are already involved in is not war.

Mr. Truman must be conscious of this record, yet a recent speech by him suggests wonder whether he thinks he can escape it. In his speech he said that foreign policy should not be an issue in the coming campaign, that he would strive to prevent it from being an issue and that if the Republicans make it an issue "we can meet this."

If President Truman next year tries to escape the record of his administration's foreign policy, he is not likely to be accommodated either by voters next year or by history. A single event during the Truman administration, the fall of China to Russian Communism, is likely to have a place in hitsory comparable to the Mongol invasion of Europe to the gates of Vienna some five centuries ago.

Must Face Foreign Policy

When Mr. Truman says that he will strive to prevent foreign policy from being an issue next year and defies the Republicans to make it an issue, he may have in mind a wish that foreign policy be non-partisan in the coming Presidential campaign as it has been in past ones. But non-partisanship was easier in the campaigns of 1940, 1944 and 1948. Conceivably leaders of both parties and both party organizations could try to keep foreign policy out of the campaign.

But voters who could take foreign policy as a matter of course during those campaigns know now that in this field tragic disaster to the United Sates has occurred. An attempt by leaders and organizations of the two parties to practice restraint and achieve silence could readily result in increased concern on the part of voters. Besides, the Repulbicans can hardly fail to bear in mind that they are the opposition party and be aware of the function of the opposition party in a two-party system.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENC

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—Something seems to be wrong inside the Department of State in the handling of loyalty and security cases.

Explanation was obtained today from an authoritative source of a little-noticed paragraph in the U. S. Loyalty Review Board's report on the case of John S. Service, recently dismissed from the Department of State because of reasonable doubts as to his loyalty to the United States government.

The paragraph in question reveals that, despite the presence of an FBI report and despite the fact that copies of 40 documents written by Service for the State Department were discovered through an FBI raid on the offices of suspected Communist editors of "Amerasia," no hearing was held, and yet Service was cleared.

The text of the paragraph reads as follows:

"The undersigned panel of the Loyalty Review Board first took up this case (case of John Stewart Service) on post-audit, and on March 3, 1950, recommended that it be remanded to the Loyalty Security Board of the State Department for a hearing on charges. Subsequently a hearing was held, and the State Department board reaffirmed its decision favorable to the employee. . ."

Cleared Six Times

What is most surprising is that Service was cleared by the State Department board without a hearing some time between March 1947, when the President's loyalty program was instituted, and March 1950. No charges were made and no interrogatory presented to him. Yet the State Department is known to have "cleared" Service six times in all — the last time July 31, 1951.

The State Department has given no explanation of its failure to prefer charges against Service until pressed to do so by the national board—the Loyalty Review Board. In the formal report issued last week by the State Department occurs the following implied admission that it had not required Service to appear at a hearing before:

"The case of John Stewart Service, on which the Loyalty Security Board of the Department of State had reported a favorable determination based on the information then available, was remanded because the reviewing panel had concluded that the record had not been fully developed, and that a hearing should be held on charges.

"In accordance with this recommendation charges were preferred against Mr. Service and a hearin has been held."

Deep Mystery

Just why from June 6, 1945—whe Service was arrested along wit other persons in the "Amerasia case—until March 1950 no charge were preferred against him and n hearing was held inside the Stat Department so that he could b formally interrogated on the dat supplied by the FBI, is a myster which has not been explained. No is there any explanation as to wh after five years "the record had no been fully developed" and no hearing held to develop that record.

The episode casts suspicion on th manner in which loyalty cases hav been handled in the Department o State. Were it not for the "post-audit" procedure set up to check th departmental boards, things of thi kind could escape attention altogether. The President's instruction specifically require that interrogatories should be presented to anyone about whom there has been collected any derogatory informatio concerning loyalty.

Incidentally, some misleadin statements have appeared in th press in the last few days purporting to say that the Loyalty Review Board has ordered a "reopening o the loyalty cases of 565 federa employees" and that these case were to be checked "in the ligh of the government's new policy tha a 'reasonable doubt' is sufficient t bar employment."

The foregoing was contained in press release on December 17 b the U. S. Civil Service Commissio which said "announcement of th order was made today."

Cases Are Reduced

Now the truth is that the President's order was issued on May last, changing the wording abou "reasonable doubt" back to what i was under President Roosevelt during World War II. Also, last May the Loyalty Review Board announced that it estimated that 846 case would be definitely reopened an told the departmental agencies t take another look at about 8,00 cases in which the FBI had carrie on full field investigations.

The policy is not new nor is the procedure. All that is new is that the Loyalty Review Board has now cut the number of cases to be "reopened" from 846 down to 565 and the number to be scrutinized again from 8,889 down to 574. The latter group are not necessarily to be formally reopened.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The "Unwritten Law"

In the tradition of all races, a man fought for his home. The national state is comparatively new in human history; but the home goes back to the cave. A father, a mother and their children — that made a home.

In our sophisticated civilization, in which eternal values seem to be discarded, the home appears to have become a place to sleep and to run away from in an automobile. Even the noblest of household activities, the family dinner, with its chit-chat and loving admonition — even such a noble institution is giving away to the intrusion of television, to the noise and excitement of murder stories and westerns.

I saw an advertisement for a television tray, so that the family could dine in darkness, each person solitary, while they watched some morbid picture of the eternal triangle. What can children gain from such family life? Do they know their parents?

I was at Notre Dame in an atmosphere of scholastic peace when I read that Walter Wanger had shot a man. It was not possible for me to believe that this quiet, scholarly man, esthetic in his tastes, imaginative and idealistic, would take the law into his own hands.

Yet, I could understand him when he said that nobody was going to break up his home. Of course, now it is broken and perhaps irrevocably, but there is an unwritten law among men that they will fight for their honor and dignity and for their sense of decency. Maybe the duel was not as fantastic an institution as we in this age suppose.

There are things that try men's souls — if they still have souls.

It would seem to me wrong to try cases in newspapers; the court is the place for evidence, and lawyers, not journalists, should do the pleading. Yet, were it not for the masterly "j'accuse!" of Emile Zola and the journalism of Clemenceau, Alfred Dreyfus would have languished unjustly on Devil's Island to his death. The courts deal with the law; the press, with justice.

This case, no matter how it may be handled by lawyers, will, in the public mind, become a dramatic discussion of the home. Ample space is given constantly to biological love, as though it were the noblest of human activities and virtues. "Love," as it is called, has become the excuse, the alibi, for every anti-social habit. All that needs to be said is that "he loves her" — as though that explained all.

But strong nations use other terms — father, mother, son, daughter, home, virtue, piety, the moral law. Some laugh, in these sophisticated days, at the Methodists and Baptists, Presbyterians and other sects, the strong, puritanical elements in our population. But these religious families built a great nation and if we have liberty and a high standard of living, it is because they made it possible by hard work and strict morality. The "Ten Commandments" have served America more than all the laws on the statute books of all the states.

And we have not improved our society since divorce, broken homes, teen-agers without parental guidance, competition among separated parents for the good-will of their children, became a vogue. We have not done better since "honor thy father and thy mother" has been abandoned, and "thou shalt not commit adultery" has become corny.

So one man shot another over a woman. It is an old story. But in the crisis of our days, all forms of corruption must be analyzed and focussed in the perspective of our national illness. We need a clinical analysis of what has made us ill. We need an understanding of the departures from our traditional civilization which are plaguing us. Something is deadly wrong with us.

And what is most wrong is that the home — the family — is weakening. Why are we so smart that we outsmart ourselves and bring such unhappiness upon ourselves? We destroy what is good in our lives and treasure the empty, the ephemeral, the meaningless.

And when middle age comes and life is empty and there are only regrets, is nothing left for man but to shoot man, or for pages to be filled with vulgarities that leave children at the mercy of every mockery? What do they have — marijuana, ehroin, no-virgin clubs! Is that to be America?

Great nations fall not because they are conquered. They fall because they grow rotten from within. What is overthrown is an empty shell that still looks solid but is really hollow.

Ever Upward

The usual perliminaries are over—the helter-skelter rush to make sure no one is forgotten in the exchange of gifts the preparations in households for family gatherings, the planning to make time and money square with the crowded schedule.

But these are only the trappings of Christmas, like the tinsel on the tree, not the inward spirit which is one with the flash of the Star of Bethlehem.

This birthday of Christ is being celebrated against the somber background of a powerful world challenge to the Christian ethic. Men of vast ambitions have organized populous nations into war machines. They have designedly undermined the morality of their people, purposing to substitute the worship of the state for that of God. The aim of the despots is to make Christianity unpreachable and forgotten.

"My kingdom is not of this world," said Jesus. He also insisted that while giving Caesar his just dues, men must continue in the service of God. So men have concluded that they must fight the godless, horrible as war is and barren as it has been of visible good results in this half century.

They must fight for the freedoms which have become part of life itself, for the right to decorate Christmas trees in their own homes, for the joy that comes from the gleaming eyes of children, for the right to help the helpless, to love mercy, to nurture the spirit on good deeds and add to the content of civilization.

If thoughts of the future make faces tense and eyes careworn, it isn't the first time in human history that men had to surrender peace of mind for the greater goal of an eventually safe environment.

And the course of man has been ever upward.

Snafuing Parcel Post

Accompanying higher postage rates for post cards, etc., effective January 1, will be new regulations on parcel post. Beginning on that date packages will be limited in size to 72 inches in length and girth combined—the sum of the length of the parcel and the measurement around the parcel—and to 40 pounds in weight if for delivery in a local zone.

Under the old regulations the limit on weight has been 70 pounds, and on size 100 inches of the length and girth combined.

So far everything seems clear. But now is where the snafuers' work becomes evident.

The new regulations limiting weight to 40 pounds and size to 72 inches, length and girth combined, will not apply if the parcel is sent from a second, third or fourth class post office to a first class post office, or from one second, third or fourth class post office or rural route, to another post office or rural route of the same classification.

The new reduced weight limit and size limits will apply only to parcel post between first class post offices. If things seem to have become un-snafued, more or less, read on.

While post office regulations state that no one will be permitted to mail a parcel from or to a post office other than first class with the purpose of evading the new limitations, such parcels "may be accepted at such offices even though the return addresses may be those of patrons of first class post offices."

Think you understand it now? Well, continue reading.

In another section of the new regulationss it is stated that postmasters of second, third and fourth class post offices "shall not accept parcels bearing the return card of patrons of first class post offices mailed in violation of the" new limitations on size and weight "when there is good reason to believe such shipments originated in and were prepared for mailing in a community served by a first class post office."

Catch? Well, why not just drop the whole thing and send it by express.

Money No Object

As several recent hearings have disclosed, there is good basis for the recommendation by the National Planning Association that an independent agency be created to assure the proper use of money and manpower by the Department of Defense.

The need for the continuing inquiry thus proposed was strikingly pointed up at the investigation of procurement policies. Here the chief counsel of the Ordnance Department testified he had discovered more than 5,000 cases of identical bids for Army supplies. Here also it was revealed, among other things, that enough of certain jeep parts to last 104 years had been bought. Also, that the Army had on hand 921,000 front axle gaskets, though only 8,800 of them were used in the three years between 1946 and 1949. That there was on hand a 74-year supply of covers for the steering column oil hole.

Obviously, there is no excuse for this sort of reckless spending. Extravagance by any government department not only increases the taxes paid by every citizen but weakens the nation's economy.

Yes, It Can Be Shocking

Already the Senate's Preparedness Committee can see the results from a recent survey it made of naval ships and bases and Marine bases. The report called attention to "shocking waste" of men, money and materials. That hit the Navy in a spot always tender.

Historically in peacetime that service always fumed and fretted at the tendency of Congress to clamp down on funds for operating ships. Many an old-line naval officer has complained bitterly of not having enough fuel or ammunition for training exercises. Many a ship and station went to an extreme in economies to avoid any chance of criticism.

In war there are often considerations more important than economy as an end in itself. Fuel and ammunition, for example, may often be expended very properly without any concern for the taxpayer. Getting there fast and hitting hard are what count.

Therein lies the danger. It is easy for officers and men to feel that because supplies are freely expendable, everything else is, too.

The Navy's reaction to the committee report is a plan to rate officers on cost consciousness. What every skipper and his engineer officer must be conscious of, can and should be a part of the indoctrination of every young officer. Even in battle there is a big difference between expenditure and waste.

How To Keep Well

Discharging Ears

Sulfonamides, penicillin, and all of the other wonder drugs have been a boon to the ears. They have played a role in preventing infections from reaching the hearing apparatus and helped immeasurably in treating disease should it develop. In addition, mastoid infections are becoming so rare that many hospitals have gone years without having a single admission for this condition.

These innovations also have had an effect upon chronic ear disturbances. Prior to 1935 most physicians had any number of patients complaining of a discharging ear. Many told a story similar to that of Roger, who was having difficulty along this line. His history dates back to the fall of 1929 when he was 14 years old. A nasty head cold spread to his left ear and for several hours he suffered from throbbing pain. His mother tried to ease it by inserting several drops of warm sweet oil. Relief came but not because of the oil; the drum broke, thus permitting the escape of pus that had been pent up in the middle ear.

The young man then felt well enough to return to school and the physician was not consulted until it became obvious that drainage was not subsiding. Since that time the ear closes and reopens at intervals, particularly when he develops a cold. The wonder drugs came to his rescue finally but Roger is sure that the repeated attacks left him with a mild form of deafness. So many are left with hearing defects that ear infections are listed as one of the principal causes of deafness. It is here that prevention enters the picture and in the future, this cause may drop from the No. 1 to the last position on the list of origins of deafness.

Roger was fortunate in another way. The wonder drugs are helpful but do not cure all cases. In some instances, surgery is needed, especially when there is mastoid involvement. In others the ear continues to drain because the disorder is kept alive by a co-existing infection in the sinuses. Apparently bacteria reach the hearing apparatus via the Eustachian tube; mucus is forced up this passageway by coughing or sneezing. So long as this focus remains the ear infection smolders. Treating the sinus ultimately pays dividends by improving local ear conditions. Ear specialists also utilize all of the other tricks of the trade. The ear is kept meticulously clean and local antiseptics are instilled to reduce the concentration of bacteria. There are many products along this line varying from powders to strong solutions.

Estimates vary on the number of individuals in this country suffering from chronic discharging ear. Many are not handicapped except for keeping the ear clean. Others are bothered by diminished hearing, dizziness, headache, or the disagreeable odor associated with the condition. Some find it difficult to obtain life insurance and young men may be rejected for military duty. Others cannot obtain employment because they are deemed an added risk. It is a difficult problem to solve but expert care offers the best chance of recovery.

One who looks and acts like anyone else but his illnesses usually are of emotional origin. In other words, his reactions to stress and strain differ from those of more phlegmatic individuals.

VITAMIN STORAGE

G. S. writes: Does the body retain or store up excess vitamins?

The amount of storage varies with the vitamin. Once the body is saturated the excess is eliminated unless the amount administered is so large it taxes the excretory mechanism. Vitamins A and D are in the latter category and hypervitaminosis has been noted.

This project begins with the proper care of the breasts before the baby is born to prevent fissures and inflammation. Afterward, a trial of at least a week is in order because there is nothing as good as nursing to stimulate the milk supply.

Treasury Secretary Snyder Has Managed To Duck Criticism; Unfair Tax System Leads To Communism; Snyder Should Have Awakened Two Years Ago

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Today Drew Pearson tells the story of tax-collecting complacency in the treasury, in his series on how to pull wires and not pay taxes.)

WASHINGTON — It is either a political miracle or a tribute to his mousey personality that the man in charge of the bureau where most of the tax scandals have occurred, Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, so far has managed to duck any large volume of criticism.

His cabinet colleague, Attorney General McGrath, has been the target for far more criticism—though less tax finagling has occurred in his Justice Department.

In contrast, John Snyder is much closer to the tax picture, much closer to President Truman, and has held office much longer. However, he has traveled on his official routine blissfully ignorant—or else indifferent—to the fact that more crookedness was occurring in his department than at any time since the days of President U. S. Grant—perhaps more than at any time in history.

Personally Mr. Snyder is an entirely honest man. The idea that dishonesty would occur near him has and does shock him. Yet he does not seem to realize that part of honestly is not complacence but vigilance.

Secretary Snyder has been tenacious about the necessity of paying higher taxes in order to pay for our huge arms program. But he has not realized how he has knocked the slats out of his own tax program by failing to collect taxes on an honest basis. For, when people see tax-finagling at the top, tax-finagling is certain to spread at the bottom.

Grave Embarrassment

Mr. Synder's failure may be due in part to a personal weakness, which, according to some people, isn't kosher to mention. However, when a railroad engineer drinks on the job he is fired, when a motorist drinks while driving he is jailed—especially if there has been a smash-up. Therefore, when one of the 10 top members of government, charged with collecting the nation's taxes with honesty and equality, drinks on the job, the public is entitled to know it.

For with Snyder at the wheel there has been a distastrous smash-up in our tax-collecting system.

Unfortunately, Secretary Snyder's periodic drinking not only has caused moments of embarrassment before the governors of the World Bank and at the French Embassy, but sometimes has caused him to remain in bed away from his work for periods of time.

It happens that collecting taxes is a tough, day-and-night job, requiring vigilance and great strength of character almost 24 hours a day. It requires the eagle-eyed watchfulness that Henry Morgenthau became famous for. And Secretary Snyder, with all his personal honesty and all his good intentions regarding higher taxes, simply has not been alert. In fact, he has been a dismal failure.

Encouraging Communism

Both in St. Louis where he was a bank cashier, and in Washington, Secretary Snyder has been a political conservative. He would be horrified at the idea that he had done anything to encourage Communism. Yet history will probably show that, more than any other cabinet officer, he has helped plant what could become a basic cause for Communism. For Snyder's unfair, unequal tax-collecting system is wiping out the middle-class of Americans, the normal bulwark against Communism.

What Secretary Snyder may not realize is that, in Europe, the countries with the unequal tax systems are those showing the greatest leanings toward Communism. Outside of Russia, the two countries with the greatest Communist populations—about one-third each—are France and Italy. And in both countries the tax systems are notoriously unfair, unequal and dishonest. In both countries, the wealthy pay few taxes, the working class bear the chief burden.

What Secretary Snyder also may not realize is the effect on the American workingman and the white-collar worker who read about graft in our tax-collecting system today.

He sees his own income taxes taken out in withholding taxes, giving him no opportunity to cheat the government even if he wanted to. In contrast he reads in the newspapers that millions of dollars in tax money are not being paid by those who can afford to hire expensive lawyers and take key officials on junkets in private airplanes. This is what has encouraged Communism in Europe, and, come a depression, it will encourage Communism here.

Serene Mr. Snyder

The tragedy is that Secretary Snyder, complacent as he sometimes is, could have awakened to what was going on in his own department two years ago. All he had to do was read the newspapers.

In column after column, beginning exactly two years ago this month, I listed the amazing tax-fixes that were going on right under Snyder's nose — the big Guaranty Finance gambling case in Los Angeles (Dec. 16, '49); The Gionotti and Georgetti cases at San Francisco (Jan. 16, '50); The bribing of five revenue agents in New York (Jan. 30, '50); The fixing of the Ripps-Mitchell Case in Mobile (Dec. 16, '49). I even named some of the revenue agents and told in detail how they appeared to be fixing the cases. Yet Secretary Snyder sat serene.

He could not have helped knowing that a racket was developing right under his nose and that a new class of black-market millionaires was growing up—all through tax evasion. He must have known, if he read the papers, that around 1,400 tax cases at one time were stalled in the Justice Department and 1,200 in the Treasury; that his Internal Revenue Bureau was going after the little taxpayers and the big taxpayers were getting off almost free.

The big boys were getting off because they had developed the technique of hiring tax lawyers and buying influence. The tax lawyers ask for conference after conference, haggle with government attorneys, wear out their patience, finally get a civil fraud penalty settlement, thereby saving their clients from going to jail.

Thousands of cases have been settled that way. Meanwhile, the boy who swipes a second-hand jalopy and takes it across a state line gets slapped into prison. His crime was only a spur-of-the moment prank, not a deliberate, carefully planned steal. But he doesn't know how to pull wires and influence officials.

Those are some of the inequities in our tax-collecting system which developed under the nose of the Secretary of the Treasurer and the Attorney General—inequities which will be cited chapter and verse in tomorrow's column.

Truman's Scandals

By MARK SULLIVAN

Republicans say that scandals associated with the Truman administration will be a factor in the Presidential campaign next year, that it will defeat Mr. Truman if he is the Democratic candidate and in any event defeat the party. History does not bear this out. There was scandal in the first term of President Grant but this did not prevent his election to a second term. There was scandal during the Republican Administration of President Harding, but revelation of it after his death in office did not prevent Republican victory in the two succeeding elections. It would be difficult to find in our political history a case in which scandal acounted for defeat of a party in power. Scandal may contribute to defeat but it is rarely what political-minded William Jennings Bryan shrewdly called "the paramount issue."

What Republicans have in mind probably starts with a conclusion—that the Democrats will be defeated and that a large part of the cause of defeat will be the record of President Truman. The record, as Republicans see it, gives an important place to the current scandals; and to the scandals themselves as a detriment to Mr. Truman, many are likely to add the attitude Mr. Truman has taken about them. This was apparent at a press conference Mr. Truman held at a time when public concern about the current scandals was acute.

Mr. Truman's manner was belligerent. He declared that he and the Executive department had taken action on scandals whenever they arose and that he would continue to do this. He said the scandals would be cleaned up before the election and would not figure in the campaign. He took credit to himself and the Executive department for ferreting out scandal and taking action about it; denied credit to investigating committees of Congress, said that Congress came in afterward and got the headlines.

Campaign Issue

Mr. Truman's attitude about the current scandals will undoubtedly be distasteful to many. The scandals as such may figure in the campaign next year. But to think of them as the determining factor in the election would be to underrate one of the great tragedies in history. When Mr. Truman took office in April, 1945, the country was on the eve of victory over Germany and Japan, the victory was completed during the fifth month of his administration, the second world war had been won. In the seventh year of Mr. Truman's administration, and at the beginning of a Presidential campaign year, the country is confronted by the menace of a third world war. Only by studied under-statement are we justified in assuming that what we are already involved in is not war.

Mr. Truman must be conscious of this record, yet a recent speech by him suggests wonder whether he thinks he can escape it. In his speech he said that foreign policy should not be an issue in the coming campaign, that he would strive to prevent it from being an issue and that if the Republicans make it an issue "we can meet this."

If President Truman next year tries to escape the record of his administration's foreign policy, he is not likely to be accommodated either by voters next year or by history. A single event during the Truman administration, the fall of China to Russian Communism, is likely to have a place in hitsory comparable to the Mongol invasion of Europe to the gates of Vienna some five centuries ago.

Must Face Foreign Policy

When Mr. Truman says that he will strive to prevent foreign policy from being an issue next year and defies the Republicans to make it an issue, he may have in mind a wish that foreign policy be non-partisan in the coming Presidential campaign as it has been in past ones. But non-partisanship was easier in the campaigns of 1940, 1944 and 1948. Conceivably leaders of both parties and both party organizations could try to keep foreign policy out of the campaign.

But voters who could take foreign policy as a matter of course during those campaigns know now that in this field tragic disaster to the United Sates has occurred. An attempt by leaders and organizations of the two parties to practice restraint and achieve silence could readily result in increased concern on the part of voters. Besides, the Repulbicans can hardly fail to bear in mind that they are the opposition party and be aware of the function of the opposition party in a two-party system.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENC

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—Something seems to be wrong inside the Department of State in the handling of loyalty and security cases.

Explanation was obtained today from an authoritative source of a little-noticed paragraph in the U. S. Loyalty Review Board's report on the case of John S. Service, recently dismissed from the Department of State because of reasonable doubts as to his loyalty to the United States government.

The paragraph in question reveals that, despite the presence of an FBI report and despite the fact that copies of 40 documents written by Service for the State Department were discovered through an FBI raid on the offices of suspected Communist editors of "Amerasia," no hearing was held, and yet Service was cleared.

The text of the paragraph reads as follows:

"The undersigned panel of the Loyalty Review Board first took up this case (case of John Stewart Service) on post-audit, and on March 3, 1950, recommended that it be remanded to the Loyalty Security Board of the State Department for a hearing on charges. Subsequently a hearing was held, and the State Department board reaffirmed its decision favorable to the employee. . ."

Cleared Six Times

What is most surprising is that Service was cleared by the State Department board without a hearing some time between March 1947, when the President's loyalty program was instituted, and March 1950. No charges were made and no interrogatory presented to him. Yet the State Department is known to have "cleared" Service six times in all — the last time July 31, 1951.

The State Department has given no explanation of its failure to prefer charges against Service until pressed to do so by the national board—the Loyalty Review Board. In the formal report issued last week by the State Department occurs the following implied admission that it had not required Service to appear at a hearing before:

"The case of John Stewart Service, on which the Loyalty Security Board of the Department of State had reported a favorable determination based on the information then available, was remanded because the reviewing panel had concluded that the record had not been fully developed, and that a hearing should be held on charges.

"In accordance with this recommendation charges were preferred against Mr. Service and a hearin has been held."

Deep Mystery

Just why from June 6, 1945—whe Service was arrested along wit other persons in the "Amerasia case—until March 1950 no charge were preferred against him and n hearing was held inside the Stat Department so that he could b formally interrogated on the dat supplied by the FBI, is a myster which has not been explained. No is there any explanation as to wh after five years "the record had no been fully developed" and no hearing held to develop that record.

The episode casts suspicion on th manner in which loyalty cases hav been handled in the Department o State. Were it not for the "post audit" procedure set up to check th departmental boards, things of thi kind could escape attention altogether. The President's instruction specifically require that interrogatories should be presented to anyone about whom there has been collected any derogatory informatio concerning loyalty.

Incidentally, some misleadin statements have appeared in th press in the last few days purporting to say that the Loyalty Revie Board has ordered a "reopening o the loyalty cases of 565 federa employees" and that these case were to be checked "in the ligh of the government's new policy tha a 'reasonable doubt' is sufficient t bar employment."

The foregoing was contained in press release on December 17 b the U. S. Civil Service Commissio which said "announcement of th order was made today."

Cases Are Reduced

Now the truth is that the President's order was issued on May last, changing the wording abou "reasonable doubt" back to what i was under President Roosevelt during World War II. Also, last May the Loyalty Review Board announced that it estimated that 846 case would be definitely reopened an told the departmental agencies t take another look at about 8,00 cases in which the FBI had carrie on full field investigations.

The policy is not new nor is the procedure. All that is new is that the Loyalty Review Board has now cut the number of cases to be "reopened" from 846 down to 565 and the number to be scrutinized again from 8,889 down to 574. The latter group are not necessarily to be formally reopened.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The "Unwritten Law"

In the tradition of all races, a man fought for his home. The national state is comparatively new in human history; but the home goes back to the cave. A father, a mother and their children — that made a home.

In our sophisticated civilization, in which eternal values seem to be discarded, the home appears to have become a place to sleep and to run away from in an automobile. Even the noblest of household activities, the family dinner, with its chit-chat and loving admonition — even such a noble institution is giving away to the intrusion of television, to the noise and excitement of murder stories and westerns.

I saw an advertisement for a television tray, so that the family could dine in darkness, each person solitary, while they watched some morbid picture of the eternal triangle. What can children gain from such family life? Do they know their parents?

I was at Notre Dame in an atmosphere of scholastic peace when I read that Walter Wanger had shot a man. It was not possible for me to believe that this quiet, scholarly man, esthetic in his tastes, imaginative and idealistic, would take the law into his own hands.

Yet, I could understand him when he said that nobody was going to break up his home. Of course, now it is broken and perhaps irrevocably, but thefe is an unwritten law among men that they will fight for their honor and dignity and for their sense of decency. Maybe the duel was not as fantastic an institution as we in this age suppose.

There are things that try men's souls — if they still have souls.

It would seem to me wrong to try cases in newspapers; the court is the place for evidence, and lawyers, not journalists, should do the pleading. Yet, were it not for the masterly "j'accuse!" of Emile Zola and the journalism of Clemenceau, Alfred Dreyfus would have languished unjustly on Devil's Island to his death. The courts deal with the law; the press, with justice.

This case, no matter how it may be handled by lawyers, will, in the public mind, become a dramatic discussion of the home. Ample space is given constantly to biological love, as though it were the noblest of human activities and virtues. "Love," as it is called, has become the excuse, the alibi, for every anti-social habit. All that needs to be said is that "he loves her" — as though that explained all.

But strong nations use other terms — father, mother, son, daughter, home, virtue, piety, the moral law. Some laugh, in these sophisticated days, at the Methodists and Baptists, Presbyterians and other sects, the strong, puritanical elements in our population. But these religious families built a great nation and if we have liberty and a high standard of living, it is because they made it possible by hard work and strict morality. The "Ten Commandments" have served America more than all the laws on the statute books of all the states.

And we have not improved our society since divorce, broken homes, teen-agers without parental guidance, competition among separated parents for the good-will of their children, became a vogue. We have not done better since "honor thy father and thy mother" has been abandoned, and "thou shalt not commit adultery" has become corny.

So one man shot another over a woman. It is an old story. But in the crisis of our days, all forms of corruption must be analyzed and focussed in the perspective of our national illness. We need a clinical analysis of what has made us ill. We need an understanding of the departures from our traditional civilization which are causing it. Something is deadly wrong with us.

And what is most wrong is that the home — the family — is weakening. Why are we so smart that we outsmart ourselves and bring such unhappiness upon ourselves? We destroy what is good in our lives and treasure the empty, the ephemeral, the meaningless.

And when middle age comes and life is empty and there are only regrets, is nothing left for man but to shoot a man, or for pages to be filled with vulgarities that leave children at the mercy of every mockery? What are they have — marijuana, ehroin, no-virgin clubs! Is that to be America?

Great nations fall not because they are conquered. They fall because they grow rotten from within. What is overthrown is an empty shell that still looks solid but is really hollow.

Ever Upward

The usual perliminaries are over—the helter-skelter rush to make sure no one is forgotten in the exchange of gifts the preparations in households for family gatherings, the planning to make time and money square with the crowded schedule.

But these are only the trappings of Christmas, like the tinsel on the tree, not the inward spirit which is one with the flash of the Star of Bethlehem.

This birthday of Christ is being celebrated against the somber background of a powerful world challenge to the Christian ethic. Men of vast ambitions have organized populous nations into war machines. They have designedly undermined the morality of their people, purposing to substitute the worship of the state for that of God. The aim of the despots is to make Christianity unpreachable and forgotten.

"My kingdom is not of this world," said Jesus. He also insisted that while giving Caesar his just dues, men must continue in the service of God. So men have concluded that they must fight the godless, horrible as war is and barren as it has been of visible good results in this half century.

They must fight for the freedoms which have become part of life itself, for the right to decorate Christmas trees in their own homes, for the joy that comes from the gleaming eyes of children, for the right to help the helpless, to love mercy, to nurture the spirit on good deeds and add to the content of civilization.

If thoughts of the future make faces tense and eyes careworn, it isn't the first time in human history that men had to surrender peace of mind for the greater goal of an eventually safe environment.

And the course of man has been ever upward.

Snafuing Parcel Post

Accompanying higher postage rates for post cards, etc., effective January 1, will be new regulations on parcel post. Beginning on that date packages will be limited in size to 72 inches in length and girth combined—the sum of the length of the parcel and the measurement around the parcel—and to 40 pounds in weight if for delivery in a local zone.

Under the old regulations the limit on weight has been 70 pounds, and on size 100 inches of the length and girth combined.

So far everything seems clear. But now is where the snafuers' work becomes evident.

The new regulations limiting weight to 40 pounds and size to 72 inches, length and girth combined, will not apply if the parcel is sent from a second, third or fourth class post office to a first class post office, or from one second, third or fourth class post office or rural route, to another post office or rural route of the same classification.

The new reduced weight limit and size limits will apply only to parcel post between first class post offices. If things seem to have become un-snafued, more or less, read on.

While post office regulations state that no one will be permitted to mail a parcel from or to a post office other than first class with the purpose of evading the new limitations, such parcels "may be accepted at such offices even though the return addresses may be those of patrons of first class post offices."

Think you understand it now? Well, continue reading.

In another section of the new regulationss it is stated that postmasters of second, third and fourth class post offices "shall not accept parcels bearing the return card of patrons of first class post offices mailed in violation of the" new limitations on size and weight "when there is good reason to believe such shipments originated in and were prepared for mailing in a community served by a first class post office."

Catch? Well, why not just drop the whole thing and send it by express.

Money No Object

As several recent hearings have disclosed, there is good basis for the recommendation by the National Planning Association that an independent agency be created to assure the proper use of money and manpower by the Department of Defense.

The need for the continuing inquiry thus proposed was strikingly pointed up at the investigation of procurement policies. Here the chief counsel of the Ordnance Department testified he had discovered more than 5,000 cases of identical bids for Army supplies. Here also it was revealed, among other things, that enough of certain jeep parts to last 104 years had been bought. Also, that the Army had on hand 921,000 front axle gaskets, though only 8,800 of them were used in the three years between 1946 and 1949. That there was on hand a 74-year supply of covers for the steering column oil hole.

Obviously, there is no excuse for this sort of reckless spending. Extravagance by any government department not only increases the taxes paid by every citizen but weakens the nation's economy.

Yes, It Can Be Shocking

Already the Senate's Preparedness Committee can see the results from a recent survey it made of naval ships and bases and Marine bases. The report called attention to "shocking waste" of men, money and materials. That hit the Navy in a spot always tender.

Historically in peacetime that service always fumed and fretted at the tendency of Congress to clamp down on funds for operating ships. Many an old-line naval officer has complained bitterly of not having enough fuel or ammunition for training exercises. Many a ship and station went to an extreme in economies to avoid any chance of criticism.

In war there are often considerations more important than economy as an end in itself. Fuel and ammunition, for example, may often be expended very properly without any concern for the taxpayer. Getting there fast and hitting hard are what count.

Therein lies the danger. It is easy for officers and men to feel that because supplies are freely expendable, everything else is, too.

The Navy's reaction to the committee report is a plan to rate officers on cost consciousness. What every skipper and his engineer officer must be conscious of, can and should be a part of the indoctrination of every young officer. Even in battle there is a big difference between expenditure and waste.

How To Keep Well

Discharging Ears

Sulfonamides, penicillin, and all of the other wonder drugs have been a boon to the ears. They have played a role in preventing infections from reaching the hearing apparatus and helped immeasurably in treating disease should it develop. In addition, mastoid infections are becoming so rare that many hospitals have gone years without having a single admission for this condition.

These innovations also have had an effect upon chronic ear disturbances. Prior to 1935 most physicians had any number of patients complaining of a discharging ear. Many told a story similar to that of Roger, who was having difficulty along this line. His history dates back to the fall of 1929 when he was 14 years old. A nasty head cold spread to his left ear and for several hours he suffered from throbbing pain. His mother tried to ease it by inserting several drops of warm sweet oil. Relief came but not because of the oil; the drum broke, thus permitting the escape of pus that had been pent up in the middle ear.

The young man then felt well enough to return to school and the physician was not consulted until it became obvious that drainage was not subsiding. Since that time the ear closes and reopens at intervals, particularly when he develops a cold. The wonder drugs came to his rescue finally but Roger is sure that the repeated attacks left him with a mild form of deafness. So many are left with hearing defects that ear infections are listed as one of the principal causes of deafness. It is here that prevention enters the picture and in the future, this cause may drop from the No. 1 to the last position on the list of origins of deafness.

Roger was fortunate in another way. The wonder drugs are helpful but do not cure all cases. In some instances, surgery is needed, especially when there is mastoid involvement. In others the ear continues to drain because the disorder is kept alive by a co-existing infection in the sinuses. Apparently bacteria reach the hearing apparatus via the Eustachian tube; mucus is forced up this passageway by coughing or sneezing. So long as this focus remains the ear infection smolders. Treating the sinus ultimately pays dividends by improving local ear conditions. Ear specialists also utilize all of the other tricks of the trade. The ear is kept meticulously clean and local antiseptics are instilled to reduce the concentration of bacteria. There are many products along this line varying from powders to strong solutions.

Estimates vary on the number of individuals in this country suffering from chronic discharging ear. Many are not handicapped except for keeping the ear clean. Others are bothered by diminished hearing, dizziness, headache, or the disagreeable odor associated with the condition. Some find it difficult to obtain life insurance and young men may be rejected for military duty. Others cannot obtain employment because they are deemed an added risk. It is a difficult problem to solve but expert care offers the best chance of recovery.

NEUROTIC

H. T. writes: When you use the word neurotic in your column just what kind of a person do you mean?

One who looks and acts like anyone else but his illnesses usually are of emotional origin. In other words, his reactions to stress and strain differ from those of more phlegmatic individuals.

VITAMIN STORAGE

G. S. writes: Does the body retain or store up excess vitamins?

REPLY

The amount of storage varies with the vitamin. Once the body is saturated the excess is eliminated unless the amount administered is so large it taxes the excretory mechanism. Vitamins A and D are in the latter category and hypervitaminosis has been noted.

ALLERGY VS. COLDS

This project begins with the proper care of the breasts before the baby is born to prevent fissures and inflammation. Afterward, a trial of at least a week is in order because there is nothing as good as nursing to stimulate the milk supply.

Treasury Secretary Snyder Has Managed To Duck Criticism; Unfair Tax System Leads To Communism; Snyder Should Have Awakened Two Years Ago

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Today Drew Pearson tells the story of tax-collecting complacency in the treasury, in his series on how to pull wires and not pay taxes.)

WASHINGTON — It is either a political miracle or a tribute to his mousey personality that the man in charge of the bureau where most of the tax scandals have occurred, Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, so far has managed to duck any large volume of criticism.

His cabinet colleague, Attorney General McGrath, has been the target for far more criticism—though less tax finagling has occurred in his Justice Department.

In contrast, John Snyder is much closer to the tax picture, much closer to President Truman, and has held office much longer. However, he has traveled on his official routine blissfully ignorant—or else indifferent—to the fact that more crookedness was occurring in his department than at any time since the days of President U. S. Grant—perhaps more than at any time in history.

Personally Mr. Snyder is an entirely honest man. The idea that dishonesty would occur near him has and does shock him. Yet he does not seem to realize that part of honestly is not complacence but vigilance.

Secretary Snyder has been tenacious about the necessity of paying higher taxes in order to pay for our huge arms program. But he has not realized how he has knocked the slats out of his own tax program by failing to collect taxes on an honest basis. For, when people see tax-finagling at the top, tax-finagling is certain to spread at the bottom.

Grave Embarrassment

Mr. Synder's failure may be due in part to a personal weakness, which, according to some people, isn't kosher to mention. However, when a railroad engineer drinks on the job he is fired, when a motorist drinks while driving he is jailed—especially if there has been a smash-up. Therefore, when one of the 10 top members of government, charged with collecting the nation's taxes with honesty and equality, drinks on the job, the public is entitled to know it.

For with Snyder at the wheel there has been a distastrous smash-up in our tax-collecting system.

Unfortunately, Secretary Snyder's periodic drinking not only has caused moments of embarrassment before the governors of the World Bank and at the French Embassy, but sometimes has caused him to remain in bed away from his work for periods of time.

It happens that collecting taxes is a tough, day-and-night job, requiring vigilance and great strength of character almost 24 hours a day. It requires the eagle-eyed watchfulness that Henry Morgenthau became famous for. And Secretary Snyder, with all his personal honesty and all his good intentions regarding higher taxes, simply has not been alert. In fact, he has been a dismal failure.

Encouraging Communism

Both in St. Louis where he was a bank cashier, and in Washington, Secretary Snyder has been a political conservative. He would be horrified at the idea that he had done anything to encourage Communism. Yet history will probably show that, more than any other cabinet officer, he has helped plant what could become a basic cause for Communism. For Snyder's unfair, unequal tax-collecting system is wiping out the middle-class of Americans, the normal bulwark against Communism.

What Secretary Snyder may not realize is that, in Europe, the countries with the unequal tax systems are those showing the greatest leanings toward Communism. Outside of Russia, the two countries with the greatest Communist populations—about one-third each—are France and Italy. And in both countries the tax systems are notoriously unfair, unequal and dishonest. In both countries, the wealthy pay few taxes, the working class bear the chief burden.

What Secretary Snyder also may not realize is the effect on the American workingman and the white-collar worker who read about graft in our tax-collecting system today.

He sees his own income taxes taken out in withholding taxes, giving him no opportunity to cheat the government even if he wanted to. In contrast he reads in the newspapers that millions of dollars in tax money are not being paid by those who can afford to hire expensive lawyers and take key officials on junkets in private airplanes. This is what has encouraged Communism in Europe, and, come a depression, it will encourage Communism here.

Serene Mr. Snyder

The tragedy is that Secretary Snyder, complacent as he sometimes is, could have awakened to what was going on in his own department two years ago. All he had to do was read the newspapers.

In column after column, beginning exactly two years ago this month, I listed the amazing tax-fixes that were going on right under Snyder's nose — the big Guaranty Finance gambling case in Los Angeles (Dec. 16, '49); The Gionotti and Georgetti cases at San Francisco (Jan. 16, '50); The bribing of five revenue agents in New York (Jan. 30, '50); The fixing of the Ripps-Mitchell Case in Mobile (Dec. 16, '49). I even named some of the revenue agents and told in detail how they appeared to be fixing the cases. Yet Secretary Snyder sat serene.

He could not have helped knowing that a racket was developing right under his nose and that a new class of black-market millionaires was growing up—all through tax evasion. He must have known, if he read the papers, that around 1,400 tax cases at one time were stalled in the Justice Department and 1,200 in the Treasury; that his Internal Revenue Bureau was going after the little taxpayers and the big taxpayers were getting off almost free.

The big boys were getting off because they had developed the technique of hiring tax lawyers and buying influence. The tax lawyers ask for conference after conference, haggle with government attorneys, wear out their patience, finally get a civil fraud penalty settlement, thereby saving their clients from going to jail.

Thousands of cases have been settled that way. Meanwhile, the boy who swipes a second-hand jalopy and takes it across a state line gets slapped into prison. His crime was only a spur-of-the moment prank, not a deliberate, carefully planned steal. But he doesn't know how to pull wires and influence officials.

Those are some of the inequities in our tax-collecting system which developed under the nose of the Secretary of the Treasurer and the Attorney General—inequities which will be cited chapter and verse in tomorrow's column.

Truman's Scandals

By MARK SULLIVAN

Republicans say that scandals associated with the Truman administration will be a factor in the Presidential campaign next year, that it will defeat Mr. Truman if he is the Democratic candidate and in any event defeat the party. History does not bear this out. There was scandal in the first term of President Grant but this did not prevent his election to a second term. There was scandal during the Republican Administration of President Harding, but revelation of it after his death in office did not prevent Republican victory in the two succeeding elections. It would be difficult to find in our political history a case in which scandal acounted for defeat of a party in power. Scandal may contribute to defeat but it is rarely what political-minded William Jennings Bryan shrewdly called "the paramount issue."

What Republicans have in mind probably starts with a conclusion—that the Democrats will be defeated and that a large part of the cause of defeat will be the record of President Truman. The record, as Republicans see it, gives an important place to the current scandals; and to the scandals themselves as a detriment to Mr. Truman, many are likely to add the attitude Mr. Truman has taken about them. This was apparent at a press conference Mr. Truman held at a time when public concern about the current scandals was acute.

Mr. Truman's manner was belligerent. He declared that he and the Executive department had taken action on scandals whenever they arose and that he would continue to do this. He said the scandals would be cleaned up before the election and would not figure in the campaign. He took credit to himself and the Executive department for ferreting out scandal and taking action about it; denied credit to investigating committees of Congress, said that Congress came in afterward and got the headlines.

Campaign Issue

Mr. Truman's attitude about the current scandals will undoubtedly be distasteful to many. The scandals as such may figure in the campaign next year. But to think of them as the determining factor in the election would be to underrate one of the great tragedies in history. When Mr. Truman took office in April, 1945, the country was on the eve of victory over Germany and Japan, the victory was completed during the fifth month of his administration, the second world war had been won. In the seventh year of Mr. Truman's administration, and at the beginning of a Presidential campaign year, the country is confronted by the menace of a third world war. Only by studied under-statement are we justified in assuming that what we are already involved in is not war.

Mr. Truman must be conscious of this record, yet a recent speech by him suggests wonder whether he thinks he can escape it. In his speech he said that foreign policy should not be an issue in the coming campaign, that he would strive to prevent it from being an issue and that if the Republicans make it an issue "we can meet this."

If President Truman next year tries to escape the record of his administration's foreign policy, he is not likely to be accommodated either by voters next year or by history. A single event during the Truman administration, the fall of China to Russian Communism, is likely to have a place in hitsory comparable to the Mongol invasion of Europe to the gates of Vienna some five centuries ago.

Must Face Foreign Policy

When Mr. Truman says that he will strive to prevent foreign policy from being an issue next year and defies the Republicans to make it an issue, he may have in mind a wish that foreign policy be non-partisan in the coming Presidential campaign as it has been in past ones. But non-partisanship was easier in the campaigns of 1940, 1944 and 1948. Conceivably leaders of both parties and both party organizations could try to keep foreign policy out of the campaign.

But voters who could take foreign policy as a matter of course during those campaigns know now that in this field tragic disaster to the United Sates has occurred. An attempt by leaders and organizations of the two parties to practice restraint and achieve silence could readily result in increased concern on the part of voters. Besides, the Repulbicans can hardly fail to bear in mind that they are the opposition party and be aware of the function of the opposition party in a two-party system.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—Something seems to be wrong inside the Department of State in the handling of loyalty and security cases.

Explanation was obtained today from an authoritative source of a little-noticed paragraph in the U. S. Loyalty Review Board's report on the case of John S. Service, recently dismissed from the Department of State because of reasonable doubts as to his loyalty to the United States government.

The paragraph in question reveals that, despite the presence of an FBI report and despite the fact that copies of 40 documents written by Service for the State Department were discovered through an FBI raid on the offices of suspected Communist editors of "Amerasia," no hearing was held, and yet Service was cleared.

The text of the paragraph reads as follows:

"The undersigned panel of the Loyalty Review Board first took up this case (case of John Stewart Service) on post-audit, and on March 3, 1950, recommended that it be remanded to the Loyalty Security Board of the State Department for a hearing on charges. Subsequently a hearing was held, and the State Department board reaffirmed its decision favorable to the employee. . ."

Cleared Six Times

What is most surprising is that Service was cleared by the State Department board without a hearing some time between March 1947, when the President's loyalty program was instituted, and March 1950. No charges were made and no interrogatory presented to him. Yet the State Department is known to have "cleared" Service six times in all — the last time July 31, 1951.

The State Department has given no explanation of its failure to prefer charges against Service until pressed to do so by the national board—the Loyalty Review Board. In the formal report issued last week by the State Department occurs the following implied admission that it had not required Service to appear at a hearing before:

"The case of John Stewart Service, on which the Loyalty Security Board of the Department of State had reported a favorable determination based on the information then available, was remanded because the reviewing panel had concluded that the record had not been fully developed, and that a hearing should be held on charges.

"In accordance with this recommendation charges were preferred against Mr. Service and a hearing has been held."

Deep Mystery

Just why from June 6, 1945—when Service was arrested along with other persons in the "Amerasia" case—until March 1950 no charges were preferred against him and no hearing was held inside the State Department so that he could be formally interrogated on the data supplied by the FBI, is a mystery which has not been explained. Nor is there any explanation as to why after five years "the record had not been fully developed" and no hearing held to develop that record.

The episode casts suspicion on the manner in which loyalty cases have been handled in the Department of State. Were it not for the "post-audit" procedure set up to check the departmental boards, things of this kind could escape attention altogether. The President's instructions specifically require that interrogatories should be presented to anyone about whom there has been collected any derogatory information concerning loyalty.

Incidentally, some misleading statements have appeared in the press in the last few days purporting to say that the Loyalty Review Board has ordered a "reopening of the loyalty cases of 565 federal employees" and that these cases were to be checked "in the light of the government's new policy that a 'reasonable doubt' is sufficient to bar employment."

The foregoing was contained in a press release on December 17 by the U. S. Civil Service Commission which said "announcement of the order was made today."

Cases Are Reduced

Now the truth is that the President's order was issued on May last, changing the wording about "reasonable doubt" back to what it was under President Roosevelt during World War II. Also, last May the Loyalty Review Board announced that it estimated that 846 cases would be definitely reopened and told the departmental agencies to take another look at about 8,00 cases in which the FBI had carried on full field investigations.

The policy is not new nor is the procedure. All that is new is that the Loyalty Review Board has now cut the number of cases to be "reopened" from 846 down to 565 and the number to be scrutinized again from 8,889 down to 574. The latter group are not necessarily to be formally reopened.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSK

The "Unwritten Law"

In the tradition of all races, a man fought for his home. The national state is comparatively new in human history; but the home goes back to the cave. A father, a mother and their children — that made a home.

In our sophisticated civilization, in which eternal values seem to be discarded, the home appears to have become a place to sleep and to run away from in an automobile. Even the noblest of household activities, the family dinner, with its chit-chat and loving admonition — even such a noble institution is giving away to the intrusion of television, to the noise and excitement of murder stories and westerns.

I saw an advertisement for a television tray, so that the family could dine in darkness, each person solitary, while they watched some morbid picture of the eternal triangle. What can children gain from such family life? Do they know their parents?

I was at Notre Dame in an atmosphere of scholastic peace when I read that Walter Wanger had shot a man. It was not possible for me to believe that this quiet, scholarly man, esthetic in his tastes, imaginative and idealistic, would take the law into his own hands.

Yet, I could understand him when he said that nobody was going to break up his home. Of course, now it is broken and perhaps irrevocably, but there is an unwritten law among men that they will fight for their honor and dignity and for their sense of decency. Maybe the duel was not as fantastic an institution as we in this age suppose.

There are things that try men's souls — if they still have souls.

It would seem to me wrong to try cases in newspapers; the court is the place for evidence and lawyers, not journalists should do the pleading. Yet were it not for the masterly "j'accuse!" of Emile Zola and the journalism of Clemenceau Alfred Dreyfus would have languished unjustly on Devil's Island to his death. The courts deal with the law; the press, with justice.

This case, no matter how it may be handled by lawyers, will, in the public mind, become a dramatic discussion of the home. Ample space is given constantly to biological love, as though it were the noblest of human activities and virtue. "Love," as it is called, has become the excuse, the alibi, for every anti-social habit. All that needs to be said is that "he loves her" — as though that explained all.

But strong nations use other terms — father, mother, son, daughter, home, virtue, piety, the moral law. Some laugh, in these sophisticated days, at the Methodists and Baptists, Presbyterians and other sects, the strong, puritanical elements in our population. But these religious families built a great nation and if we have liberty and a high standard of living, it is because they made it possible by hard work and strict morality. The "Ten Commandments" have served America more than all the laws on the statute books of all the states.

And we have not improved our society since divorce, broken homes, teen-agers without parental guidance, competition among separated parents for the good-will of their children, became a vogue. We have not done better since "honor thy father and thy mother" has been abandoned, and "thou shalt not commit adultery" has become corny.

So one man shot another over a woman. It is an old story. But in the crisis of our days, all forms of corruption must be analyzed and focussed in the perspective of our national illness. We need a clinical analysis of what has made us ill. We need an understanding of the departures from our traditional civilization which are plaguing us. Something is deadly wrong with us.

And what is most wrong is that the home — the family — is weakening. Why are we so smart that we outsmart ourselves and bring such unhappiness upon ourselves? We destroy what is good in our lives and treasure the empty, the ephemeral, the meaningless.

And when middle age comes and life is empty and there are only regrets, is nothing left for man but to shoot man, or for pages to be filled with vulgarities that leave children at the mercy of every mockery? What do they have — marijuana, ehroin, no-virgin clubs! Is that to be America?

Great nations fall not because they are conquered. They fall because they grow rotten from within. What is overthrown is an empty shell that still looks solid but is really hollow.

By BOB CONSIDINE

NEW YORK — (INS) — In Hungary this Christmas the Communist regime will make another attempt to crush deeply rooted religious feelings from the oppressed millions under the Red heel.

December 25, once a day of tremendous significance for Hungarians, has been declared "Day of the Firtree." Christmas, as such, has been officially abolished.

It used to be quite different . . .

Christmas celebrations traditionally began in Hungary on the first Sunday of Advent, usually the first Sunday of December. The feast day of St. Nicholas (Mukulas) on Dec. 6 was always observed. From that day on, Hungarian children, dressed as biblical shepherds, would carry images of the holy family from door to door, singing carols. It was called "Bethlehem-going."

Today an unexpected rap on a door in an iron curtain country constitutes one of the world's most paralyzing sounds.

In the old days in Hungary all work ceased at noon on Christmas Eve. Trees were trimmed in the late afternoon while one delegated elder of the household took the children for a walk. At 6 p. m. the tree candles were lighted by the head of the house who, upon sounding a bell, summoned others in the household to come into the room of the tree, led by the children.

The rest of the evening usually was spent in exchanging presents, the singing of carols, visiting among the neighbors, and preparing to attend midnight mass.

Not a shadow of that feeling is lawful today. "Our people live in perpetual advent," a refugee recently wrote poignantly to the National Committee for a Free Europe.

In Bulgaria, workers were recently warned by their commissars that any person who attended church on Christmas Day would be, while not actually arrested, thereafter considered a potential saboteur of the "progress of the regime."

For several years after the Communists took over the country, the controlled press of Bulgaria ignored Christmas. Now it openly attacks those who observe the day of Christ's birth and derides the day itself.

Christmas Eve once was a day of great meaning in Bulgaria. As in many other countries it was a day of fasting. But each table, rich or poor, usually held a dish of boiled wheat, and each room was perfumed with incense. The wheat was a symbol of abundance — of which there is no more — and the incense denoted prayer, which now must be furtively attended to.

The land once rang on Christmas Eve with the carols of whole families, singing before the homes of their friends. None will dare venture out at night, this Monday. Security police will be afoot.

• — • — •

The Communists have declared Christmas unconstitutional in Romania. It has been replaced by two other brief stoppages of wide-spread work for the Soviet Union. Workers are given a little breathing time on December 21, Stalin's birthday, and on January 1, when they may have a "winter tree" in their homes, perhaps decorated.

Wiped out, of course, are such old practices as children carrying a decorated star of Bethlehem from house to house while singing carols, and the happy bustle of mothers and grandmothers in the kitchens of the land, preparing the pork and baking the traditional Christmas pastries.

On the surface at least Christmas in Romania is dead. As the open religious life of the people is crushed, work for the state is stepped up. Romania, as elsewhere behind the iron curtain, is suffering epidemics of exhaustion from "voluntary overtime."

The Reds have killed or imprisoned countless religious leaders and minor religious functionaries in such countries as Poland, Czechoslovokia, Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania. They now seek to kill Christmas.

So did Nero.

COLUMBUS, O.—(AP)—Folks who like strawberries can reduce the cost of the fruit and give berry producers a much-needed hand this season.

Vernon Patterson, extension horticulturist at Ohio State University explains that shortage of harvesting labor this year may make it difficult for growers to get their crop picked. Consumers may find opportunities to harvest their own fruit.

"Consumer harvesting can be a good thing for both customer and grower if they will recognize the advantages and accept the disadvantages. Consumers can get self-selected, fresher fruit for their backaches, while growers will have part of their picking headaches relieved for possibly a little less net return," says Patterson.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—If you are In the Swing of Things in this town, going to all the hit shows, visiting the best saloons and mingling with all the wonderful and horrible people who go to make up the top drawer of New Yorkers, sooner or later you meet Thyra Samter Winslow. It's a genuine pleasure.

Thyra is a small, dark, pretty piece of perpetual motion who is the envy of most of America's professional writers because she has in her time accomplished the impossible daily double—she has sold any number of serious stories, beautifully told and full of wind, rain and unhappy endings, and she has sold any number of formula, boy-gets-girl tales to the slick magazines.

The remarkable thing about her is that she manages to be everywhere and do everything and still have time to write. She's always at the new plays, with handsome young escorts, always at the new cafe shows and always popping off to some foreign land for a couple of weeks.

Meanwhile, she does drama criticism for two magazines, writes her short stories and a flood of articles and still finds time to give and go to endless parties. Cholly Knickerbocker has called her "a perennial glamor girl" and it is my personal belief that the word vivacious was coined for her.

The latest grist from Thyra's smoking mill is a just-published book called Think Yourself Thin, whose logical premise seems to be that the best way to lose weight is to pay attention to what you eat.

As a man who now looks like a pregnant stringbean (credit John Barrymore), I plan to read this through completely, but at present I am fascinated by one chapter. This chapter confirms a belief I always have held—that a lot of people eat too much simply because they're unhappy.

* * * *

THYRA SAYS THAT OVER-EATERS include the "emotional wrecks"—who look fat and unemotional but are not.

"They are seething inside, dissatisfied, worried, miserable, frightened," she explains. "Things go wrong—and they eat. They can't get the things they want in the world, so they turn to food. They can't get the job they'd like to have, so they take out their emotions on puddings and apple pies. It's so comforting to eat a box of butter creams when things go wrong!"

This, I think, is a theory that has not been advanced too often and is completely sound. I recall in my youth, an eon or two ago, quarreling with a girl over the way she cut her toenails or something and storming out of her house in anger—only to return 10 minutes later and find her standing in the kitchen with beetled brows, stuffing herself with cake . . . which she hated.

This is carried to an even more logical conclusion over in Lindy's restaurant, where nightly you will find pale and fat press agents mournfully filling themselves with piece after piece of cheesecake just because they have lost an account.

"There are so many things the worrier can do," Thyra suggests helpfully. "He can mix with people, learn a new vocation." She obviously is not referring to those press agents, who, if all the gossip columns suddenly were suspended, would never earn a dollar for the rest of their lives. They are highly-conditioned, ah . . . specialists.

* * * *

MOSTLY, THYRA POINTS OUT, IT'S WOMEN who over-eat because of unhappy love affairs. "When I'm happy," a well-known actress told her, "I don't think about eating. But I fall in love and things don't go so well. So I stay at home and eat. I run to the refrigerator—when the telephone doesn't ring. I eat chocolates when I stay home in the evening."

Thyra also says that girls who are apt to be a little plump often stuff themselves with food to explain away their unpopularity with men.

"As she becomes fat—which she will, sure as Fate, if she turns to rich foods for solace—she has a fine alibi for her unpopularity," Thyra writes. "She is unpopular because she is fat! So she hides behind her fat. Her extra weight is her screen, her comfort, her excuse for everything."

Thyra, of course, is aiming this book at the out-of-town market. She knows, as we all do, that there are no fat, gross women in New York. We have here only the finest, fairest specimens of American womanhood, and I love them all. Or try to, anyway.

To look and feel your best during the holiday whirl, take advantage of these bath techniques!

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

The long and strenuous holiday whirl taxes any lass' ability to look her merriest best. One sure way to do it is to join the "order of the bath."

Feeling slow and sleepy in the morning after a big gathering, take the plunge that will arouse your circulation and wake up both beauty and brains. For this, a shower is best. In lieu of a shower, attach an inexpensive bath spray to the tub fixture.

Wake-up Technique

Always use temperate water, neither hot nor cold, and plenty of suds for a morning dip. If you like a cold splash, finish up with one. Otherwise, give yourself a brisk toweling, followed by an alcohol or cologne rub. You'll be the bright one at breakfast!

Anytime that you're exhausted before a big evening, relax in a tub fragrant with bath oil, bubbles, or crystals and have handy your most precious soap, a sponge rubber headrest, bath tray, mitts and beauty brushes. (Note: These items make luxurious gifts!)

Make a rite of your ablutions. Stay in the water until you feel fatigue, kinks, and worries leaving you. Rise to rub down with your prettiest towel until your are pink—and then with your body lotion until you are smooth. You'll be the charmer of the evening!

When you hit the pillow after the large evening only to find your nerves and thoughts won't let you sleep, force yourself to get up. Then start drawing a hot bath, change your pillow case, smooth the sheets, lay out a fresh gown, warm a glass of milk and place it beside your bed.

Sweet Dreams

Next, get in the water and soak. Wash leisurely for the refreshing effect. Skip our brush techniques this time and in ten minutes or so, gently pat yourself dry. Flick your favorite cologne on your temples, wrists, and throat. Get into bed and slowly sip your milk. Turn out the light.

Line up your body as though you were standing in your best posture. Then, begin to relax every muscle—separately. "Talk" to your feet and make them give up. "Unlax" your hands and wrists. Loosen your jaw. Take ten slow, deep breaths. Concentrate on what you're doing and not what you'll do tomorrow. Leave that to me. For now, sweet dreams!

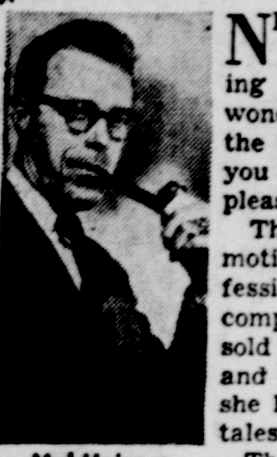
My New York

By MEL HEIMER



Mel Heimer

NEW YORK—If you are In the Swing of Things in this town, going to all the hit shows, visiting the best saloons and mingling with all the wonderful and horrible people who go to make up the top drawer of New Yorkers, sooner or later you meet Thyra Samter Winslow. It's a genuine pleasure.

Thyra is a small, dark, pretty piece of perpetual motion who is the envy of most of America's professional writers because she has in her time accomplished the impossible daily double—she has sold any number of serious stories, beautifully told and full of wind, rain and unhappy endings, and she has sold any number of formula, boy-gets-girl tales to the slick magazines.

The remarkable thing about her is that she manages to be everywhere and do everything and still have time to write. She's always at the new plays, with handsome young escorts, always at the new cafe shows and always popping off to some foreign land for a couple of weeks.

Meanwhile, she does drama criticism for two magazines, writes her short stories and a flood of articles and still finds time to give and go to endless parties. Cholly Knickerbocker has called her "a perennial glamor girl" and it is my personal belief that the word vivacious was coined for her.

The latest grist from Thyra's smoking mill is a just-published book called Think Yourself Thin, whose logical premise seems to be that the best way to lose weight is to pay attention to what you eat.

As a man who now looks like a pregnant stringbean (credit John Barrymore), I plan to read this through completely, but at present I am fascinated by one chapter. This chapter confirms a belief I always have held—that a lot of people eat too much simply because they're unhappy.

THYRA SAYS THAT OVER-EATERS include the "emotional wrecks"—who look fat and unemotional but are not.

"They are seething inside, dissatisfied, worried, miserable, frightened," she explains. "Things go wrong—and they eat. They can't get the things they want in the world, so they turn to food. They can't get the job they'd like to have, so they take out their emotions on puddings and apple pies. It's so comforting to eat a box of butter creams when things go wrong!"

This, I think, is a theory that has not been advanced too often and is completely sound. I recall in my youth, an eon or two ago, quarreling with a girl over the way she cut her toenails or something and storming out of her house in anger—only to return 10 minutes later and find her standing in the kitchen with beetled brows, stuffing herself with cake . . . which she hated.

This is carried to an even more logical conclusion over in Lindy's restaurant, where nightly you will find pale and fat press agents mournfully filling themselves with piece after piece of cheesecake just because they have lost an account.

"There are so many things the worrier can do," Thyra suggests helpfully. "He can mix with people, learn a new vocation." She obviously is not referring to those press agents, who, if all the gossip columns suddenly were suspended, would never earn a dollar for the rest of their lives. They are highly-conditioned, ah . . . specialists.

• • • •

MOSTLY, THYRA POINTS OUT, IT'S WOMEN who over-eat because of unhappy love affairs. "When I'm happy," a well-known actress told her, "I don't think about eating. But I fall in love and things don't go so well. So I stay at home and eat. I run to the refrigerator—when the telephone doesn't ring. I eat chocolates when I stay home in the evening."

Thyra also says that girls who are apt to be a little plump often stuff themselves with food to explain away their unpopularity with men.

"As she becomes fat—which she will, sure as Fate, if she turns to rich foods for solace—she has a fine alibi for her unpopularity," Thyra writes. "She is unpopular because she is fat! So she hides behind her fat. Her extra weight is her screen, her comfort, her excuse for everything."

Thyra, of course, is aiming this book at the out-of-town market. She knows, as we all do, that there are no fat, gross women in New York. We have here only the finest, fairest specimens of American womanhood, and I love them all. Or try to, anyway.

To look and feel your best during the holiday whirl, take advantage of these bath techniques!

SECRETS OF CHARM

By JOHN ROBERT POWERS

The long and strenuous holiday whirl taxes any lass' ability to look her merriest best. One sure way to do it is to join the "order of the bath."

Feeling slow and sleepy in the morning after a big gathering, take the plunge that will arouse your circulation and wake up both beauty and brains. For this, a shower is best. In lieu of a shower, attach an inexpensive bath spray to the tub fixture.

Wake-up Technique

Always use temperate water, neither hot nor cold, and plenty of suds for a morning dip. If you like a cold splash, finish up with one. Otherwise, give yourself a brisk toweling, followed by an alcohol or cologne rub. You'll be the bright one at breakfast!

Anytime that you're exhausted before a big evening, relax in a tub fragrant with bath oil, bubbles, or crystals and have handy your most precious soap, a sponge rubber headrest, bath tray, mitts and beauty brushes. (Note: These items make luxurious gifts!)

Make a rite of your ablutions. Stay in the water until you feel fatigue, kinks, and worries leaving you. Rise to rub down with your prettiest towel until your are pink—and then with your body lotion until you are smooth. You'll be the charmer of the evening!

When you hit the pillow after the large evening only to find your nerves and thoughts won't let you sleep, force yourself to get up. Then start drawing a hot bath, change your pillow case, smooth the sheets, lay out a fresh gown, warm a glass of milk and place it beside your bed.

Sweet Dreams

Next, get in the water and soak. Wash leisurely for the refreshing effect. Skip our brush techniques this time and in ten minutes or so, gently pat yourself dry. Flick your favorite cologne on your temples, wrists, and throat. Get into bed and slowly sip your milk. Turn out the light.

Line up your body as though you were standing in your best posture. Then, begin to relax every muscle—separately. "Talk" to your feet and make them give up. "Unlax" your hands and wrists. Loosen your jaw. Take ten slow, deep breaths. Concentrate on what you're doing and not what you'll do tomorrow. Leave that to me. For now, sweet dreams!

Blaze Routs Movie Company

YUMA, Ariz., Dec. 20 (AP) — Fire broke out in a fifth floor suite of the San Carlos Hotel here early today, chasing Broderick Crawford and 60 other members of a movie company into the lobby in their night clothes.

Crawford, who occupied the rooms where the blaze originated, lost all his personal belongings, including most of the clothes he was to wear in a picture being filmed in sand dunes 15 miles away.

He was unhurt as were other members of the cast, who had to spend the rest of the night in the lobby. They included Actress Barbara Hale and Actor Lloyd Bridges.

Origin of the blaze has not been determined. It was spotted quickly by Yuma police. Crawford was still asleep when firemen pounded on his door to notify him of the danger.

Damage, estimated at $5,000, was confined principally to one room.

Christmas Programs Set At First Baptist

Christmas programs and themes will be presented in the First Baptist Church, Bedford at Columbia street, Sunday by the various church organizations.

A Christmas play titled "Christ in Christmas," written by Miss Mary Sowerby, Allegany High School teacher will be presented at 9:30 a. m. during the Sunday School hour. The presentation of "white gifts" will also be featured during the play. Sermons on the Christmas theme will be delivered by the Rev. O. Afton Linger at 11 a. m. and at 7:30 p. m. A reading "Christmas Bells" accompanied with tolling bells will be featured in the Training Union at 6:30 p. m.

"Bomb" Scare Proves To Be Fruit Cake

HOBOKEN, N. J., Dec. 20 (AP)—A mysterious small package found in a Lackawanna Railroad Station washroom brought police bomb experts here in a hurry today.

They dunked the package in a pail of water, submerged it in the nearby Hudson River and even soaked it in oil.

Firemen Check Blaze On Baltimore Street

Central firmen last night went to 166 Baltimore Street and extinguished a small blaze in the Maryland Shoe Shine Parlor.

The fire, of undertermined origin, occured at 8:15 p. m. and firemen had to force their way through the rear of the building. The blaze was confined to a small portion of the baseboard on the first floor.

No Tomb Found In Burial Place Of Apostle St. Peter

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 20 (AP)—Pilgrims who visit the Vatican grottos will be able to get within 10 feet of the place where Vatican authorities say St. Peter was buried, but they will not be able to see his tomb. For there is no tomb.

The narrow tunnel through which Vatican workers labored painstakingly one or two at a time, to reach the burial site, has again been covered.

Correspondents were taken today on a conducted tour of the vast burial place in the depths of St. Peter's Basilica. They saw for the first time an intricate system of Roman and Christian mausoleums and burial places, beautiful Roman friezes and alabaster urns that have been uncovered in 12 years of excavations.

The first set of two volumes describing the excavations was presented yesterday to Pope Pius XII, who declared in his Christmas address last year that the excavations had definitely discovered St. Peter's burial place.

Today, archaeologists who took part in the work, explained how humble that burial was.

To reach it, workers had to channel deep under the foundations of the central altar of St. Peter's Basilica — the confessional — which always had been held to rise over the burial place of the first Pope and Prince of the Apostles.

Diggers came up under the place where the tomb was, and there discovered remnants of a wall with inscriptions upon it of pilgrims who had come there to venerate St. Peter. They also found coins dropped there through the centuries.

But they did not find an intact tomb.

Prof. Enrico Josi, one of the Vatican archaeologists who has directed the work, today dispelled any idea that an intact tomb with remains of St. Peter was found.

"No," he said, replying to a question, "but we can say that we truly found the spot where the Apostle was buried."

Josi said Peter "was buried in the bare earth."

Josi said fragments of bones were found but that nobody can say they are the bones of St. Peter."

"If," he said, "we had found a sealed sepulchre, we could have said they were the bones of St. Peter."

His Dog Would Rather Have Fish

CALDWELL, IDAHO, Dec. 20. (AP)—Gene Odle says this happened the last day of duck hunting season.

Odle shot a teal duck while hunting along the Boise River near here. He sent his dog, a spaniel, into the water to retrieve the duck. Back came the animal in record time'

Highway Death Tempo Slows

[By The Associated Press]

The tempo of highway slaughter slowed down a little yesterday as the nation approached the 1,000,000th traffic fatality mark.

It reached 999,780 at 3:25 p. m. EST.

Extra driving caution and widespread severe wintry weather that kept many cars off the highways apparently were responsible.

The National Safety Council has forecast that the 1,000,000 mark will be reached around noon Saturday in a highway race with death that started Sept. 13, 1899.

On that date H. H. Bliss stepped from a trolley in New York City and was killed by a horseless carriage. He was America's first traffic victim.

The traffic toll rose steadily after that and now has reached the alarming total of more than 100 each day. The 1951 toll was 36,200 up to Wednesday midnight. The peak of 39,969 fatities was reached in 1941.

The council has promoted M (for million) day in the hope that pinpointing the grisly milestone will slow the slaughter. Nearly all accidents, the council maintains, could be prevented by extra caution.

Ex-Maid Admits Former Affair

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—Tallulah Bankhead's former maid-secretary testified today she hiked the actress's checks only to regain money she'd already spent on the stormy stage star.

The ex-maid, Mrs. Evyleen Cronin, on trial on larceny and forgery charges, was asked:

"Did you raise those checks?'

"Yes," the 59-year-old defendant replied. "I raised them to buy things I bought out of my own money, but everything I raised I paid for."

She admitted she lived 14 years with a married man who was not her husband.

She identified him as John Cronin, a theater property man whom she met in 1919 when she was a stage dancer.

Charge Pending In Wife's Death

JACKSON, Mich., Dec. 20 (AP) — The state studied a possible manslaughter charge today against business executive Edward G. Spencer, whose 21-year-old wife froze to death after a drinking spree.

Prosecutor George Campbell said he was not decided on the exact charge. But he said it would involve "some form of manslaughter."

Spencer, 44 years old and the father of three children by a previous marriage, changed his story to the prosecutor this morning after first maintaining he was not with his wife the night before she died.

He said he and the attractive Mrs. Spencer, the former Loretta Naylor, had spent Tuesday evening making a round of taverns. When they headed home their car stuck in a ditch.

Spencer said his wife was "too drunk" to walk the 200 yards to the garage from the entrance. So he tried to drag her home.

"She fell in the snow," the prosecutor quoted him as saying. "I tried to drag her but my fingers were too cold.

"I left my wife lying in the snow."

Spencer said he went into the house and fell asleep.

At 8 a. m. the next day an employe of Spencer, called to drive him to the office, found Mrs. Spencer lying in the driveway. Her arms and legs were frozen. She died soon after being admitted to Foote Hospital.

Blaze Routs Movie Company

YUMA, Ariz., Dec. 20 (AP) — Fire broke out in a fifth floor suite of the San Carlos Hotel here early today, chasing Broderick Crawford and 60 other members of a movie company into the lobby in their night clothes.

Crawford, who occupied the rooms where the blaze originated, lost all his personal belongings, including most of the clothes he was to wear in a picture being filmed in sand dunes 15 miles away.

He was unhurt as were other members of the cast, who had to spend the rest of the night in the lobby. They included Actress Barbara Hale and Actor Lloyd Bridges.

Origin of the blaze has not been determined. It was spotted quickly by Yuma police. Crawford was still asleep when firemen pounded on his door to notify him of the danger.

Damage, estimated at $5,000, was confined principally to one room.

Christmas Programs Set At First Baptist

Christmas programs and themes will be presented in the First Baptist Church, Bedford at Columbia street, Sunday by the various church organizations.

A Christmas play titled "Christ in Christmas," written by Miss Mary Sowerby, Allegany High School teacher will be presented at 9:30 a. m. during the Sunday School hour. The presentation of "white gifts" will also be featured during the play. Sermons on the Christmas theme will be delivered by the Rev. O. Afton Linger at 11 a. m. and at 7:30 p. m. A reading "Christmas Bells" accompanied with tolling bells will be featured in the Training Union at 6:30 p. m.

"Bomb" Scare Proves To Be Fruit Cake

HOBOKEN, N. J., Dec. 20 (AP)—A mysterious small package found in a Lackawanna Railroad Station washroom brought police bomb experts here in a hurry today.

They dunked the package in a pail of water, submerged it in the nearby Hudson River and even soaked it in oil.

Firemen Check Blaze On Baltimore Street

Central firmen last night went to 166 Baltimore Street and extinguished a small blaze in the Maryland Shoe Shine Parlor.

The fire, of undertermined origin, occured at 8:15 p. m. and firemen had to force their way through the rear of the building. The blaze was confined to a small portion of the baseboard on the first floor.

No Tomb Found In Burial Place Of Apostle St. Peter

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 20 (AP)—Pilgrims who visit the Vatican grottos will be able to get within 10 feet of the place where Vatican authorities say St. Peter was buried, but they will not be able to see his tomb. For there is no tomb.

The narrow tunnel through which Vatican workers labored painstakingly one or two at a time, to reach the burial site, has again been covered.

Correspondents were taken today on a conducted tour of the vast burial place in the depths of St. Peter's Basilica. They saw for the first time an intricate system of Roman and Christian mausoleums and burial places, beautiful Roman friezes and alabaster urns that have been uncovered in 12 years of excavations.

The first set of two volumes describing the excavations was presented yesterday to Pope Pius XII, who declared in his Christmas address last year that the excavations had definitely discovered St. Peter's burial place.

Today, archaeologists who took part in the work, explained how humble that burial was.

To reach it, workers had to channel deep under the foundations of the central altar of St. Peter's Basilica — the confessional — which always had been held to rise over the burial place of the first Pope and Prince of the Apostles.

Diggers came up under the place where the tomb was, and there discovered remnants of a wall with inscriptions upon it of pilgrims who had come there to venerate St. Peter. They also found coins dropped there through the centuries.

But they did not find an intact tomb.

Prof. Enrico Josi, one of the Vatican archaeologists who has directed the work, today dispelled any idea that an intact tomb with remains of St. Peter was found.

"No," he said, replying to a question, "but we can say that we truly found the spot where the Apostle was buried."

Josi said Peter "was buried in the bare earth."

Josi said fragments of bones were found but that nobody can say they are the bones of St. Peter."

"If," he said, "we had found a sealed sepulchre, we could have said they were the bones of St. Peter."

Highway Death Tempo Slows

[By The Associated Press]

The tempo of highway slaughter slowed down a little yesterday as the nation approached the 1,000,000th traffic fatality mark.

It reached 999,780 at 3:25 p. m. EST.

Extra driving caution and widespread severe wintry weather that kept many cars off the highways apparently were responsible.

The National Safety Council has forecast that the 1,000,000 mark will be reached around noon Saturday in a highway race with death that started Sept. 13, 1899.

On that date H. H. Bliss stepped from a trolley in New York City and was killed by a horseless carriage. He was America's first traffic victim.

The traffic toll rose steadily after that and now has reached the alarming total of more than 100 each day. The 1951 toll was 36,200 up to Wednesday midnight. The peak of 39,969 fatiities was reached in 1941.

The council has promoted M (for million) day in the hope that pinpointing the grisly milestone will slow the slaughter. Nearly all accidents, the council maintains, could be prevented by extra caution.

Ex-Maid Admits Former Affair

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—Tallulah Bankhead's former maid-secretary testified today she hiked the actress's checks only to regain money she'd already spent on the stormy stage star.

The ex-maid, Mrs. Evyleen Cronin, on trial on larceny and forgery charges, was asked:

"Did you raise those checks?'

"Yes," the 59-year-old defendant replied. "I raised them to buy things I bought out of my own money, but everything I raised I paid for."

She admitted she lived 14 years with a married man who was not her husband.

She identified him as John Cronin, a theater property man whom she met in 1919 when she was a stage dancer.

Charge Pending In Wife's Death

JACKSON, Mich., Dec. 20 (AP) — The state studied a possible manslaughter charge today against business executive Edward G. Spencer, whose 21-year-old wife froze to death after a drinking spree.

Prosecutor George Campbell said he was not decided on the exact charge. But he said it would involve "some form of manslaughter."

Spencer, 44 years old and the father of three children by a previous marriage, changed his story to the prosecutor this morning after first maintaining he was not with his wife the night before she died.

Boden, to certify to the Maryland Court of Appeals the entire record in the murder trial of Noah Earl Beeman, 24, Midland, at the expense of the State of Maryland.

Beeman's attorneys, Earl B. Manges and Thomas N. Berry, obtained the court order after filing a motion of appeal and a pauper's oath for Beeman in which he swore that he had no funds to pay for his appeal. The record was filed here Monday.

The Midland man has been sentenced to hang for first-degree murder in the stabbing death of his 18-year old estranged wife, Mrs. Donna Airhart Beeman, August 12.

Expenses of Beeman's trial here were met by the county. Now his appeal will be financed by the state in accordance with state law.

Merry-Go-Round Poll Shows Eisenhower Running Ahead Of Taft For Nomination

Two Weeks Straw Vote Puts MacArthur Third

Results of the first two weeks of the Washington Merry-Go-Round poll on the Republican candidates for president give Eisenhower 47 per cent of the total vote and Taft 36 per cent, Drew Pearson announced today. Governor Warren came third with 8 per cent and General MacArthur fourth with 7 per cent.

"Perhaps the most significant development," Pearson said, "was the way Taft is picking up strength in the Middle West, with Eisenhower far ahead in the traditionally solid South.

"Probably indicating the growth of isolation in the Middle West and a feeling that we should curtail our activities in Europe, Taft is running well ahead of Eisenhower in such states as Illinois, Indiana, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota.

"Taft is also running strong in the Rocky Mountain States," Pearson said, "leading Eisenhower in Idaho and Arizona, and running neck and neck in Wyoming and Montana. As was to be expected, Taft ran ahead of Eisenhower in his own state, Ohio, but, surprisingly, is running a tie with Eisenhower in the home state of Vice President Barkley, traditionally non-isolationist.

"Eisenhower's greatest strength is showing up in New England and the South, where there has never been strong isolationist sentiment," Pearson said. "In New Hampshire, where Ike will face his first test, he leads Taft by 54 per cent to 30 per cent, while in rock-ribbed Republican Vermont, Eisenhower shows up with 71 per cent of the votes. Only Rhode Island, Louisiana and Mississippi approximate or top Vermont in the support they give Eisenhower.

The Pearson poll on the Republican nominee is continuing. Participants can vote by sending a postcard to the candidate of their choice, box 1952, Washington, D. C.

Both Motorists Ruled Negligent In Egg Accident

Garrett County Crash Involved

A jury in Washington County Circuit Court has decided that both drivers in a collision which caused 39,610 eggs to be smashed on a Garrett County highway were negligent and refused to assess damages against either motorist.

Two Suits Filed

Two damage suits were filed as result of the accident, which occurred at McHenry, on U. S. Route 219 at McHenry, between Accident and Oakland An automobile driven by Jack Shendow, a chewing gum salesman of Johnstown, Pa., and an egg-laden truck owned by Paul Carpenter and Arthur Carpenter, Frostburg wholesale egg dealers, were involved.

The Carpenters filed suit in Garrett County for the loss of the eggs, valued at over $1,100, and damages to the truck, Shendow, who was confined in a Johnstown hospital for a month because of injuries, in turn filed suit in Allegany County for personal injuries and the loss of his employer's car, which was demolished in the crash.

Actions Consolidated

Both suits were consolidated and removed to Washington County Circuit Court for trial. Chief Judge Joseph D. Mish presided at the trial Wednesday. A mixed jury, six men and six women, deliberated an an hour and a half in determining which of the drivers had crossed the two white lines in the center of the road. This is the first term in the Hagerstown court in which women have served as jurors. The jury ruled that both drivers had crossed the white lines and were equally negligent.

The Carpenters were represented at the trial by W. Earle Cobey, this city, and Stuart E. Bushong of Hagerstown. Shendow's attorneys were William A. Gunter, this city, and Omar T. Kaylor, Sr., Hagerstown.

Both Motorists Ruled Negligent In Egg Accident

Garrett County Crash Involved

A jury in Washington County Circuit Court has decided that both drivers in a collision which caused 39,610 eggs to be smashed on a Garrett County highway were negligent and refused to assess damages against either motorist.

Two Suits Filed

Two damage suits were filed as result of the accident, which occurred at McHenry, on U. S. Route 219 at McHenry, between Accident and Oakland An automobile driven by Jack Shendow, a chewing gum salesman of Johnstown, Pa., and an egg-laden truck owned by Paul Carpenter and Arthur Carpenter, Frostburg wholesale egg dealers, were involved.

The Carpenters filed suit in Garrett County for the loss of the eggs, valued at over $1,100, and damages to the truck, Shendow, who was confined in a Johnstown hospital for a month because of injuries, in turn filed suit in Allegany County for personal injuries and the loss of his employer's car, which was demolished in the crash.

Actions Consolidated

Both suits were consolidated and removed to Washington County Circuit Court for trial. Chief Judge Joseph D. Mish presided at the trial Wednesday. A mixed jury, six men and six women, deliberated an an hour and a half in determining which of the drivers had crossed the two white lines in the center of the road. This is the first term in the Hagerstown court in which women have served as jurors. The jury ruled that both drivers had crossed the white lines and were equally negligent.

The Carpenters were represented at the trial by W. Earle Cobey, this city, and Stuart E. Bushong of Hagerstown. Shendow's attorneys were William A. Gunter, this city, and Omar T. Kaylor, Sr., Hagerstown.

The name may have been mixed up in handling, checking or transmission, it is believed.

'Black List', Free Travel Ban Irk West Germany

By GEORGE BOULTWOOD

BONN, Germany—(AP)—The West German government is trying to get rid of all restrictions on free travel—but the Big Three Western powers say "no."

That was the answer given to angry protests in the West German parliament by Interior Minister Robert Lehr.

Lehr said the governments of the United States, Britain and France insist that everyone entering or leaving Germany must have a visa.

Moreover, said Lehr, the Allies have a "black list" of people who were not to be allowed to come in or go out of the federal republic.

As an example of the difficulties the government was up against, Lehr said that United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy had turned down a German proposal that American citizens should be allowed to cross West German frontiers without visas.

Members of parliament complained the restrictions were damaging West Germany's tourist trade because foreigners did not need visas to enter most other West European countries for holidays.

Some deputies suggested the restrictions were due to fear of German commercial competition. Lehr confirmed that some foreigners who could have helped German trade had been kept out of the Allied rules.

Lehr said the government had had no positive reply to proposals it had made to other European nations to make unilateral pacts abolishing visas.

France, he said, gave the Germans a flat refusal. The French would not even consider the German idea of giving young people "youth passports" so they could freely visit each other's countries.

"So much for high-flown French proposals on European integration," a socialist deputy bitterly commented.

Allied power to veto the grant of visas was strongly critized and parliament removed from the new passport law a provision giving the Allies this right.

But it was the so-called "black list" that came under heaviest fire. This list of people who are not to be allowed to enter or leave Germany was handed to the Germans when the Allies passed over passport controls.

"Police state methods", grumbled the deputies, who attributed all sorts of sinister motives to the Allies.

The Allies explain it is necessary to maintain security of their forces. Unconfirmed rumor is that Hitler's name is at the head of the list.

Lehr told parliament that the "black list" was being taken up with the Big Three in the current negotions on a West German "peace contract" and that the government "will do everything to do away with restrictions impeding international travel."

The United States government also prints money for Cuba.

Red Satellites Crash Far East Markets

BANGKOK —(AP)— With bicycles and small cars, Russian-bloc countries are trying to wheel into the Far East sales market. Western countries, led by Britain and the United States are so far ahead in trade out here, however, that their competition with Hungary, Eastern Germany and Czechoslovakia does not make a lively race.

Siam (Thailand) is the best place to gauge world trade aspirations for the east because the Siamese market is wide open, money exchange is unrestricted and everybody competes on an equal basis.

That is not the case anywhere else in Southeast Asia. Singapore, Malaya and Hong Kong are involved with "sterling bloc" restrictions. Indochina remains an almost complete French monopoly as far as trade is concerned. Japan's importing is closely regulated by occupation authorities. Indonesia's trade is tied closely with Holland and tightly bound by the country's own restrictions.

In Siam since 1948, local agents have been handling cars, small engines, bicycles and sewing machines from Czechoslovakia which usually arrive on Norwegian or Dutch ships by way of Hamburg, Germany.

Stud books recognize seven colors in horses: gray, roan, dun, bay, brown, black and chestnut.

'Black List', Free Travel Ban Irk West Germany

By GEORGE BOULTWOOD

BONN, Germany—(AP)—The West German government is trying to get rid of all restrictions on free travel—but the Big Three Western powers say "no."

That was the answer given to angry protests in the West German parliament by Interior Minister Robert Lehr.

Lehr said the governments of the United States, Britain and France insist that everyone entering or leaving Germany must have a visa.

Moreover, said Lehr, the Allies have a "black list" of people who were not to be allowed to come in or go out of the federal republic.

As an example of the difficulties the government was up against, Lehr said that United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy had turned down a German proposal that American citizens should be allowed to cross West German frontiers without visas.

Members of parliament complained the restrictions were damaging West Germany's tourist trade because foreigners did not need visas to enter most other West European countries for holidays.

Some deputies suggested the restrictions were due to fear of German commercial competition. Lehr confirmed that some foreigners who could have helped German trade had been kept out of the Allied rules.

Lehr said the government had had no positive reply to proposals it had made to other European nations to make unilateral pacts abolishing visas.

France, he said, gave the Germans a flat refusal. The French would not even consider the German idea of giving young people "youth passports" so they could freely visit each other's countries.

"So much for high-flown French proposals on European integration," a socialist deputy bitterly commented.

Allied power to veto the grant of visas was strongly critized and parliament removed from the new passport law a provision giving the Allies this right.

But it was the so-called "black list" that came under heaviest fire. This list of people who are not to be allowed to enter or leave Germany was handed to the Germans when the Allies passed over passport controls.

"Police state methods", grumbled the deputies, who attributed all sorts of sinister motives to the Allies.

The Allies explain it is necessary to maintain security of their forces. Unconfirmed rumor is that Hitler's name is at the head of the list.

Lehr told parliament that the "black list" was being taken up with the Big Three in the current negotions on a West German "peace contract" and that the government "will do everything to do away with restrictions impeding international travel."

The United States government also prints money for Cuba.

William Booth was the founder of the Salvation Army.

He is about 30, has a wife and two children, lives in a mortgaged home, owns a refrigerator, radio and car, and earns $3,000 annually. (International)

"The Great A-Bomb Robbery"

By BOB CONSIDINE

(World Copyright 1951 by INS)

"GREAT A-BOMB ROBBERY" —

This article concludes the story of "The Great A-Bomb Robbery" by Soviet Russia.

The F. B. I.'s masterful job in tracking down Harry Gold, from the most meagre kind of description given to it by Dr. Klaus Fuchs in his British prison, ran into another blind alley when its agents called on Fuchs' sister and brother-in-law in Cambridge, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Kristel Heineman had been deeply shocked by the news that Klaus was, in truth, one of history's top spies: One whose work had more signifance than that of perhaps all the operators in the annals of espionage.

The Heinemans, in the opinion of the F. B. I., did their best to help the baffling search for the man whom Fuchs knew only a "Raymond."

They remembered that Klaus had a visitor at the Cambridge home in January, 1945 (Fuchs was home from Los Alamos on a brief vacation at the time, and turned over vital information to Gold.) Matter of fact, the same man had called twice earlier. They had liked him, they remembered, and the Heineman children adored him, for he brought them candy. The Heinemans understood that the visitor to Klaus was the father of two children (Gold was a bachelor) and while they could not be sure they thought his first name might have been James—with a last name that sounded as if it began with "Dav . . ."

FBI Turns To Chemists

The F. B. I. followed James Davidson, a New York City engineer who answered the physical description and who was absent from his job about the time Fuchs visited Cambridge in 1945 from Los Alamos. But when the Heinemans were shown Davidson's picture they shook their heads—yet Fuchs had picked the same picture out of a group of suspects and said, "I am pretty sure this is the man."

The F. B. I. turned its attention to chemists . . . chemists in general, queried every scientist with whom Fuchs had come in contract, searched mountains of records, studied Santa Fe hotels registers, railroad, airline and bus records.

The search narrowed to 1,500 photographs and dossiers, and lights burned through the night in the bureau's agencies through the country. Then it narrowed to a handful. Then, more and more, the agents kept coming back to a photograph taken of a witness before a grand jury of 1947—an innocuous little man named Gold. Harry Gold.

He was working now in a heart research program at the Philadelphia General Hospital and appeared neither surprised nor angry when the F. B. I. called to ask for an interview. He set a time, appeared, and was cooperative but mum. Would he allow motion pictures to be taken of him, to show to Fuchs? Certainly. Would he permit the F. B. I. to search his Philadelphia home? Certainly.

Search Finally Pays Off

The search was made at the home, 6823 Kindred Street, Philadelphia, on the morning of May 22, 1950, just after Gold's father and younger brother—wholly ignorant of the business—had gone to work. Gold suggested that the two agents first search his bedroom, where, he said, he would most likely conceal evidence.

For a long time the search was fruitless. Then an agent, for reasons he still does not understand, looked behind a bookcase, reached down and pulled out a folded map of Santa Fe. He opened it and found an "X" marked on Castillo Street bridge—where Gold had met Fuchs in June, 1945.

The blood drained out of Gold's face, for he had sworn to the agents he had never been west of the Mississippi.

"Mr. Gold, would you like to tell the whole truth?" an agent asked quietly.

Gold hesitated a moment, then almost shouted, "I . . . I am the man to whom Klaus Fuch gave his information."

(An hour later, F. B. I. agents in England wired that Fuchs had identified the figure in the films as his American contact.)

Gold's confession, which this writer has seen, is a document that runs well over 100,000 words. It is the most fantastically thorough, erudite, self-pitying, self-abusing document I've ever read. He contemplated selling it several months ago and giving the money to the heart fund, but interested editors backed off when the Department of Justice would not permit him to be interviewed for the purposes of clarifying the passages of the soul-baring.

Gold Never Joined Party

In short, Gold "did it" because he had been beaten up as a child by neighborhood anti-semitic toughs and, as he grew, came to believe that Russian control of the world would end anti-Semitism. He never joined the Communist Party because he disapproved of the "Bohemian" type of life of those members he met.

Gold said his philosophy was that "everybody should pass," a reference to his habit of staying up half the night, as a schoolboy, laboriously doing the lessons of schoolmates in different shadings of handwriting. When a Communist chemist named Black got him a job in the depression Gold was so grateful that he willingly began supplying the Russian with whatever information he could find about chemical processes.

Julius Rosenberg and his wife Ethel knew, after the arrest of Fuchs, that it would be only a matter of time for them. They knew Gold would be next, and Gold would tell of Sgt. David Greenglass and, through Greenglass, the Rosenbergs would be caught.

Rosenberg thrust $5,000 on Greenglass and gave him complete instructions for his escape to Czechoslovakia, via Mexico, Sweden and Switzerland, with intricate recognition signals to boot. Greenglass stayed put in his cheap New York flat, was caught, turned United States evidence, and got 15 years. His wife was not tried.

Rosenberg Apprehended

The Rosenberg's apprehended with packed bags, fought their case in court in a historic trial before Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman. The government's case was brilliantly handled by U.S. Attorney (now judge) Irving Saypol, assisted by the present U.S. Attorney Myles J. Lane, and Asst. U.S. Attorneys James Kilsheimer and Roy Cohn. The verdict: Guilty. The sentence (requested by Saypol and arrived at only after both Saypol and Judge Kaufman had made separate visits to their synagogues, for divine guidance): Death in the electric chair at Sing Sing. Judge Kaufman condemned their act as "worse than murder."

The Rosenbergs have appealed, and the government is preparing its answer. If they are put to death they will be known, if not abhorred, in American history as the first persons ever condemned to death for treason by a non-military tribunal.

The Russian spy ring in this country, though sorely dented, is not believed to be defunct. The scope of our work on atomic weapons and the H-bomb is now so vast that perfect security is hardly possible—though as a result of the great a-bomb robbery tremendous precautions are now taken to guard secrets and screen workers.

It is likely that Russia has a fair grasp of many of our innermost atomic secrets. Fuchs gave away a priceless store of knowledge. What he did not know may have been supplied by Dr. Bruno Pontecorvo, an associate of Fuchs' at Harley and earlier an associate of Dr. Allan Nunn May at Chalk River, Ontario. Pontecorvo disappeared with his wife and three children behind the iron curtain in September, 1950. He was, the 82nd Congress' Joint Committee on Atomic Energy said, "a human storehouse of knowledge about the Anglo-American-Canadian atomic projects."

The committee believes that the defections of Fuchs, May, Gold, Greenglass and the Rosenbergs speeded up the first test of the Soviet a-bomb by 18 months. Others believe they speeded it by 10 years.

Whatever their contribution was, they sold your freedom—for peanuts and a clay-footed ideal.

Tigers And Butterflies Coming Back In Japan

TOKYO.—(AP)—It may soon be legal again for Japanese parents to name their sons "tiger" and their daughters "butterfly."

This hasn't been possible since the government passed an ordinance outlawing old Chinese characters beyond 1,850 simple ones. Among the banned characters were such favorite Japanese names as tiger, butterfly, laurel, wisdom, dragon, stork, orchid and rabbit.

Public outrage was so great that a bill repealing the ordinance was passed by the lower house. The upper house has not voted yet, however, and the National Language Examination Committee has offered a compromise. It says it is willing to add 92 difficult Chinese characters covering all the favorites to the approved list if used for proper names only.

Escape Perils Jobs

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Escape of one of five prisoners who engineered the plot has led to the possibility of mandatory retirement of all guards over 60 at Western State Penitentiary here.

Not long ago the five prisoners overpowered a 78-year-old guard. One of the men made his way to the roof, down an improvised rope and to the ground where he fled. The other four convicts were recaptured on the roof.

Prison officials said guards can retire at 60. They added they are checking personnel records of all guards to determine who should be retired. Most of the 110 guards on the staff, however, are World War II veterans.

The Arabians originated the present system of numerals.

You can help them get home for Christmas—

BY LONG DISTANCE!

Give Service men and women a break by making your Holiday calls before Christmas Eve or after Christmas Day

This year, thousands of Service people will be spending Christmas away from home—many of them for the first time. And, of course, they'll be looking forward to calling their families and friends—by Long Distance.

This will mean a tremendous number of calls to be carried by Long Distance lines already crowded by the demands of National Defense. But each of us can do a lot to help out by remembering to make Long Distance calls before Christmas Eve or after Christmas Day.

"The Great A-Bomb Robbery"

By BOB CONSIDINE

(World Copyright 1951 by INS)

"GREAT A-BOMB ROBBERY" — This article concludes the story of "The Great A-Bomb Robbery" by Soviet Russia.

The F. B. I.'s masterful job in tracking down Harry Gold, from the most meagre kind of description given to it by Dr. Klaus Fuchs in his British prison, ran into another blind alley when its agents called on Fuchs' sister and brother-in-law in Cambridge, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Kristel Heineman had been deeply shocked by the news that Klaus was, in truth, one of history's top spies: One whose work had more signifance than that of perhaps all the operators in the annals of espionage.

The Heinemans, in the opinion of the F. B. I., did their best to help the baffling search for the man whom Fuchs knew only a "Raymond."

They remembered that Klaus had a visitor at the Cambridge home in January, 1945 (Fuchs was home from Los Alamos on a brief vacation at the time, and turned over vital information to Gold.) Matter of fact, the same man had called twice earlier. They had liked him, they remembered, and the Heineman children adored him, for he brought them candy. The Heinemans understood that the visitor to Klaus was the father of two children (Gold was a bachelor) and while they could not be sure they thought his first name might have been James—with a last name that sounded as if it began with "Dav . . ."

FBI Turns To Chemists

The F. B. I. followed James Davidson, a New York City engineer who answered the physical description and who was absent from his job about the time Fuchs visited Cambridge in 1945 from Los Alamos. But when the Heinemans were shown Davidson's picture they shook their heads—yet Fuchs had picked the same picture out of a group of suspects and said, "I am pretty sure this is the man."

The F. B. I. turned its attention to chemists . . . chemists in general, queried every scientist with whom Fuchs had come in contract, searched mountains of records, studied Santa Fe hotels registers, railroad, airline and bus records.

The search narrowed to 1,500 photographs and dossiers, and lights burned through the night in the bureau's agencies through the country. Then it narrowed to a handful. Then, more and more, the agents kept coming back to a photograph taken of a witness before a grand jury of 1947—an innocuous little man named Gold. Harry Gold.

He was working now in a heart research program at the Philadelphia General Hospital and appeared neither surprised nor angry when the F. B. I. called to ask for an interview. He set a time, appeared, and was cooperative but mum. Would he allow motion pictures to be taken of him, to show to Fuchs? Certainly. Would he permit the F. B. I. to search his Philadelphia home? Certainly.

Search Finally Pays Off

The search was made at the home, 6823 Kindred Street, Philadelphia, on the morning of May 22, 1950, just after Gold's father and younger brother—wholly ignorant of the business—had gone to work. Gold suggested that the two agents first search his bedroom, where, he said, he would most likely conceal evidence.

For a long time the search was fruitless. Then an agent, for reasons he still does not understand, looked behind a bookcase, reached down and pulled out a folded map of Santa Fe. He opened it and found an "X" marked on Castillo Street bridge—where Gold had met Fuchs in June, 1945.

The blood drained out of Gold's face, for he had sworn to the agents he had never been west of the Mississippi.

"Mr. Gold, would you like to tell the whole truth?" an agent asked quietly.

Gold hesitated a moment, then almost shouted, "I . . . I am the man to whom Klaus Fuch gave his information."

(An hour later, F. B. I. agents in England wired that Fuchs had identified the figure in the films as his American contact.)

Gold's confession, which this writer has seen, is a document that runs well over 100,000 words. It is the most fantastically thorough, erudite, self-pitying, self-abusing document I've ever read. He contemplated selling it several months ago and giving the money to the heart fund, but interested editors backed off when the Department of Justice would not permit him to be interviewed for the purposes of clarifying the passages of the soul-baring.

Gold Never Joined Party

In short, Gold "did it" because he had been beaten up as a child by neighborhood anti-semitic toughs and, as he grew, came to believe that Russian control of the world would end anti-Semitism. He never joined the Communist Party because he disapproved of the "Bohemian" type of life of those members he met.

Gold said his philosophy was that "everybody should pass," a reference to his habit of staying up half the night, as a schoolboy, laboriously doing the lessons of schoolmates in different shadings of handwriting. When a Communist chemist named Black got him a job in the depression Gold was so grateful that he willingly began supplying the Russian with whatever information he could find about chemical processes.

Julius Rosenberg and his wife Ethel knew, after the arrest of Fuchs, that it would be only a matter of time for them. They knew Gold would be next, and Gold would tell of Sgt. David Greenglass and, through Greenglass, the Rosenbergs would be caught.

Rosenberg thrust $5,000 on Greenglass and gave him complete instructions for his escape to Czechoslovakia, via Mexico, Sweden and Switzerland, with intricate recognition signals to boot. Greenglass stayed put in his cheap New York flat, was caught, turned United States evidence, and got 15 years. His wife was not tried.

Rosenberg Apprehended

The Rosenberg's apprehended with packed bags, fought their case in court in a historic trial before Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman. The government's case was brilliantly handled by U.S. Attorney (now judge) Irving Saypol, assisted by the present U.S. Attorney Myles J. Lane, and Asst. U.S. Attorneys James Kilsheimer and Roy Cohn. The verdict: Guilty. The sentence (requested by Saypol and arrived at only after both Saypol and Judge Kaufman had made separate visits to their synagogues, for divine guidance): Death in the electric chair at Sing Sing. Judge Kaufman condemned their act as "worse than murder."

The Rosenbergs have appealed, and the government is preparing its answer. If they are put to death they will be known, if not abhorred, in American history as the first persons ever condemned to death for treason by a non-military tribunal.

The Russian spy ring in this country, though sorely dented, is not believed to be defunct. The scope of our work on atomic weapons and the H-bomb is now so vast that perfect security is hardly possible—though as a result of the great a-bomb robbery tremendous precautions are now taken to guard secrets and screen workers.

It is likely that Russia has a fair grasp of many of our innermost atomic secrets. Fuchs gave away a priceless store of knowledge. What he did not know may have been supplied by Dr. Bruno Pontecorvo, an associate of Fuchs' at Harley and earlier an associate of Dr. Allan Nunn May at Chalk River, Ontario. Pontecorvo disappeared with his wife and three children behind the iron curtain in September, 1950. He was, the 82nd Congress' Joint Committee on Atomic Energy said, "a human storehouse of knowledge about the Anglo-American-Canadian atomic projects."

The committee believes that the defections of Fuchs, May, Gold, Greenglass and the Rosenbergs speeded up the first test of the Soviet a-bomb by 18 months. Others believe they speeded it by 10 years.

Whatever their contribution was, they sold your freedom—for peanuts and a clay-footed ideal.

Tigers And Butterflies Coming Back In Japan

TOKYO.—(AP)—It may soon be legal again for Japanese parents to name their sons "tiger" and their daughters "butterfly."

This hasn't been possible since the government passed an ordinance outlawing old Chinese characters beyond 1,850 simple ones. Among the banned characters were such favorite Japanese names as tiger, butterfly, laurel, wisdom, dragon, stork, orchid and rabbit.

Public outrage was so great that a bill repealing the ordinance was passed by the lower house. The upper house has not voted yet, however, and the National Language Examination Committee has offered a compromise. It says it is willing to add 92 difficult Chinese characters covering all the favorites to the approved list if used for proper names only.

Escape Perils Jobs

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Escape of one of five prisoners who engineered the plot has led to the possibility of mandatory retirement of all guards over 60 at Western State Penitentiary here.

Not long ago the five prisoners overpowered a 78-year-old guard. One of the men made his way to the roof, down an improvised rope and to the ground where he fled. The other four convicts were recaptured on the roof.

Prison officials said guards can retire at 60. They added they are checking personnel records of all guards to determine who should be retired. Most of the 110 guards on the staff, however, are World War II veterans.

The Arabians originated the present system of numerals.

Escape Perils Jobs

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Escape of one of five prisoners who engineered the plot has led to the possibility of mandatory retirement of all guards over 60 at Western State Penitentiary here.

Not long ago the five prisoners overpowered a 78-year-old guard. One of the men made his way to the roof, down an improvised rope and to the ground where he fled. The other four convicts were recaptured on the roof.

Prison officials said guards can retire at 60. They added they are checking personnel records of all guards to determine who should be retired. Most of the 110 guards on the staff, however, are World War II veterans.

You can help them get home for Christmas—
BY LONG DISTANCE!
Give Service men and women a break by making your Holiday calls before Christmas Eve or after Christmas Day

This year, thousands of Service people will be spending Christmas away from home—many of them for the first time. And, of course, they'll be looking forward to calling their families and friends—by Long Distance.

This will mean a tremendous number of calls to be carried by Long Distance lines already crowded by the demands of National Defense. But each of us can do a lot to help out by remembering to make Long Distance calls before Christmas Eve or after Christmas Day.

You'll get better service, too, for your calls will go through much more quickly. And you'll get even faster service if you place your calls by number.

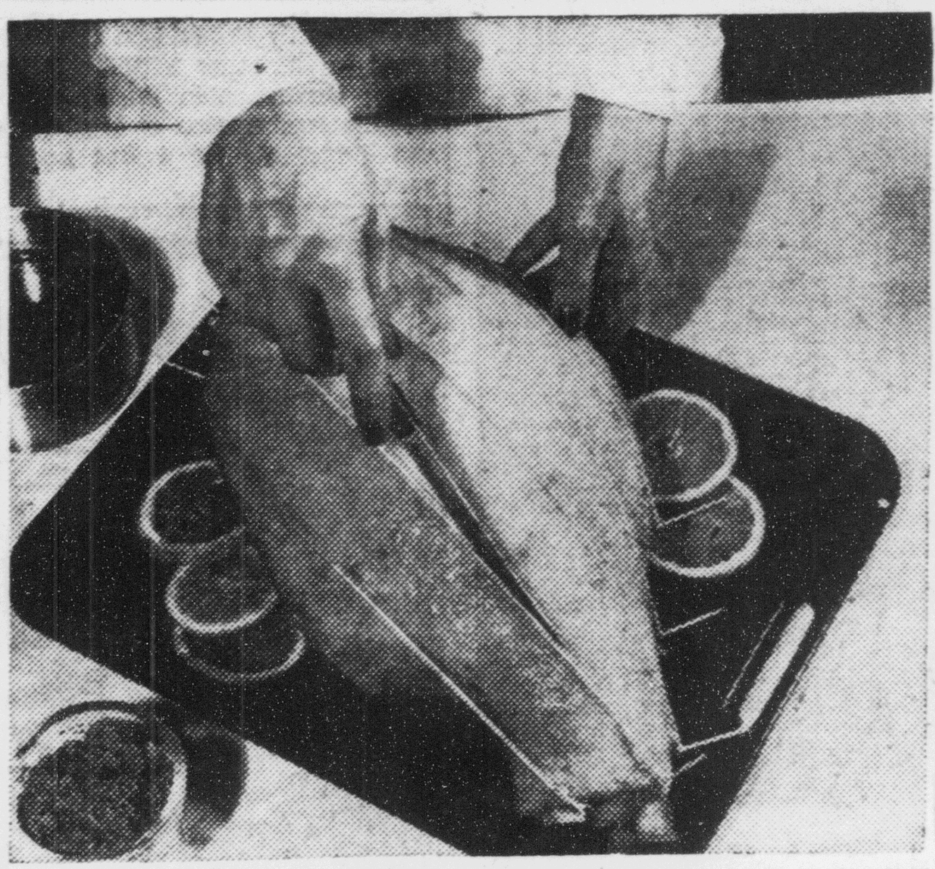
Ham For The Xmas Meal Is Thrifty, Festive, Fun

Pretty, pink color. Festive fragrance and flavor. Glistening, clove-studded glaze. No wonder ham is such a favorite for Christmas dinner, and many other holiday meals. This year the hostess gets an extra pleasure from serving ham. Because of the biggest pork crop in years and years, ham is selling at particularly attractive prices, most kind to the budget.

Ham is easy to plan for holiday meals, whether for the big gathering, or the smaller family. To streamline the ham to the size of the festive group, you can order a half ham or a whole ham, or an even smaller cut, the smoked picnic, which is the lower section of the shoulder or foreleg, and is similar to ham in appearance and flavor. It can weigh as little as 4 pounds. But really, whoever heard of having too much ham left over, when there are so many dozens of ways to use it in delicious dishes?

Choose Kind Of Glaze Family Likes Best

Ham is a lily that is customarily gilded, which is another way of mentioning the shining glaze that adds to the festivity of ham for the holiday season. This glaze can be made with varied ingredients such as brown sugar, mustard, honey, corn syrup, or mixtures blended with bread crumbs to form a thicker coating on the ham. A simple but effective fruit glaze is made by spreading apricot jam or orange marmalade over the top and sides of ham, and baking for 30 minutes. Or make a Spicy Glaze by combining ¾ cup dark corn syrup, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard, ⅛ teaspoon Tabasco, 2 tablespoons vinegar, a 2 inch piece of stick cinnamon and 6 whole cloves in a saucepan, and bring slowly to boiling point. Spread over the ham, baste at end of 15 minutes, and bake 15 minutes longer.



To score a ham for glazing, half an hour before the ham is finished cooking, take from oven and remove rind. Make diagonal cuts ⅛ inch deep from end to end about ½ to ¾ inch apart. Repeat, crossing these lines. Insert cloves in center of squares, and spread with desired glaze.

Ham Baking Timetable

Oven temperature: 300° F. to 325° F.

	Thermometer Reading	Minutes Per Pound
Ham, Whole, Uncooked, 10-12 pounds	160°F.	18-20
Ready-to-eat, 10-12 pounds	130°F.	10
Ham, half Uncooked, 6-8 pounds	160°F.	22-25
Ready-to-eat, 6-8 pounds	130°F.	10
Picnic (shoulder)	170°F	30-35

Times given are for ham at room temperature when started. Since heat penetrates a thick piece of meat like a ham very slowly, additional time should be allowed when meat has been taken from refrigerator a short time before roasting.

Many hams on the market carry cooking directions which should be used for that particular kind.

Christmas Eve

When you want a memorable though easily-prepared supper, is just the time to serve warmly inviting vegetable or cream of celery soup. Fleck it with sprigs of green parsley to carry the color scheme. A basket of hot cranberry muffins and a relish plate of cheese-stuffed celery and radishes makes happy eating with the hot soup. Have plenty of it to take care of all comers.

Special Meals Chicken Loaf

If you have been on the look-out for an outstanding recipe to serve when the "extra-special" guests are coming for dinner, Chicken Loaf with Mushrooms is an end-of-the-rainbow find.

Besides the super flavor and attractiveness of the loaf, it's made of canned foods and staples that may be kept in readiness for the unexpected occasions that often arise.

When the baked loaf is turned out on a serving platter, the top is prettily garnished with mushrooms. Surround it with sliced tomatoes and sprigs of parsley or watercress.

Chicken Loaf With Mushrooms

1-6½-oz can boned chicken; 1 can condensed cream of chicken soup; 1½ cups soft bread crumbs; 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento; 1 tablespoon parsley flakes; ¼ teaspoon salt; 2 eggs, slightly beaten; 1 4-oz. can mushroom buttons.

Chop chicken fine. Add other ingredients, except mushrooms. Mix well. Put a double row of drained mushrooms down the center of a greased loaf pan and cover with the chicken mixture. Bake in a moderate oven (375°F) 45 minutes, or until firm. Six servings.

Onions With Oomph

Christmas dinner calls for onions in some form and here's a good way to serve them. Take about 2 pounds of small white onions which have been cooked. Put them in a casserole, then pour on a sauce made with 1 can of condensed cream of mushroom soup blended with ¼ cup of cream and ½ cup of chopped walnuts. Sprinkle on about ¼ cup of shredded cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degree F.) for about 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

When the supply of fruit cake ends, simple cakes with easy toppings are a good choice for satisfying, economical desserts. Upside down cakes are always a favorite with the home cook because they require no icing. Especially colorful and good is a Turnabout Fruit Square with golden apricots used in the topping. Here's how to make it. Put two tablespoons melted butter or margarine into an 8-inch square baking pan, and sprinkle with ¼ cup brown sugar. Arrange 16 cooked apricot halves over the bottom. Make a quick-mix white cake and pour over topping. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) 30 to 35 minutes. It's luscious when warm, good when cold, plain or with a topping of whipped cream.

Cooking apples are quite plentiful. That's one good reason to give apple cakes, pies and other apple treats a prominent place in menus this winter. Good nutrition is another reason, especially when these baked goods are made with enriched flour to provide protein, essential B-vitamins and food iron.

Ham For The Xmas Meal Is Thrifty, Festive, Fun

Pretty, pink color. Festive fragrance and flavor. Glistening, clove-studded glaze. No wonder ham is such a favorite for Christmas dinner, and many other holiday meals. This year the hostess gets an extra pleasure from serving ham. Because of the biggest pork crop in years and years, ham is selling at particularly attractive prices, most kind to the budget.

Ham is easy to plan for holiday meals, whether for the big gathering, or the smaller family. To streamline the ham to the size of the festive group, you can order a half ham or a whole ham, or an even smaller cut, the smoked picnic, which is the lower section of the shoulder or foreleg, and is similar to ham in appearance and flavor. It can weigh as little as 4 pounds. But really, whoever heard of having too much ham left over, when there are so many dozens of ways to use it in delicious dishes?

Choose Kind Of Glaze Family Likes Best

Ham is a lily that is customarily gilded, which is another way of mentioning the shining glaze that adds to the festivity of ham for the holiday season. This glaze can be made with varied ingredients such as brown sugar, mustard, honey, corn syrup, or mixtures blended with bread crumbs to form a thicker coating on the ham. A simple but effective fruit glaze is made by spreading apricot jam or orange marmalade over the top and sides of ham, and baking for 30 minutes. Or make a Spicy Glaze by combining ¾ cup dark corn syrup, ¼ teaspoon dry mustard, ⅛ teaspoon Tabasco, 2 tablespoons vinegar, a 2 inch piece of stick cinnamon and 6 whole cloves in a saucepan, and bring slowly to boiling point. Spread over the ham, baste at end of 15 minutes, and bake 15 minutes longer.

To score a ham for glazing, half an hour before the ham is finished cooking, take from oven and remove rind. Make diagonal cuts ⅛ inch deep from end to end about ½ to ¾ inch apart. Repeat, crossing these lines. Insert cloves in center of squares, and spread with desired glaze.

Ham Baking Timetable

	Thermometer Reading	Minutes Per Pound
Ham, Whole, Uncooked, 10-12 pounds	160°F.	18-20
Ready-to-eat, 10-12 pounds	130°F.	10
Ham, half Uncooked, 6-8 pounds	160°F.	22-25
Ready-to-eat, 6-8 pounds	130°F.	10
Picnic (shoulder)	170°F	30-35

Times given are for ham at room temperature when started. Since heat penetrates a thick piece of meat like a ham very slowly, additional time should be allowed when meat has been taken from refrigerator a short time before roasting.

Many hams on the market carry cooking directions which should be used for that particular kind.

Christmas Eve

When you want a memorable though easily-prepared supper, is just the time to serve warmly inviting vegetable or cream of celery soup. Fleck it with sprigs of green parsley to carry the color scheme. A basket of hot cranberry muffins and a relish plate of cheese-stuffed celery and radishes makes happy eating with the hot soup. Have plenty of it to take care of all comers.

Special Meals Chicken Loaf

If you have been on the look-out for an outstanding recipe to serve when the "extra-special" guests are coming for dinner, Chicken Loaf with Mushrooms is an end-of-the-rainbow find.

Besides the super flavor and attractiveness of the loaf, it's made of canned foods and staples that may be kept in readiness for the unexpected occasions that often arise.

When the baked loaf is turned out on a serving platter, the top is prettily garnished with mushrooms. Surround it with sliced tomatoes and sprigs of parsley or watercress.

Chicken Loaf With Mushrooms

1-6½-oz can boned chicken; 1 can condensed cream of chicken soup; 1½ cups soft bread crumbs; 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento; 1 tablespoon parsley flakes; ¼ teaspoon salt; 2 eggs, slightly beaten; 1 4-oz. can mushroom buttons.

Chop chicken fine. Add other ingredients, except mushrooms. Mix well. Put a double row of drained mushrooms down the center of a greased loaf pan and cover with the chicken mixture. Bake in a moderate oven (375°F) 45 minutes, or until firm. Six servings.

Onions With Oomph

Christmas dinner calls for onions in some form and here's a good way to serve them. Take about 2 pounds of small white onions which have been cooked. Put them in a casserole, then pour on a sauce made with 1 can of condensed cream of mushroom soup blended with ¼ cup of cream and ½ cup of chopped walnuts. Sprinkle on about ¼ cup of shredded cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degree F.) for about 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

When the supply of fruit cake ends, simple cakes with easy toppings are a good choice for satisfying, economical desserts. Upside down cakes are always a favorite with the home cook because they require no icing. Especially colorful and good is a Turnabout Fruit Square with golden apricots used in the topping. Here's how to make it. Put two tablespoons melted butter or margarine into an 8-inch square baking pan, and sprinkle with ¼ cup brown sugar. Arrange 16 cooked apricot halves over the bottom. Make a quick-mix white cake and pour over topping. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) 30 to 35 minutes. It's luscious when warm, good when cold, plain or with a topping of whipped cream.

Cooking apples are quite plentiful. That's one good reason to give apple cakes, pies and other apple treats a prominent place in menus this winter. Good nutrition is another reason, especially when these baked goods are made with enriched flour to provide protein, essential B-vitamins and food iron.

Candy For Christmas

Candy is a holiday tradition, whether you serve it in your prettiest candy dish to holiday callers or send gift packages to especially favored friends.

The all-time candy favorite — fudge — is always on the list, so you'll surely welcome news about quick fudge mix. You see, with quick fudge mix you can make candy in just 4 minutes! That means more time for other holiday preparations.

This Christmas, treat yourself — use this candy making sensation! The attractive Christmas Candies shown in the photograph were made with the coconut flavor of quick fudge mix. For other candy variations, use the chocolate and penuche flavors of quick fudge mix too.

Coconut Christmas Fudge

3 ½ tablespoons cold water
1 package coconut quick fudge mix
Decorettes, silver dragees, colored sugar
Maraschino cherries

Keep water boiling in bottom of double boiler. Measure water into top part. Add entire contents of package of coconut quick fudge mix. Allow to stand without stirring about a minute. Then stir 3 to 4 minutes . . . until glossy. Do Not Beat. Pour At Once onto buttered pan, plate or waxed paper. Fudge should be about ¼" thick. When cool use cookie cutter to cut star, tree, bell, and other shapes. If cutters are not available, make patterns out of heavy paper and cut around them to obtain the desired shapes. Shape scraps into candy canes. Decorate appropriately with dragees, decorettes and cherries.

The ostrich is the largest bird in the world.

Christmas Dessert Suggestions

Christmas goodies are as much a part of the holiday as Santa Claus. Here are some old favorites, with new twists, that will add to the holiday cheer.

As festive as these desserts are, they are easy to make, and they won't keep you overlong in the kitchen and missing the fun. You can, if you wish, prepare them beforehand, ready to serve on Christmas Eve or for dinner or supper Christmas Day.

Cranberry Christmas Wreath

1 large orange, unpeeled
2 cups raw cranberries
1 cup granulated sugar
1 pkg. cherry or raspberry-flavored gelatin dessert
¾ cup boiling water
½ cup cold water
½ cup sherry wine

Wash, quarter, and seed the orange. Put through medium blade of a food chopper, together with the raw cranberries. Stir in sugar. Chill, covered, for several hours in refrigerator. Dissolve the gelatin in the boiling water. Add the cold water; cool; then stir in the wine. Chill this mixture until it starts to congeal. Then measure 1½ cups of the chilled cranberry relish, and stir well into the gelatin mixture. Turn into a 1¼-qt. ring mold, or into 6 individual molds, and chill until firm. Serve with greens and mayonnaise as a dessert salad, or serve on greens with cottage or cream cheese and crackers for dessert. Serves 6. Any leftover relish may be served as a meat, fish, or poultry accompaniment.

Alpine Bavarian Pie

1 baked 9" pie shell (with fluted edge)
2 tablesp. plain, unflavored gelatin
2½ cups milk
4 eggs, separated
1 cup granulated sugar
1 teasp. salt
2 sq. (2 oz.) unsweetened chocolate
1 cup thin cream
1 teasp. vanilla extract
Semi-sweet chocolate

Soak the gelatin in ½ cup of the milk. Meanwhile, heat remaining 2 cups milk in the top of a double boiler until bubbles form over the surface. Beat the egg yolks slightly; then stir in the sugar and salt. Next add the scalded milk slowly, while stirring constantly. Return to double boiler, and cook over hot, not boiling, water until the mixture just coats a spoon. Then immediately remove from heat; add softened gelatin and stir until it is dissolved. Now divide the mixture in two parts. To one half add the 2 sq. chocolate, melted. Cool both mixtures. Then and ½ cup of cream to the chocolate mixture, and ½ cup cream and the vanilla extract to the other mixture. Chill until beginning to thicken. Now beat the egg whites until stiff; then fold half into each of the mixtures. Pour 2½ cups of the chocolate mixture into the baked pie shell. Chill until beginning to set; then pour 2½ cups of the vanilla mixture (keep it covered at room temperature until used) over the chocolate. Stir the vanilla mixture into the chocolate mixture enough to make a streaked or marble effect. Then chill until firm. Just before serving, sprinkle shaved semi-sweet chocolate over the top of the pie. Makes 1 9" pie. Chill any leftover fillings, and serve in sherbet glasses next day.

Frohman Pudding

1 pkg. prepared vanilla pudding
1 tablesp. vanilla extract
1 teasp. almond extract
12 lady fingers or 24 strips of sponge cake 3" x 1" x ⅜"
¼ cup sherry wine
¾ cup strawberry or other preserves
3 egg whites
6 tablesp. granulated sugar

Prepare the vanilla pudding following the directions on the package. When cooked, remove from heat, and stir in the extracts. Spread ⅓ of this pudding mixture in the bottom of a 10" x 6" dish. Cover with ½ of the split lady fingers. Over these sprinkle 2 tablesp. of the wine. Then spread with ½ of the preserves. Arrange another ⅓ of the pudding mixture, then the rest of the lady fingers, sherry, and preserves in layers on top. Top with remaining ⅓ of the pudding. Next make a meringue of the egg whites and sugar. Heap this meringue over the top of the pudding. Then bake in slow oven of 300° F. for 30 min., or until brown. Serve cold. Serves 6.

Yuletide Punch

There's something particularly festive about a punch bowl. And it's the easiest way to entertain a large group of people. Attractively set up in a prominent place, a punch bowl is an invitation to your guests to serve themselves, and they will not hesitate, thus eliminating a portion of the work involved for the hostess.

A punch, well iced and colorfully garnished, is pleasing to the eye. Flavor is all important. A careful blending of fruit juices and ginger ale result in a sparkling punch full of good flavor. The ginger ale should be thoroughly chilled and should be added to the other ingredients just before serving. You might like to try this combination of fruit juices and ginger ale for a fine holiday punch.

Festival Punch

3 cups cranberry juice
1 cup orange juice
1 cup pineapple juice
½ cup grapefruit juice
2 large bottles pale dry ginger ale

Combine all ingredients; mix well. Pour over ice in punch bowl. Fill bowl with ice cold pale dry ginger ale. Garnish with orange slices. Yield: app. 30 punch cup servings.

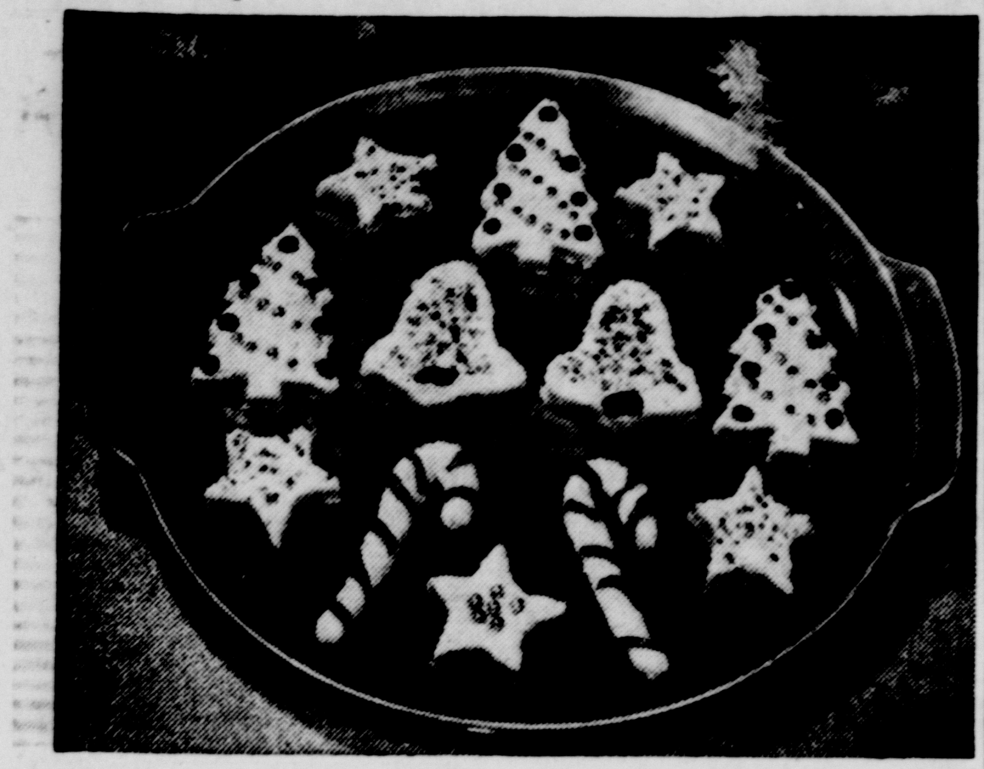
Candy For Christmas



Candy is a holiday tradition, whether you serve it in your prettiest candy dish to holiday callers or send gift packages to especially favored friends.

The all-time candy favorite — fudge — is always on the list, so you'll surely welcome news about quick fudge mix. You see, with quick fudge mix you can make candy in just 4 minutes! That means more time for other holiday preparations.

Coconut Christmas Fudge

3 ½ tablespoons cold water
1 package coconut quick fudge mix
Decorettes, silver dragees, colored sugar
Maraschino cherries

Keep water boiling in bottom of double boiler. Measure water into top part. Add entire contents of package of coconut quick fudge mix. Allow to stand without stirring about a minute. Then stir 3 to 4 minutes . . . until glossy. Do Not Beat. Pour At Once onto buttered pan, plate or waxed paper. Fudge should be about ¼" thick. When cool use cookie cutter to cut star, tree, bell, and other shapes. If cutters are not available, make patterns out of heavy paper and cut around them to obtain the desired shapes. Shape scraps into candy canes. Decorate appropriately with dragees, decorettes and cherries.

Alpine Bavarian Pie

1 baked 9" pie shell (with fluted edge)
2 tablesp. plain, unflavored gelatin
2½ cups milk
4 eggs, separated
1 cup granulated sugar
1 teasp. salt
2 sq. (2 oz.) unsweetened chocolate
1 cup thin cream
1 teasp. vanilla extract
Semi-sweet chocolate

Soak the gelatin in ½ cup of the milk. Meanwhile, heat remaining 2 cups milk in the top of a double boiler until bubbles form over the surface. Beat the egg yolks slightly; then stir in the sugar and salt. Next add the scalded milk slowly, while stirring constantly. Return to double boiler, and cook over hot, not boiling, water until the mixture just coats a spoon. Then immediately remove from heat; add softened gelatin and stir until it is dissolved. Now divide the mixture in two parts. To one half add the 2 sq. chocolate, melted. Cool both mixtures. Then and ½ cup of cream to the chocolate mixture, and ½ cup cream and the vanilla extract to the other mixture. Chill until beginning to thicken. Now beat the egg whites until stiff; then fold half into each of the mixtures. Pour 2½ cups of the chocolate mixture into the baked pie shell. Chill until beginning to set; then pour 2½ cups of the vanilla mixture (keep it covered at room temperature until used) over the chocolate. Stir the vanilla mixture into the chocolate mixture enough to make a streaked or marble effect. Then chill until firm. Just before serving, sprinkle shaved semi-sweet chocolate over the top of the pie. Makes 1 9" pie. Chill any leftover fillings, and serve in sherbet glasses next day.

Frohman Pudding

1 pkg. prepared vanilla pudding
1 tablesp. vanilla extract
1 teasp. almond extract
12 lady fingers or 24 strips of sponge cake 3" x 1" x ⅜"
¼ cup sherry wine
¾ cup strawberry or other preserves
3 egg whites
6 tablesp. granulated sugar

Prepare the vanilla pudding following the directions on the packape. When cooked, remove from heat, and stir in the extracts. Spread ⅓ of this pudding mixture in the bottom of a 10" x 6" dish. Cover with ½ of the split lady fingers. Over these sprinkle 2 tablesp. of the wine. Then spread with ½ of the preserves. Arrange another ⅓ of the pudding mixture, then the rest of the lady fingers, sherry, and preserves in layers on top. Top with remaining ⅓ of the pudding. Next make a meringue of the egg whites and sugar. Heap this meringue over the top of the pudding. Then bake in slow oven of 300° F. for 30 min., or until brown. Serve cold. Serves 6.

Yuletide Punch

There's something particularly festive about a punch bowl. And it's the easiest way to entertain a large group of people. Attractively set up in a prominent place, a punch bowl is an invitation to your guests to serve themselves, and they will not hesitate, thus eliminating a portion of the work involved for the hostess.

A punch, well iced and colorfully garnished, is pleasing to the eye. Flavor is all important. A careful blending of fruit juices and ginger ale result in a sparkling punch full of good flavor. The ginger ale should be thoroughly chilled and should be added to the other ingredients just before serving. You might like to try this combination of fruit juices and ginger ale for a fine holiday punch.

Festival Punch

3 cups cranberry juice
1 cup orange juice
1 cup pineapple juice
½ cup grapefruit juice
2 large bottles pale dry ginger ale

Smoked Picnic Shoulder Good Economy Buy

BAKED SMOKED PICNIC—Choose a smoked picnic for your next company dinner. Pork's plentiful and the shoulder cuts are among the bargain buys. You can glaze and decorate a picnic just as you would a ham. Bake in a moderately low oven of 325°F.

Neatest little package of goodness and economy on the market is a smoked picnic. First cousin to a smoked ham, the picnic comes from the fore-quarter of the animal, while the ham is from the hind-quarter. It is similar in appearance and flavor to a ham, but weights several pounds less.

Because of its size, a smoked picnic is ideal for the small family, and is as easy to prepare as a ham. With a brown sugar glaze and a few perky garnishes, a picnic is every bit as festive as ham for a company dinner.

The smoked picnic requires somewhat longer cooking time per round than ham because it is a less tender cut. Smoked picnics, sometimes called "cali hams," are available in two types — uncooked and cooked (ready-to-eat). Like a cooked ham, the ready-to-eat picnic requires only heating through — approximately 10 minutes per pound.

Baked Pineapple Picnic

Smoked picnic, 4 to 6 pounds
¾ cup brown sugar
pineapple slices
syrup from canned pineapple

Place picnic on a rack in a preheated 325 degrees F. oven. For an uncooked picnic, bake 30 minutes per pound; for a cooked picnic, heat 10 minutes to the pound. Half an hour before the end of the baking time, remove picnic from the oven. With a sharp knife, score fat (cut surface into squares or diamonds). Mix brown sugar with enough pineapple syrup to moisten slightly and spread over fat. Return to oven to glaze. The last ten minutes, increase the oven temperature to 400 degrees F. to finish browning. Serve garnished with a pineapple flower, made from a slice of pineapple cut into wedges to form petals, with a maraschino cherry in the center. Garnish platter with lightly fried pineapple half slices.

Leftover picnic may be used as you would use leftover ham. Here's a good way to use leftover ground smoked picnic:

Smoked Picnic-Banana Special

3 green-tipped bananas
prepared mustard
1½ cups ground leftover meat
¾ cup medium thick cheese sauce
¾ cup buttered bread crumbs

Peel bananas and cut in half. Place on bottom of greased casserole. Spread lightly with mustard. Cover bananas with ground ham and pour cheese sauce over all. Top with bread crumbs and bake for 30 minutes at 350 degrees F.

Other Uses For Leftover Picnic

Sliced and served on a cold cuts platter. Creamed, a la king style, and served in toasted bread cups. Scalloped with potatoes. Made into tasty sandwich fillings. Used with the bone, in making split pea or bean soup.

Tomato-Horseradish Sauce

Mix 2 tablespoons horseradish, 2 teaspoons prepared mustard, a dash of powdered cloves, a sprinkle of black pepper and 1 can (1¼ cups) condensed tomato soup. Heat thoroughly and serve hot with ham loaf or cold on ham loaf sandwiches.

Would you like to decorate your favorite cake with tinted coconut for a party occasion? To tint coconut, dilute a few drops of food coloring with a small amount of water and sprinkle over the coconut. Rub Coconut with your hands until it is evenly tinted.

DECK the table on Christmas day with a festive Ham Loaf. Made with tomato soup, it looks rosy, tastes scrumptious. A wreath cut from green pepper and pimiento decorates the top.

Ham Loaf Holiday Feast

Ham loaf.... golden rosy on top, oozing with meaty flavor....gives the feasty look and taste to your Christmas dinner. Color and flavor stand out in the loaf because it's made with condensed tomato soup.

For all its deluxe look, this meat combination lets you off easily on the grocery bill. The generous loaf takes care of 8 holiday-size appetites. If the guests at your Christmas dinner count higher, make two loaves.

You'll have no problem in planning the other foods to go with this main course. One suggestion—baked sweet potatoes, buttered green beans with almonds, cranberry sauce, celery and pickle chips. Finish with a typical holiday pie, flavored a new way—like coffee-pumpkin pie or mincemeat-pineapple pie.

Holiday Ham Loaf

1 ound ground veal; 1 pound ground smoked ham; 1 cup bread crumbs; ½ teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; 3 tablespoons minced green pepper; 2 eggs, beaten; ¼ cup ketchup; ¼ cup water; 1 can (1¼ cups) condensed tomato soup.

Combine ingredients in order given; mix thoroughly. Pack ham loaf firmly into a greased loaf pan; Bake in a moderate oven (350°F) for 1 hour. Pour off juice, loosen edges, and invert on platter. Garnish if desired with green pepper or pimiento or sliced olives and sprigs of parsley.

Make 8 servings. Serve with Tomato-Horseradish Sauce.

Even that last cup of turkey can be transformed into a good main dish called Turkey Whirls with Cranberry Sauce. Spread sliced cooked turkey evenly over a rolled-out biscuit dough, then roll up and cut into one-inch slices. Pour 1½ cups cranberry sauce into an 8-inch square pan. Arrange the turkey-filled biscuit whirls cut side down over the cranberry sauce. Then bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) 20 to 25 minutes. Serve hot, completing this thrifty meal with a green salad, coffee, and steamed pudding for dessert.

BAKED SMOKED PICNIC—Choose a smoked picnic for your next company dinner. Pork's plentiful and the shoulder cuts are among the bargain buys. You can glaze and decorate a picnic just as you would a ham. Bake in a moderately low oven of 325°F.

Neatest little package of goodness and economy on the market is a smoked picnic. First cousin to a smoked ham, the picnic comes from the fore-quarter of the animal, while the ham is from the hind-quarter. It is similar in appearance and flavor to a ham, but weights several pounds less.

Because of its size, a smoked picnic is ideal for the small family, and is as easy to prepare as a ham. With a brown sugar glaze and a few perky garnishes, a picnic is every bit as festive as ham for a company dinner.

The smoked picnic requires somewhat longer cooking time per round than ham because it is a less tender cut. Smoked picnics, sometimes called "cali hams," are available in two types — uncooked and cooked (ready-to-eat). Like a cooked ham, the ready-to-eat picnic requires only heating through — approximately 10 minutes per pound.

Baked Pineapple Picnic

Smoked picnic, 4 to 6 pounds
¾ cup brown sugar
pineapple slices
syrup from canned pineapple

Place picnic on a rack in a preheated 325 degrees F. oven. For an uncooked picnic, bake 30 minutes per pound; for a cooked picnic, heat 10 minutes to the pound. Half an hour before the end of the baking time, remove picnic from the oven. With a sharp knife, score fat (cut surface into squares or diamonds). Mix brown sugar with enough pineapple syrup to moisten slightly and spread over fat. Return to oven to glaze. The last ten minutes, increase the oven temperature to 400 degrees F. to finish browning. Serve garnished with a pineapple flower, made from a slice of pineapple cut into wedges to form petals, with a maraschino cherry in the center. Garnish platter with lightly fried pineapple half slices.

Leftover picnic may be used as you would use leftover ham. Here's a good way to use leftover ground smoked picnic:

Smoked Picnic-Banana Special

3 green-tipped bananas
prepared mustard
1½ cups ground leftover meat
¾ cup medium thick cheese sauce
¾ cup buttered bread crumbs

Peel bananas and cut in half. Place on bottom of greased casserole. Spread lightly with mustard. Cover bananas with ground ham and pour cheese sauce over all. Top with bread crumbs and bake for 30 minutes at 350 degrees F.

Other Uses For Leftover Picnic

Sliced and served on a cold cuts platter. Creamed, a la king style, and served in toasted bread cups. Scalloped with potatoes. Made into tasty sandwich fillings. Used with the bone, in making split pea or bean soup.

Tomato-Horseradish Sauce

Mix 2 tablespoons horseradish, 2 teaspoons prepared mustard, a dash of powdered cloves, a sprinkle of black pepper and 1 can (1¼ cups) condensed tomato soup. Heat thoroughly and serve hot with ham loaf or cold on ham loaf sandwiches.

Would you like to decorate your favorite cake with tinted coconut for a party occasion? To tint coconut, dilute a few drops of food coloring with a small amount of water and sprinkle over the coconut. Rub Coconut with your hands until it is evenly tinted.

DECK the table on Christmas day with a festive Ham Loaf. Made with tomato soup, it looks rosy, tastes scrumptious. A wreath cut from green pepper and pimiento decorates the top.

Ham Loaf Holiday Feast

Ham loaf.... golden rosy on top, oozing with meaty flavor....gives the feasty look and taste to your Christmas dinner. Color and flavor stand out in the loaf because it's made with condensed tomato soup.

For all its deluxe look, this meat combination lets you off easily on the grocery bill. The generous loaf takes care of 8 holiday-size appetites. If the guests at your Christmas dinner count higher, make two loaves.

You'll have no problem in planning the other foods to go with this main course. One suggestion—baked sweet potatoes, buttered green beans with almonds, cranberry sauce, celery and pickle chips. Finish with a typical holiday pie, flavored a new way—like coffee-pumpkin pie or mincemeat-pineapple pie.

Holiday Ham Loaf

1 ound ground veal; 1 pound ground smoked ham; 1 cup bread crumbs; ½ teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; 3 tablespoons minced green pepper; 2 eggs, beaten; ¼ cup ketchup; ¼ cup water; 1 can (1¼ cups) condensed tomato soup.

Combine ingredients in order given; mix thoroughly. Pack ham loaf firmly into a greased loaf pan; Bake in a moderate oven (350°F) for 1 hour. Pour off juice, loosen edges, and invert on platter. Garnish if desired with green pepper or pimiento or sliced olives and sprigs of parsley.

Make 8 servings. Serve with Tomato-Horseradish Sauce.

Even that last cup of turkey can be transformed into a good main dish called Turkey Whirls with Cranberry Sauce. Spread sliced cooked turkey evenly over a rolled-out biscuit dough, then roll up and cut into one-inch slices. Pour 1½ cups cranberry sauce into an 8-inch square pan. Arrange the turkey-filled biscuit whirls cut side down over the cranberry sauce. Then bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) 20 to 25 minutes. Serve hot, completing this thrifty meal with a green salad, coffee, and steamed pudding for dessert.

Judge Overrules New Trial Move

A motion for a new trial in a $20,000 damage suit was overruled Wednesday by Associate Judge George Henderson in Allegany County Circuit Court and he entered a judgement on the jury verdict for $5,000 in favor of the plaintiff.

Paul H. Slingloff, Frostburg, had sued Ralph E. Hutzell, Mt. Savage, for injuries sustained last January when Slingloff contended he was run over by Hutzell's car in Mt. Savage. The plaintiff was represented by Attorney Paul M. Fletcher.

At the close of a two-day trial, a jury returned a verdict December 7 in favor of Slingloff for $5,000. Attorney William A. Gunter, who represented Hutzell, filed a motion for a new trial December 8. Judge Henderson yesterday filed an opinion and order overruling Gunter's motion and entered a judgement for $5,000 against Hutzell mercury was up between 40 and 44 degrees.

In Bedford and Somerset (Pa.) Counties, sleeting was reported with temperatures between 20 and 30 degrees. At Deal, Pa., sleet was falling with the thermometer at 24 degrees last night.

Washington and Frederick counties were experiencing rather high temperatures accompanied by rain last night. Probably the warmest temperatures in Maryland were reported in Garrett County. Rain began there in early afternoon. Mercury was at the 40-degree point there late last night.

Sleet And Rain

In Allegany County, sleet was falling hard in all areas. Temperatures were generally in the high 20s. Between two and three inches of snow and sleet fell here yesterday.

Cumberland had 18 inches of snow with yesterday's layer. Buses, local and inter-city, were behind schedule, but the weather was only partly to blame. The huge swarm of Christmas shoppers loaded buses to the limit delaying the vehicles at every stop.

The new snow here came at a time when the City Street Department was still behind schedule in clearing snow. Mrs. Lucile Roeder, street commissioner, said a gear broke on the loading boom of the snow loader putting it out of commission until it was welded.

Mrs. Roeder said another part for the equipment has been ordered. She also added that the demand since Friday for cinders has resulted in a shortage of the ash.

Highways Hazardous

With the spotlight on Christmas weekend travel, Pennsylvania State Police at Bedford reported traffic heavy on the turnpike where conditions were termed "bad." Road crews were out on all highways in that section, and secondary roads were closed. Police said cars were skidding and the usual "fender scraps" were occurring hourly. Adding to the hazardous condition in that section were high winds between 35 to 40 miles per hour. No damage was reported in that section last night.

No accidents were reported in nearby West Virginia so far last night, but State Police warned roads were extremely dangerous.

State Police at LaVale, however, reported one accident near Corriganville. Joseph Hamburg, 35, Corriganville, stopped to scrape ice from his auto's windshield and was struck by another car driven by Lawrence Taylor, 33, Corriganville.

Taylor was traveling towards Corriganville with his car's front door open because of ice on the windshield, and while passing by Hamburg the door handle caught Hamburg in the hip.

Hamburg was admitted to Allegany Hospital and will be given X-rays today. He suffered a badly lacterated hip and other injuries. The door handle had to be taken from his hip at the hospital.

Rain, freezing on Cumberland's Christmas street decorations, caused a line of lights to break and hang a few feet above passing vehicles on Baltimore Street about 8:15 p. m.

Temperature about 8:30 p. m. yesterday was rising steadily but heavy rain was falling and freezing in the area.

VA Office Closed Monday

The Veterans Administration Office, Room 328, Post Office Building, will be closed Monday, December 24, and Monday, December 31. The office will be open during regular hours Saturday, December 29, and Saturday, January 5. W. L. Limburg, regional manager of Maryland, said yesterday.

Green Spring Sailor, Wife Die In Trailer Explosion

A Green Spring, W. Va., veteran of ten years in the Navy and his wife were burned to death Monday when an explosion and fire destroyed their trailer home near Chicago.

Douglas Arnold Roberts, 30, petty officer first class, was stationed at Glenview Naval Air Base and with his wife lived in the trailer in nearby suburban Morton Grove.

Witnesses said they saw Roberts enter the trailer Sunday carrying a small butane gas tank whose petcock had frozen.

A few minutes later the blast split open the trailer "like an egg."

The structure was enveloped in flames and by the time police and neighbors could approach the trailer, the bodies of Roberts and his wife were burned almost beyond recognition.

Roberts' foster mother, Mrs. Lillian Allen, of Green Spring, said she has been notified that Naval authorities are investigating the tragedy.

Roberts was a son of the late Lloyd C. and Marie (Douglas) Roberts and was reared by his aunt, Mrs. Allen, and uncle, the late Presley Allen.

Besides his foster mother, he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Willard Wilson, Green Spring; and three foster-brothers, Edward C. Allen, Green Spring; Sgt. Rodney F. Allen, stationed with the Army at Fort Bliss, Texas; Paul Allen, of Cumberland, and Seamon Lonnie B. Allen, gunners mate aboard the USS Hanson in Korean waters.

His wife was the former Miss Dorothy Hughes, of Norristown, Pa. They will be buried in Norristown Saturday at 10:30 a. m.

Roberts attended Romney High School and enlisted in the Navy in 1942. He went to metalsmith's school at the Jacksonville, Fla., Naval Air Base.

Residents Reminded To Clean Walks

Chief of Police R. Emmett Flynn warned yesterday that action will be taken if sidewalks are not cleaned of snow within 24 hours.

Acting on the receipt of numerous complaints, Chief Flynn said a city ordinance covers the cleaning of sidewalks. Fines range from $5 to $50.

He also pointed out that parked care are hampering the work of city equipment removing snow from streets.

When the Dutch owned New York some 300 years ago they named it New Amsterdam.

Ballistics Work Increase Here

The Allegany Ballistics Laboratory is increasing its experimental work on new propellants, according to a report of 1951 activities by the Hercules Powder Company.

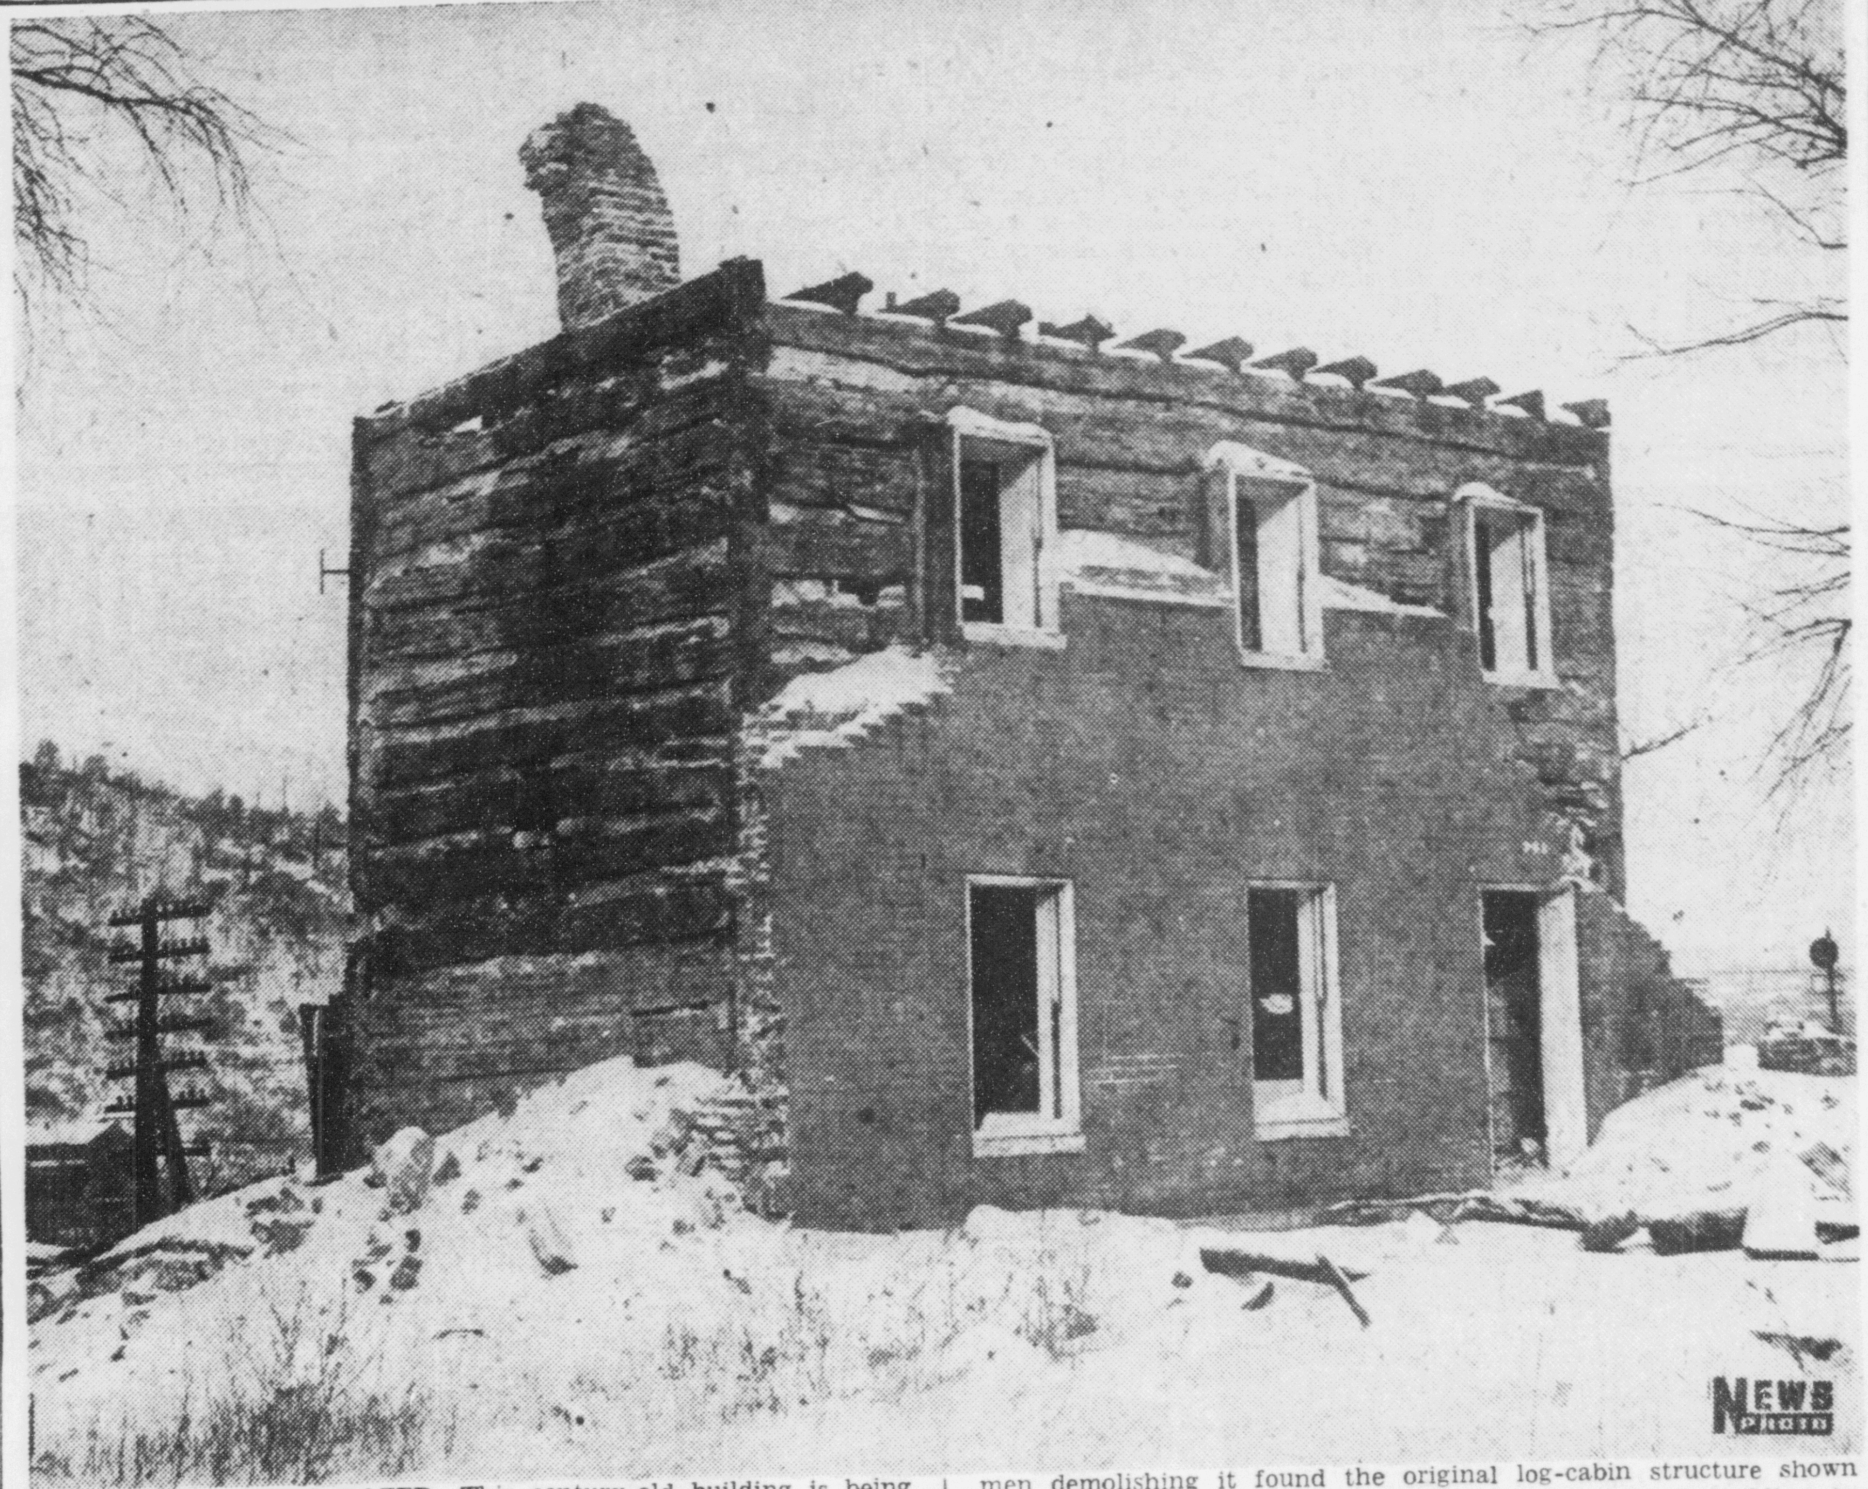
Employment at the plant at Pinto has jumped about 50 per cent during he past year as the result of the completion of a $750,000 production development line.

The new facilities were added to develop effecient operational methods for producing certain explosives which have been produced here on an experimental basis.

During 1951, Hercules chalked up the highest sales volume in its history, with net sales hitting the $200,000,000 mark.

Net earnings for 1951, however, dropped below 1950 as a result of tax increases. The drop in revenue was reflected in $3 a share dividend on common stock as compared to $3.30 in 1950.

The planet Uranus is too far away to be seen by the naked eye.



ANCIENT BUILDING RAZED—This century-old building is being razed in connection with the Thomas Street relocation project which will allow the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to expand its South End makeup yards. Standing just off Thomas Street, the building is part of what had been a nine-room brick house. Workmen demolishing it found the original log-cabin structure shown above. Additions had been built around the original building to expand it. The log house is believed to have been built in the mid-19th Century for the first local superintendent of the B&O. The railroad reached Cumberland in 1842.

Court Clerk's Office To Be Open Monday

Although virtually all other offices at the Court House will be closed Christmas Eve as well as Christmas day, Joseph E. Boden, clerk of Circuit Court, will keep his office open all day Monday.

Boden's office will be open until noon Saturday, as usual, and will stay open Monday until 4 p. m. It will be closed only on Christmas day. A similar schedule will be in effect over the New Year's weekend. Employes in the office have arranged a schedule so that only half will work Saturday morning and Monday each of the next two weeks.

Ballistics Work Increase Here

The Allegany Ballistics Laboratory is increasing its experimental work on new propellants, according to a report of 1951 activities by the Hercules Powder Company.

Employment at the plant at Pinto has jumped about 50 per cent during the past year as the result of the completion of a $750,000 production development line.

The new facilities were added to develop effecient operational methods for producing certain explosives which have been produced here on an experimental basis.

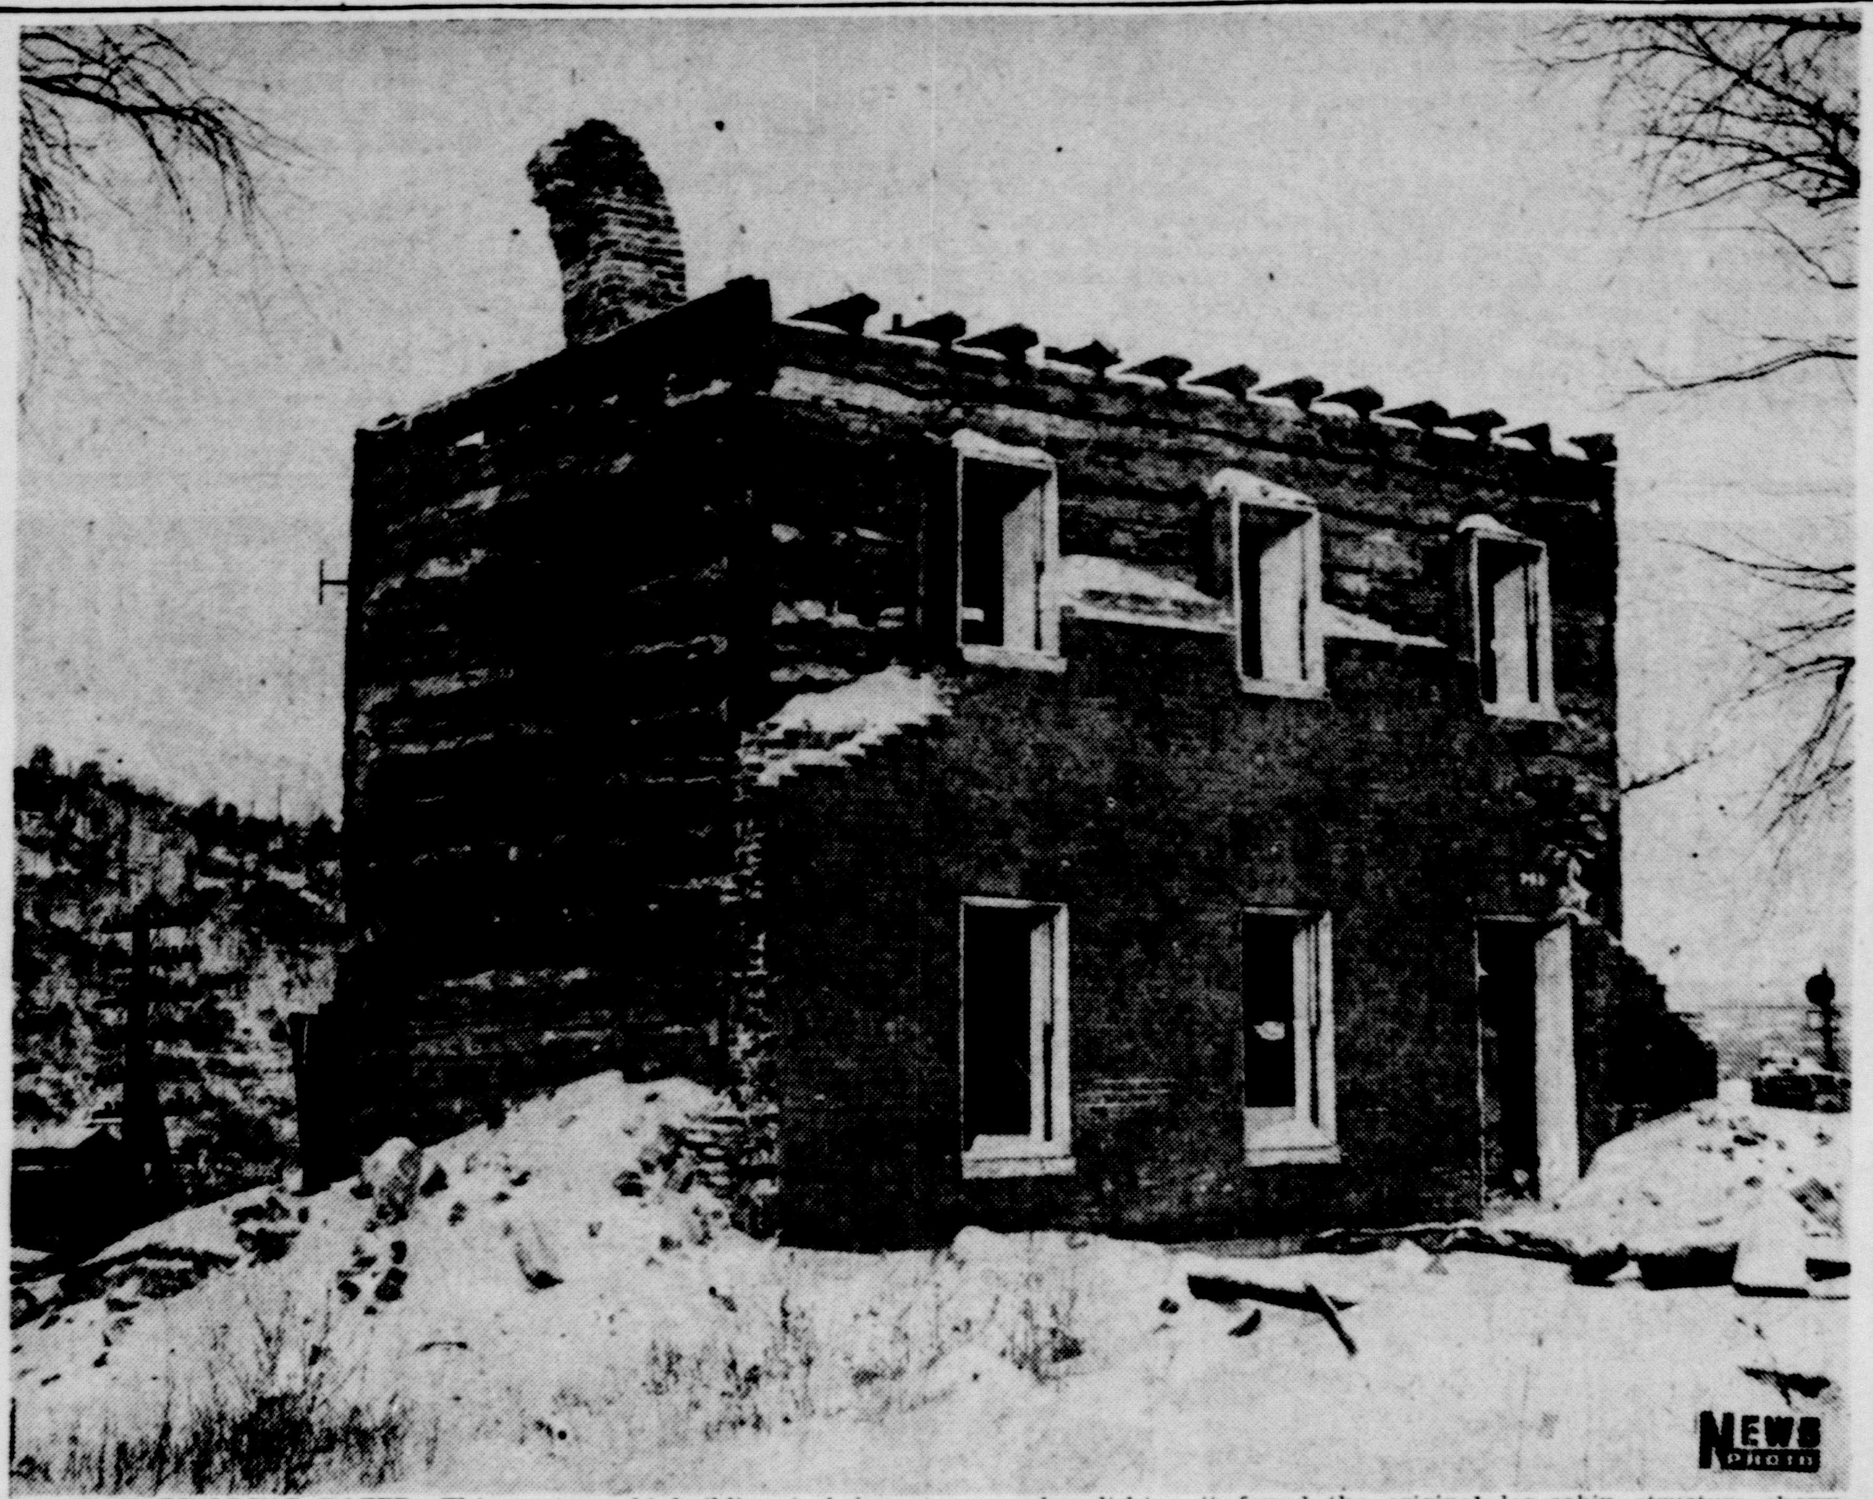
Net earnings for 1951, however, dropped below 1950 as a result of tax increases. The drop in revenue was reflected in $3 a share dividend on common stock as compared to $3.30 in 1950.

The planet Uranus is too far away to be seen by the naked eye.



ANCIENT BUILDING RAZED—This century-old building is being razed in connection with the Thomas Street relocation project which will allow the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to expand its South End makeup yards. Standing just off Thomas Street, the building is part of what had been a nine-room brick house. Workmen demolishing it found the original log-cabin structure shown above. Additions had been built around the original building to expand it. The log house is believed to have been built in the mid-19th Century for the first local superintendent of the B&O. The railroad reached Cumberland in 1842.

Court Clerk's Office To Be Open Monday

Although virtually all other offices at the Court House will be closed Christmas Eve as well as Christmas day, Joseph E. Boden, clerk of Circuit Court, will keep his office open all day Monday.

Boden's office will be open until noon Saturday, as usual, and will stay open Monday until 4 p. m. It will be closed only on Christmas day. A similar schedule will be in effect over the New Year's weekend. Employes in the office have arranged a schedule so that only half will work Saturday morning and Monday each of the next two weeks.

Celanese Corporation Will Offer Annual Fellowships

An organized program by Celanese Corporation of America to produce soundly-trained technical personnel for promising careers in the man-made textile fibers industry through the establishment of annual fellowships at four leading textile colleges of the country, was announced yesterday by George Schneider, senior vice president of the company.

"As the initial move in this program," Schneider said, "five graduate fellowships for advanced work in textiles have been created by the corporation. Two of these will be at Lowell Textile Institute Research Foundation, Lowell, Mass., and one each at North Carolina State College, Raleigh, N. C., Clemson College, Clemson, S. C., and Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, Ga.

"The dynamic nature of the chemical fibers industry demands a recurring supply of adequately trained men who can make definite contributions to textile progress. We believe that a soundly conceived program of graduate fellowships is the most efficacious means to that end.

"Too often in the past, many textile school graduates have not been sufficiently trained in the fundamentals of science to pursue productive careers in the man-made fiber field. The need of broader training will now be accomplished by the Celanese Fellowship Program, which will particularly encourage students who have studied chemistry or chemical engineering.

"Our program is an organized and integrated campaign which has been adopted after consultation with leading educators of the country. We believe it is the first of its kind to be put in effect by a company in the man-made fibers industry.

"Until recently, graduate work in the field of textiles has not been emphasized, but due to the increasing scientific demands of the man-made fibers industry, textile schools are now recognizing the need of such programs to provide broader scientific training. Celanese Corporation of America, in support of this objective, is co-operating with the universities by developing its fellowships program."

Celanese Corporation of America, the world's largest producer of acetate fibers, previously had established fellowships in engineering and the basic sciences at several leading universities.

Prince Albert, husband of Queen Victoria, wore a double breasted broadcloth frock coat which was named after him.

"Longest" Spring Cleaning Job

NEW YORK — (AP) — It is quite a chore a clean the 530,000 square feet of tile which lines the walls of the new $80,000,000 Brooklyn-Battery tunnel, longest vehicular tunnel in the United States.

Water for the job is hauled and sprayed on by truck, and about 50,000 gallons in all are used, with about 8,000 gallons of a special cleaning solution. The brushes are wielded by a special crew, which does one of the four tiled walls in the 9,177-foot tunnel in three nights.

The tile lining of the tunnel needs a real scrub-down only once a year, in the spring. For the usual cleaning job the cleaning solution is spraying on one of the tiled walls by a slow-moving truck. A second truck, spraying water to wash off the lossened dirt and the cleaning solution. Only a single night is needed to clean the tunnel by this method.

Celanese Corporation Will Offer Annual Fellowships

An organized program by Celanese Corporation of America to produce soundly-trained technical personnel for promising careers in the man-made textile fibers industry through the establishment of annual fellowships at four leading textile colleges of the country, was announced yesterday by George Schneider, senior vice president of the company.

"As the initial move in this program," Schneider said, "five graduate fellowships for advanced work in textiles have been created by the corporation. Two of these will be at Lowell Textile Institute Research Foundation, Lowell, Mass., and one each at North Carolina State College, Raleigh, N. C., Clemson College, Clemson, S. C., and Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, Ga.

"The dynamic nature of the chemical fibers industry demands a recurring supply of adequately trained men who can make definite contributions to textile progress. We believe that a soundly conceived program of graduate fellowships is the most efficacious means to that end.

"Too often in the past, many textile school graduates have not been sufficiently trained in the fundamentals of science to pursue productive careers in the man-made fiber field. The need of broader training will now be accomplished by the Celanese Fellowship Program, which will particularly encourage students who have studied chemistry or chemical engineering.

"Our program is an organized and integrated campaign which has been adopted after consultation with leading educators of the country. We believe it is the first of its kind to be put in effect by a company in the man-made fibers industry.

"Until recently, graduate work in the field of textiles has not been emphasized, but due to the increasing scientific demands of the man-made fibers industry, textile schools are now recognizing the need of such programs to provide broader scientific training. Celanese Corporation of America, in support of this objective, is co-operating with the universities by developing its fellowships program."

Celanese Corporation of America, the world's largest producer of acetate fibers, previously had established fellowships in engineering and the basic sciences at several leading universities.

Prince Albert, husband of Queen Victoria, wore a double breasted broadcloth frock coat which was named after him.

"Longest" Spring Cleaning Job

NEW YORK—(AP)—It is quite a chore a clean the 530,000 square feet of tile which lines the walls of the new $80,000,000 Brooklyn-Battery tunnel, longest vehicular tunnel in the United States.

Water for the job is hauled and sprayed on by truck, and about 50,000 gallons in all are used, with about 8,000 gallons of a special cleaning solution. The brushes are wielded by a special crew, which does one of the four tiled walls in the 9,177-foot tunnel in three nights.

The tile lining of the tunnel needs a real scrub-down only once a year, in the spring. For the usual cleaning job the cleaning solution is spraying on one of the tiled walls by a slow-moving truck. A second truck, spraying water to wash off the lossened dirt and the cleaning solution. Only a single night is needed to clean the tunnel by this method.

Air Force Monkeys Tackle Problem For Atomic Fliers

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — (AP) — A band of monkeys and chimpanzees is training in Texas for an Air Force problem in radioactivity.

The problem is whether atomic radioactivity will have effects on mental abilities, and on seeing, hearing and muscular dexterity. The Japanese A-bombs showed nothing on these questions.

The Air Force School of Aviation Medicine here wants the facts for U. S. airmen who will fly atomic-powered planes. Radioactivity can leak from a damaged power plant and in a plane this is a close-up risk. There are similar accident risks when carrying an A-bomb.

The monkeys are trained in the school of aviation's primate laboratory at the off-campus research center of the University of Texas in Austin, less than 10 miles from here. They are in charge of Dr. Sylvan J. Kaplan, physiological psychologist, formerly of Yale University, and Dr. George B. Gentry of the University of Texas.

There are two chimpanzees from Yale, Cookie a female, and Elmer, and 24 Rhesus monkeys, who came fresh from jungles. The wild monkeys first learned to sit on the laps of attendants and take food from human hands in one to three weeks of one-hour-daily sessions.

These sub-humans act mentally good enough to show whether radioactivity may affect brains and skills. A chimpanzee occasionally learns a problem more quickly than a professor. This is not due to superior mental ability, but to the fact the human may delay his solution by thinking out several possible answers.

The monkeys' schooling will simulate three types of troops: Green, partly trained and fully trained. They will take varying amounts and types of radioactivity of the sort that military airmen may face.

This information also will be useful for the workers in peaceful uses of atomic energy.

Memory will be tested before and after radioactivity by various games. One is 15 blocks with a peanut for the monkey under one or more. The blocks differ in colors or in other ways. The monkeys memorize the blocks that give the peanuts.

Human brains damaged by accidents or surgical operations sometimes lose in ability to learn new things, but retain well what they had learned before the damage. If radioactivity has this effect, then it may be expected that well-trained troops will carry on satisfactorily.

Concept ability—the quality of being able to size up new situations—will be tested in somewhat complicated games. Locating a peanut will depend on recognizing certain oddities in form, shape or sequence.

A test for eyesight is cards ruled with black stripes, some cards all horizontal, others all vertical. The lines are made progressively finer until they almost merge. Very acute sight is required to recognize the fine stripes.

Chocolate beans were once used as currency in Mexico.

Messiah Transcriptions Will Be Played Monday

Those who were unable to hear the Cumberland Choral Society's rendition of Handel's "Messiah" at the Fort Hill High School auditorium December 6 will be able to hear transcriptions of the entire 90-minute program Monday night.

Jack E. Platt, society director, said that the transcriptions will be played over WDYK beginning at 9:30 p. m. Monday.

Air Force Monkeys Tackle Problem For Atomic Fliers

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — (AP) — A band of monkeys and chimpanzees is training in Texas for an Air Force problem in radioactivity.

The problem is whether atomic radioactivity will have effects on mental abilities, and on seeing, hearing and muscular dexterity. The Japanese A-bombs showed nothing on these questions.

The Air Force School of Aviation Medicine here wants the facts for U. S. airmen who will fly atomic-powered planes. Radioactivity can leak from a damaged power plant and in a plane this is a close-up risk. There are similar accident risks when carrying an A-bomb.

The monkeys are trained in the school of aviation's primate laboratory at the off-campus research center of the University of Texas in Austin, less than 10 miles from here. They are in charge of Dr. Sylvan J. Kaplan, physiological psychologist, formerly of Yale University, and Dr. George B. Gentry of the University of Texas.

There are two chimpanzees from Yale, Cookie a female, and Elmer, and 24 Rhesus monkeys, who came fresh from jungles. The wild monkeys first learned to sit on the laps of attendants and take food from human hands in one to three weeks of one-hour-daily sessions.

These sub-humans act mentally good enough to show whether radioactivity may affect brains and skills. A chimpanzee occasionally learns a problem more quickly than a professor. This is not due to superior mental ability, but to the fact the human may delay his solution by thinking out several possible answers.

The monkeys' schooling will simulate three types of troops: Green, partly trained and fully trained. They will take varying amounts and types of radioactivity of the sort that military airmen may face.

This information also will be useful for the workers in peaceful uses of atomic energy.

Memory will be tested before and after radioactivity by various games. One is 15 blocks with a peanut for the monkey under one or more. The blocks differ in colors or in other ways. The monkeys memorize the blocks that give the peanuts.

Human brains damaged by accidents or surgical operations sometimes lose in ability to learn new things, but retain well what they had learned before the damage. If radioactivity has this effect, then it may be expected that well-trained troops will carry on satisfactorily.

Concept ability—the quality of being able to size up new situations—will be tested in somewhat complicated games. Locating a peanut will depend on recognizing certain oddities in form, shape or sequence.

A test for eyesight is cards ruled with black stripes, some cards all horizontal, others all vertical. The lines are made progressively finer until they almost merge. Very acute sight is required to recognize the fine stripes.

Chocolate beans were once used as currency in Mexico.

SANTA TO THE SICK

• • • • • •

He Makes Toys for Ailing Children

Asher A. Ache paints toys which he made himself.

By FRANKLIN BANKER
Central Press Correspondent

HELLERTOWN, Pa. — Santa Claus to dozens of kiddies in 18 states and several foreign countries is a big-hearted Pennsylvania Dutchman, traditionally merry and ruddy, who'd "rather make some kid happy than have a million dollars."

In some ways it is good that Asher A. Ache, 52, is a bachelor, for he would certainly spoil any youngsters of his own, and he probably wouldn't have gotten round to making the 6,000 toys which he has given to a multitude of less fortunate boys and girls in the last 25 years.

However, as it is, he works nights at a steel plant and delights in spending his days drawing, sawing and painting bright wooden toys such as Humpty Dumpty, a six-piece rabbit orchestra, Mother Goose characters, baby chicks, and — especially for the Christmas season — Saint Nick, snowmen and Nativity figurines.

These he carefully wraps and mails to children in orphan homes and hospitals, besides others who are invalids, blind or sick. In some cases Ache will also patiently write long letters to stricken tots. Many send back simple letters of thanks, which please him.

• • •

ACHE (pronounced "Ah-hee") watches the newspapers for polio cases and the like and never fails to send toys to the young victims. Some of his little friends bring a lump to your throat. There is pitiful little Jimmy, paralyzed, who is 18 but has the body of a six-year-old. Five shelves in the room in which he spends his life are filled with toys made by "Uncle Asher."

Pretty little Linda, blond and curly-haired, blind since her birth three years ago, "I held her for over an hour," Ache tenderly recalled. "She's got a lot of my toys ... she'll feel them all over with her sensitive fingers."

Hundreds visit his rural cottage at Christmastime to watch his strong hands fashion toys out of white pine boards. He is truly one of Santa's workers, working steadily by a coal stove, puffing his pipe, gleaming with anticipation as his kindly blue eyes look outdoors sometimes watching the first snowflakes.

ACHE'S toy idea grew out of a hobby. Talented in drawing, he began painting on wood the familiar characters of comic strips. Now he has over 800 of them, about eight inches high and mounted—a unique collection he values at $20,000.

There's been no stopping him since he thought of making similar toys for kiddies. Frequently his arthritis won't let him sleep long, so he arises after brief naps to bend over his whirring jig saw. He forgets to eat.

"You're happy when you're giving something away," he explains. "If I had a million, I'd give it all away."

He is painstaking. He may do a drawing five times until it suits him. Some toys take 12 hours to cut out. Indeed, it was a 30-hour job to cut out a complicated subject like Santa in a sleigh drawn by three reindeer.

His toys fascinate a second generation. When he gave some to a family of three children, the father told Ache: "I still have the birdhouse you made for me when I was a kid." Ache had forgotten it, but the man exhibited the birdhouse as proof.

He delivers toys personally at nearby hospitals, which gives him an opportunity to visit the child patients.

More Highway Coffee Stops Are Urged

NEW YORK. — (AP) — Frequent "coffee stops" along the highways in the same leisure spirit that "coffee breaks" prevail in business and industry would go far to eliminate the tension that figures in traffic mishaps, according to Dr. Irmagene Nevins, Educational Consultant to the Greater New York Safety Council.

With the approach of the summer vacation season, and with the nation nearing the 1,000,000th traffic death, the months ahead will be a crucial period on the highways, requiring the utmost in individual caution, says Dr. Nevins.

Religion was the subject of most of the English literature before the Twelfth century.

Activity In New England

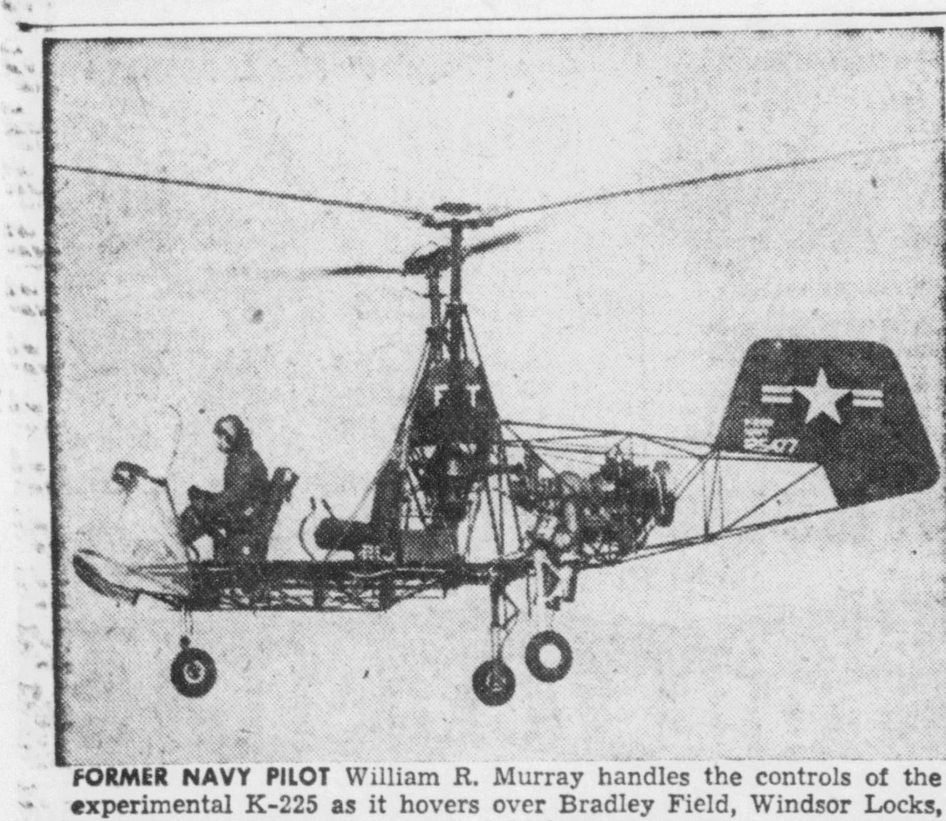
PITTSFIELD, Mass.— (AP) —Who says New England communities are static?

A directory company, beginning its canvass for the 1952 directory for this city of 53,000, estimates it will have to make 30,000 changes in its existing data.

Of course, explains the representative of the H. A. Manning Co., of Springfield, that doesn't mean 30,000 people moved. When a family moves and is replaced by another, or when a business changes its address, or offices, there is often a chain-reaction of development involving several entries.

The crust of a pie was called "the coffin" in early English cook books. Mince pies, long associated with Christmas, once were baked in coffin, or oblong, shapes to represent Christ's manger.

Fourteen comets were spotted during 1948. This is as large a number as ever has been found, and only the third time on record when more than a dozen were spotted in a single year.



FORMER NAVY PILOT William R. Murray handles the controls of the experimental K-225 as it hovers over Bradley Field, Windsor Locks, Conn. Powered by a gas turbine which develops 175 horsepower and weighs 250 pounds, the helicopter operates on low grade fuels such as kerosene or high octane gasoline. The power turns the shaft of the rotor blades. The Navy said the test was successful. (International)

HELLERTOWN, Pa. — Santa Claus to dozens of kiddies in 18 states and several foreign countries is a big-hearted Pennsylvania Dutchman, traditionally merry and ruddy, who'd "rather make some kid happy than have a million dollars."

In some ways it is good that Asher A. Ache, 52, is a bachelor, for he would certainly spoil any youngsters of his own, and he probably wouldn't have gotten round to making the 6,000 toys which he has given to a multitude of less fortunate boys and girls in the last 25 years.

However, as it is, he works nights at a steel plant and delights in spending his days drawing, sawing and painting bright wooden toys such as Humpty Dumpty, a six-piece rabbit orchestra, Mother Goose characters, baby chicks, and — especially for the Christmas season — Saint Nick, snowmen and Nativity figurines.

These he carefully wraps and mails to children in orphan homes and hospitals, besides others who are invalids, blind or sick. In some cases Ache will also patiently write long letters to stricken tots. Many send back simple letters of thanks, which please him.

• • •

ACHE (pronounced "Ah-hee") watches the newspapers for polio cases and the like and never fails to send toys to the young victims. Some of his little friends bring a lump to your throat. There is pitiful little Jimmy, paralyzed, who is 18 but has the body of a six-year-old. Five shelves in the room in which he spends his life are filled with toys made by "Uncle Asher."

Pretty little Linda, blond and curly-haired, blind since her birth three years ago, "I held her for over an hour," Ache tenderly recalled. "She's got a lot of my toys . . . she'll feel them all over with her sensitive fingers."

Hundreds visit his rural cottage at Christmastime to watch his strong hands fashion toys out of white pine boards. He is truly one of Santa's workers, working steadily by a coal stove, puffing his pipe, gleaming with anticipation as his kindly blue eyes look outdoors sometimes watching the first snowflakes.

ACHE'S toy idea grew out of a hobby. Talented in drawing, he began painting on wood the familiar characters of comic strips. Now he has over 800 of them, about eight inches high and mounted—a unique collection he values at $20,000.

There's been no stopping him since he thought of making similar toys for kiddies. Frequently his arthritis won't let him sleep long, so he arises after brief naps to bend over his whirring jig saw. He forgets to eat.

"You're happy when you're giving something away," he explains. "If I had a million, I'd give it all away."

He is painstaking. He may do a drawing five times until it suits him. Some toys take 12 hours to cut out. Indeed, it was a 30-hour job to cut out a complicated subject like Santa in a sleigh drawn by three reindeer.

His toys fascinate a second generation. When he gave some to a family of three children, the father told Ache: "I still have the birdhouse you made for me when I was a kid." Ache had forgotten it, but the man exhibited the birdhouse as proof.

He delivers toys personally at nearby hospitals, which gives him an opportunity to visit the child patients.

More Highway Coffee Stops Are Urged

NEW YORK. — (AP) — Frequent "coffee stops" along the highways in the same leisure spirit that "coffee breaks" prevail in business and industry would go far to eliminate the tension that figures in traffic mishaps, according to Dr. Irmagene Nevins, Educational Consultant to the Greater New York Safety Council.

With the approach of the summer vacation season, and with the nation nearing the 1,000,000th traffic death, the months ahead will be a crucial period on the highways, requiring the utmost in individual caution, says Dr. Nevins.

Religion was the subject of most of the English literature before the Twelfth century.

Activity In New England

PITTSFIELD, Mass.— (AP) —Who says New England communities are static?

A directory company, beginning its canvass for the 1952 directory for this city of 53,000, estimates it will have to make 30,000 changes in its existing data.

Of course, explains the representative of the H. A. Manning Co., of Springfield, that doesn't mean 30,000 people moved. When a family moves and is replaced by another, or when a business changes its address, or offices, there is often a chain-reaction of development involving several entries.

The crust of a pie was called "the coffin" in early English cook books. Mince pies, long associated with Christmas, once were baked in coffin, or oblong, shapes to represent Christ's manger.

WSB Approves Kelly Plant Wage Jump

Notificaton was received yesterday morning by Raymond C. Burkhart, president of Local 26, United Rubber Workers Union (CIO), from the Wage Stabilization Board for Region No. 4 at Richmond, Va., that the 13-cent an hour wage increase negotiated with the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company has been approved.

Burkhart said he received word of the approval in a telephone conversation with the WSB chairman who called from Richmond yesterday morning. Copies of the approval will be sent as soon as possible, according to Burkhart.

In a statement this morning Burkhart said:

"Word has been received by me that the joint petition for approval of a wage increase of 13 cents has been made by Region No. 4 WSB at Richmond, Va. This news was received by telephone and copies of the order will be sent as soon as possible by WSB officials.

"The settlement is in line with settlements made in the case of the Big Four rubber companies, namely, Firestone, Goodyear, Goodrich and U. S. Rubber.

"Seven cents of the increase will be retroactive to September 10, 1951 the date of the signing of the agreement with the company and the additional seven cents will be retroactive to October 16, 1951. Checks for the retroactive pay will be distributed as soon as possible."

Burkhart also said the union has been notified by the company that the plant will be shutdown Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday for the Christmas holidays. Some maintenance work will be done during the shutdown period. The Kelly ordinarily shuts down during the Christmas holidays and various maintenance projects are done during this period.

Union Votes To Open Pact

Members of Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), in meetings Wednesday and yesterday authorized the officers to reopen wage discussions with the Celanese Corporation of America, according to Playford Aldridge, union president.

The contract, negotiated last August, brought the average wage at the Celanese plant to $1.589 an hour and covered about 4,500 members of the union.

The pact provided that once during the life of the contract either party may request a general revision of the wage schedule. The revision date may be effective not earlier than February 8, 1952, upon 30 days notice.

Aldridge said that notification to the Celanese that the union wishes to reopen wage talks will be made by January 8 and that within 10 days after that a meeting is required with the company.

Caviar is prepared and salted roe of the sturgeon and a few other large fish.

WSB Approves Kelly Plant Wage Jump

Notificaton was received yesterday morning by Raymond C. Burkhart, president of Local 26, United Rubber Workers Union (CIO), from the Wage Stabilization Board for Region No. 4 at Richmond, Va., that the 13-cent an hour wage increase negotiated with the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company has been approved.

Burkhart said he received word of the approval in a telephone conversation with the WSB chairman who called from Richmond yesterday morning. Copies of the approval will be sent as soon as possible, according to Burkhart.

In a statement this morning Burkhart said:

"Word has been received by me that the joint petition for approval of a wage increase of 13 cents has been made by Region No. 4 WSB at Richmond, Va. This news was received by telephone and copies of the order will be sent as soon as possible by WSB officials.

"The settlement is in line with settlements made in the case of the Big Four rubber companies, namely, Firestone, Goodyear, Goodrich and U. S. Rubber.

"Seven cents of the increase will be retroactive to September 10, 1951 the date of the signing of the agreement with the company and the additional seven cents will be retroactive to October 16, 1951. Checks for the retroactive pay will be distributed as soon as possible."

Burkhart also said the union has been notified by the company that the plant will be shutdown Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday for the Christmas holidays. Some maintenance work will be done during the shutdown period. The Kelly ordinarily shuts down during the Christmas holidays and various maintenance projects are done during this period.

Union Votes To Open Pact

Members of Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America (CIO), in meetings Wednesday and yesterday authorized the officers to reopen wage discussions with the Celanese Corporation of America, according to Playford Aldridge, union president.

The contract, negotiated last August, brought the average wage at the Celanese plant to $1.589 an hour and covered about 4,500 members of the union.

The pact provided that once during the life of the contract either party may request a general revision of the wage schedule. The revision date may be effective not earlier than February 8, 1952, upon 30 days notice.

Aldridge said that notification to the Celanese that the union wishes to reopen wage talks will be made by January 8 and that within 10 days after that a meeting is required with the company.

Spinster Fights For Illegitimate Children Britons Left In Germany

By COLIN FROST

LONDON (AP) — A gray-haired spinster in her 50's is leading a campaign to get British soldiers to support the illegitimate children they left behind in Germany.

Miss Isabelle Granger, general secretary of the British National Council for the Unmarried Mother and Her Child, has found it a tough fight against apathy, prejudice and —toughest of all—the law.

However, now she has won the church and some members of parliament to back her. On their support she pins her hopes of getting a change in a law which, she says, means that a Briton can be charged in German courts if he damages German property "but he can't be charged if he ruins German women."

"We want the occupation law changed to allow German women to cite the parents of their children before a competent court," she said. "Then the court could make an order for maintenance against the father."

Miss Granger explained that the German maintenance order probably would not be valid once the father left Germany.

"Even so," she said, "it would certainly strengthen our hand when we go to these men in Britain and ask them to support their children."

Miss Granger collects about 400 pounds ($1,120) a year from former soldiers and occupation staff in this country. She sends the cash to a German bank which distributes it to the mothers.

She realizes she is touching only the fringe of the problem.

"I can't proceed with a mother's case unless she can give me evidence which I think would be accepted by a British court," she said.

"We have to be fair to the men as well.

"Hundreds of girls write to me but x x x we just can't do a thing without proper documentation.

"The real number of cases involved is legion. Nothing can be done to get to the heart of the matter while this shocking state of the law continues."

Last month the Anglican Church Assembly unanimously asked the government to start legislation compelling British soldiers to pay allowances for their German children.

Speakers at the assembly said a similar law was wanted in the American occupation zone. A letter was sent telling the American Episcopal Church of the British church's views.

One of Miss Grangers' strongest supporters is Richard Wood, Conservative member of Parliament and legless war veteran. His father, Lord Halifax, was wartime British ambassador to the United States.

Mandalay Ignores British Past

MANDALAY — (AP) — British influence retreated from this once royal city with the last Briton in 1942 and never came back. Today fabulous Mandalay which the British ruled for more than half a century is as Burmese as it was during monarchy times.

Its citizens have put the memory of the British so far behind they even pretend they have forgotten the English language. Less than a decade ago English was as widely spoken in royalist Mandalay as it was in cosmopolitan Rangoon, the country's capital since the British captured South Burma 129 years ago.

Burmese now show strong resentment if spoken to in English. "Speak in Burmese," they will tell you. "This is Burma."

It is rare to see a western-clad figure in over-heated Mandalay. Formerly those known as the "educated classes" donned for day wear the shirt and shorts popularized by empire builders. Evenings they wore white linen suits. Now the sight of trousers along Mandalay's dusty streets is unusual. Everyone in Mandalay wears the longyi, a gaudy tubular skirt not unlike the sarong. To do otherwise would be to invite not only derision, but possibly suspicion regarding one's bona fides as a good Burman.

State Baptists To Meet Here

The Maryland Baptist Union Association will hold its 1952 convention in Cumberland, the Chamber of Commerce announced yesterday.

The state convention to be held here October 22, 23 and 24, will bring several hundred visitors. Last year in Baltimore 690 were registered for the annual session.

Confirmation that the association will convene here was received by Anthony Saeli, manager of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce. It came from Dr. Clifton C. Thomas, general secretary of the State Mission Board of the Maryland Baptist Union Association.

The Chamber had previously extended to the state group an invitation to meet here and had offered the use of its facilities to assure the success of the convention.

Similar assurances were also given to Rev. O. Afton Linger, minister of the First Baptist Church of Cumberland, who had extended an invitation on behalf of Baptists in the Cumberland area.

"We are delighted to know that the association will convene here," Saeli said, "and we assure the delegates of a hearty welcome to our city. We will do everything possible to show that Cumberland is a friendly, neighborly community."

Spinster Fights For Illegitimate Children Britons Left In Germany

By COLIN FROST

LONDON (AP) — A gray - haired spinster in her 50's is leading a campaign to get British soldiers to support the illegitimate children they left behind in Germany.

Miss Isabelle Granger, general secretary of the British National Council for the Unmarried Mother and Her Child, has found it a tough fight against apathy, prejudice and —toughest of all—the law.

However, now she has won the church and some members of parliament to back her. On their support she pins her hopes of getting a change in a law which, she says, means that a Briton can be charged in German courts if he damages German property "but he can't be charged if he ruins German women."

"We want the occupation law changed to allow German women to cite the parents of their children before a competent court," she said. "Then the court could make an order for maintenance against the father."

Miss Granger explained that the German maintenance order probably would not be valid once the father left Germany.

"Even so," she said, "it would certainly strengthen our hand when we go to these men in Britain and ask them to support their children."

Miss Granger collects about 400 pounds ($1,120) a year from former soldiers and occupation staff in this country. She sends the cash to a German bank which distributes it to the mothers.

She realizes she is touching only the fringe of the problem.

"I can't proceed with a mother's case unless she can give me evidence which I think would be accepted by a British court," she said.

"We have to be fair to the men as well.

"Hundreds of girls write to me but x x x we just can't do a thing without proper documentation.

"The real number of cases involved is legion. Nothing can be done to get to the heart of the matter while this shocking state of the law continues."

Last month the Anglican Church Assembly unanimously asked the government to start legislation compelling British soldiers to pay allowances for their German children.

Speakers at the assembly said a similar law was wanted in the American occupation zone. A letter was sent telling the American Episcopal Church of the British church's views.

One of Miss Grangers' strongest supporters is Richard Wood, Conservative member of Parliament and legless war veteran. His father, Lord Halifax, was wartime British ambassador to the United States.

Mandalay Ignores British Past

MANDALAY — (AP) — British influence retreated from this once royal city with the last Briton in 1942 and never came back. Today fabulous Mandalay which the British ruled for more than half a century is as Burmese as it was during monarchy times.

Its citizens have put the memory of the British so far behind they even pretend they have forgotten the English language. Less than a decade ago English was as widely spoken in royalist Mandalay as it was in cosmopolitan Rangoon, the country's capital since the British captured South Burma 129 years ago.

Burmese now show strong resentment if spoken to in English. "Speak in Burmese," they will tell you. "This is Burma."

Cliff Chambers Will Speak Here Jan. 27

Cards' Hurler To Be Dapper Dans' Guest

Southpaw Twirled No-Hitter In May While With Bucs

Cliff Chambers, of the St. Louis Cardinals, the only National League pitcher to hurl a no-run, no-hit game during the 1951 season, will be among the sports celebrities and speakers at the annual banquet of the Cumberland Dapper Dan Club, Sunday, January 27, at 6 p. m., at the Knights of Columbus Home, Paul Gallen, president of the club, announced last night.

Al Abrams, of Pittsburgh, national president of the Dapper Dan organization, advised Gallen that Chambers will be among the notables at the benefit affair, the proceeds of which will go to the Allegany County League for Crippled Children.

Clifford Day Chambers, 29, is a native of Portland, Ore., and came into the National League with the Cubs in 1948 from Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League.

Chambers was traded to the Pittsburgh Pirates by Chicago and pitched for the Buccos until last year when he was acquired by the St. Louis Cardinals in a player swap. His 1951 record was 14 wins and 12 losses. He pitched in 10 games for Pittsburgh and 21 for the Cardinals.

It was with Pittsburgh on May 6, 1951 that the 208-pound southpaw, tossed his no-hitter against the Boston Braves.

Chambers' record with three teams in the major leagues is 42 wins and 43 losses. He toiled in 189 innings last season and had an earned run average of 4.38.

David Kauffman, Cumberland attorney, will be master of ceremonies at the fourth annual Dapper Dan banquet.

Tickets are now on sale and may be procured from any of the members of the club's executive board.

Other celebrities on the program will be announced later.

HORSE DOPERS BEWARE

IPOH (AP)—The doping of race horses still is going on in Malaya and some horses and trainers are getting worried about it. They are offering rich rewards for information which would lead to the arrest of the dopers. Cortisone is said to have been used for doping the horses.

"OLD RELIABLE" of the Yankees, Tommy Henrich, who was dropped as a coach after starring as an outfielder for years, has joined his former teammate, Joe DiMaggio as TV announcer. (International)

Jaspers Win, 69-50

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP) — Manhattan's Jaspers pulled a mild upset tonight, soundly thrashing North Carolina State, 69-50, at Madison Square Garden. A crowd of some 9,000 saw the Jaspers snap a 26-26 tie with 10 straight points to take a 36-26 halftime lead which they nursed throughout the second half.

HIS FOURTH TEAM

BOSTON (AP)—John (Jack) Cusick, shortstop recently obtained by the Boston Braves from the Chicago Cubs, now is with his fourth major league team. The Phillies signed him originally and the Cardinals drafted him in 1948. In 1946 he played third base for Americus, Ga., but the Braves will give him a thorough trial at short.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 20 (AP) — West Virginia broke a close contest wide open just before the first half ended tonight and went on to hand William and Mary's touring basketball squad an 87-66 licking.

Terps Are Considered For Grid Game Nov. 15

OXFORD, Miss., Dec. 20—(AP)—C. M. (Tad) Smith, athletic director at the University of Mississippi, said today that the University of Maryland is among four football teams being considered for a game here Nov. 15, 1952.

"We have no objection to playing Maryland," he said. "It's a good ball team and a good school."

Southpaw Twirled No-Hitter In May While With Bucs

Cliff Chambers, of the St. Louis Cardinals, the only National League pitcher to hurl a no-run, no-hit game during the 1951 season, will be among the sports celebrities and speakers at the annual banquet of the Cumberland Dapper Dan Club, Sunday, January 27, at 6 p. m., at the Knights of Columbus Home, Paul Gallen, president of the club, announced last night.

Al Abrams, of Pittsburgh, national president of the Dapper Dan organization, advised Gallen that Chambers will be among the notables at the benefit affair, the proceeds of which will go to the Allegany County League for Crippled Children.

Clifford Day Chambers, 29, is a native of Portland, Ore., and came into the National League with the Cubs in 1948 from Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League.

Chambers was traded to the Pittsburgh Pirates by Chicago and pitched for the Buccos until last year when he was acquired by the St. Louis Cardinals in a player swap. His 1951 record was 14 wins and 12 losses. He pitched in 10 games for Pittsburgh and 21 for the Cardinals.

It was with Pittsburgh on May 6, 1951 that the 208-pound southpaw, tossed his no-hitter against the Boston Braves.

Chambers' record with three teams in the major leagues is 42 wins and 43 losses. He toiled in 189 innings last season and had an earned run average of 4.38.

David Kauffman, Cumberland attorney, will be master of ceremonies at the fourth annual Dapper Dan banquet.

Tickets are now on sale and may be procured from any of the members of the club's executive board.

Other celebrities on the program will be announced later.

West Virginia Whips Indians

William And Mary Suffers 87-66 Loss

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 20 (AP) — West Virginia broke a close contest wide open just before the first half ended tonight and went on to hand William and Mary's touring basketball squad an 87-66 licking.

A set shot from the side by Harry (Moo) Moore which snapped a 35-35 deadlock set the Mountaineers in motion. Tip-ins by Mark Workman and Moore and a free throw by Mac Isner quickly built the WVU halftime edge to 42-35.

The Mountaineers, battled tooth and nail in the early stages by the hot-shooting Indians, never were in trouble thereafter. Workman finished with 20 points to take individual honors, but he had considerable help.

Moore and Jim Sottile each chipped in with 19 in perhaps the best exhibition of team play in Coach Robert N. (Red) Brown's two seasons at the West Virginia helm.

The victory ran West Virginia's overall mark to 5-1 and its conference record to 4-1. William and Mary, losing its fifth game against three victories saw its Conference showing slip to 1-2. Lineups:

Victorious over Moorefield (55-39) after dropping the opener to Hagerstown (39-35), Fort Hill High School's Sentinels will play their third straight game of the season at home tonight with Ridgeley High School's Blackhawks providing the opposition.

It will also be the third start for Coach Ralph Poling's basketeers who have lost to the Alumni 49-46, Beall 49-34 and are the shortenders in tonight's tilt.

Ridgeley and Fort Hill Jayvee quints will collide in the opener of tonight's dual bill at 6:45 o'clock. The main attraction, billed for 8 o'clock, will be officiated by Clifton Van Roby and Bob Pence. Joe Wagner and Joe Wolfe will do the whistling in the opener.

"We have one postponed game already and we'd like to get this Altoona game out of the way," Brother Joseph, director of athletics at LaSalle, stated last night.

The postponed game is with Bruce High School and this game has been rescheduled for December 27 in Westernport.

Mathias Suffers Injury To Ankle

PALO ALTO, Calif., Dec. 20 (AP)—Fullback Bob Mathias sprained his ankle today in a day of bad luck for the Rose-Bowl bound Stanford Indians.

Mathias, the 204-pound 6-foot 3-inch olympic decathlon champion, will be out of heavy running practice until after Christmas, coach Chuck Taylor said.

Taylor said he hoped Mathias will be running at full speed again when practice is resumed at Arrowhead Springs Dec. 26.

First string offensive tackle Jack Broderick was out with virus pneumonia and will be out of uniform at least until after Christmas, Taylor said.

To top off the Stanford troubles, half back Eric Southworth, turned in his uniform. Southworth's knee, injured earlier this season, failed to respond to treatment.

Jayhawks' Star Leads Nation's Point Scorers

Clyde Lovellette's Average Is 28.6

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—Clyde Lovellette, Kansas University's towering center, is off in front in the scramble for the 1951-52 basketball season's college individual scoring title.

The unbeaten Jayhawks' 6-9, 235-pound senior has compiled a 28.6-point average through his first five games, according to figures released today by the NCAA Service Bureau. Lovellette ranked fifth last year with a 22.8 average.

A 42-point spree against Southern Methodist last Friday — the single game high to date—helped Lovellette take a slim lead over Ed Miller of Syracuse. Miller, an inch shorter than Lovellette, owns an even 27-point average. He has rung up 81 points in three games to Kansas Clyde's 143 in five.

Nick Kladis, 6-3 forward for Loyola University of Chicago, is third with a 26-point average in four contests. Dayton's Don (Monk) Meineke, last season's top field goal shooter, holds down fifth position with a 25.1 mark. The 6-6 center has the highest point total, 176 in seven games.

Injury Halts Mikvy

Bill Mikvy of Temple, leading scorer of the nation last year with a record 29.3 average, is not among the top 50 point makers. The 6-4 Owl center, hampered by an elbow injury, has not been playing full time and has rung up a 15.7 average for six games.

Dick Groat of Duke, Mark Workman of West Virginia and Jay Handlan of Washington and Lee, who along with Mikvy and Lovellette comprised last season's top five scorers, are all playing again this winter. Groat currently is lodged in seventh place with a 24.5 average. Workman is right behind him at 23.6. Handlan is off to a slower start, holding down 30th position with an 18.4 mark.

A 19-year-old freshman, Dick Howard of Western Reserve, currently is the hottest floor shooter. The Red Cats' 6-6 center has made good on 23 of 35 shots from the court for a spectacular 65.7 percentage. Bob Houbergs of Washington has hit on 57.4 of his heaves, sinking 27 of 47 to rank second.

Lee Brawley Is 8th

South Carolinas Don Cox owns the only perfect free throw mark among those who have tossed in 10 or more. He's made 10 of 10. Kladis and Jack Turner of Auburn are tied for the runnerup spot with 94.4 percentages. Each has sunk 17 of 18. Maryland's Lee Brawley is in eighth place with 10 for 11, a 90.9 percentage.

Bob Peterson of Oregon leads in rebounding with an average of 21.8 recoveries per game. Groat paces the playmakers with an average of nine scoring assists per game.

Marshall Says Halas Blocked Anderson Deal

"Hunk' Still Sought As Redskins' Coach

George Halas

Marshall's statement came on the heels of an announcement by Anderson, veteran Bears' line coach, that he has quit football to devote his full time to the steel business.

Marshall, who paused in Chicago between trains en route to Los Angeles, said:

"George Halas won't let Anderson coach the Redskins unless he can get something for him. I offered Halas our second draft choice and he refused.

"Halas still holds an option on Hunk's services—and that's that."

Mickey Grasso, Washington Senators' catcher, has been fined this year to the amount of $110.

Columbia To Play Nine Grid Games

Kuharich Quits As Dons' Coach

Mentioned For Job Vacated By Lambeau

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20 (INS) —Joe Kuharich resigned today as director of athletics and football coach at the University of San Francisco.

Kuharich, mentioned as a possible successor to Curley Lambeau, coach of the Chicago Cardinals professional football team, said his resignation at USF will take effect January 15.

In a letter of resignation to the Rev. William J. Dunne, S. J., president of the Jesuit university, Kuharich said that his "five year association with the university has been most pleasant."

He added, however, that because there had been "no concrete proposal to discuss the football program and a future contract. . . I believe for the best interests of the university and my own personal future it is best to resign."

William "Bud" Kerr, line coach at USF, was considered the top candidate to succeed Kuharich as head coach.

FOUR OF THE leading 10 jockeys in the 1951 riding race are pictured. Charlie Burr, 17-year-old apprentice, has a commanding lead and it is doubtful if he will be overtaken for honors shared last year by Willie Shoemaker and Joe Culmone. (International)

Charley Burr Has Nine Days To Get 300 Turf Winners

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 22 (AP)—Jockey Charlie Burr failed to ride his 300th winner today in six attempts at Tropical Park, leaving the 17-year-old bootter one short of the charmed circle.

The soft-spoken dark-haired lad from Arkansas City, Kas., could finish no better than third aboard Grand Egyptian in the eighth, after his other mounts finished fourth, fifth or sixth in other races on the card.

Burr still has nine racing days left in the year and is almost certain to become the seventh jockey in American turf history to ride 300 or more winners in a year.

His feat is all the more notable because he missed approximately 75 days this year and was out of action most of that time with a broken wrist suffered in a spill. He started riding thoroughbreds only 16 months ago at Fairmount Park near St. Louis after four years on the quarter-horse circuit in Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

TOPPED BLUE DEVILS

DURHAM, N. C. (AP) — Herbert (Piney) Field, junior halfback from Martinsville, Va., had the top rushing average for the Duke University Blue Devils during the grid season. He gained 346 net yards in 45 attempts for a 7.7 average. Charlie Smith was the top rushing gainer with 493 yards in 95 rushes.

Tosses No-Hitter

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico, Dec. 20 (AP) — Earl Harrist, veteran right-hander recently acquired in the draft by the St. Louis Browns, pitched a no-hit, no-run game last night to give Caguas a 9-0 victory over Mayaguez in the Puerto Rican Winter Baseball League. It was the first no - hitter in the winter loop in three years.

Jayhawks' Star Leads Nation's Point Scorers

Clyde Lovellette's Average Is 28.6

CLYDE LOVELLETTE

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—Clyde Lovellette, Kansas University's towering center, is off in front in the scramble for the 1951-52 basketball season's college individual scoring title.

The unbeaten Jayhawks' 6-9, 235-pound senior has compiled a 28.6-point average through his first five games, according to figures released today by the NCAA Service Bureau. Lovellette ranked fifth last year with a 22.8 average.

A 42-point spree against Southern Methodist last Friday — the single game high to date—helped Lovellette take a slim lead over Ed Miller of Syracuse. Miller, an inch shorter than Lovellette, owns an even 27-point average. He has rung up 81 points in three games to Kansas Clyde's 143 in five.

Nick Kladis, 6-3 forward for Loyola University of Chicago, is third with a 26-point average in four contests. Dayton's Don (Monk) Meineke, last season's top field goal shooter, holds down fifth position with a 25.1 mark. The 6-6 center has the highest point total, 176 in seven games.

Injury Halts Mikvy

Bill Mikvy of Temple, leading scorer of the nation last year with a record 29.3 average, is not among the top 50 point makers. The 6-4 Owl center, hampered by an elbow injury, has not been playing full time and has rung up a 15.7 average for six games.

Dick Groat of Duke, Mark Workman of West Virginia and Jay Handlan of Washington and Lee, who along with Mikvy and Lovellette comprised last season's top five scorers, are all playing again this winter. Groat currently is lodged in seventh place with a 24.5 average. Workman is right behind him at 23.6. Handlan is off to a slower start, holding down 30th position with an 18.4 mark.

A 19-year-old freshman, Dick Howard of Western Reserve, currently is the hottest floor shooter. The Red Cats' 6-6 center has made good on 23 of 35 shots from the court for a spectacular 65.7 percentage. Bob Houbergs of Washington has hit on 57.4 of his heaves, sinking 27 of 47 to rank second.

Lee Brawley Is 8th

South Carolinas Don Cox owns the only perfect free throw mark among those who have tossed in 10 or more. He's made 10 of 10. Kladis and Jack Turner of Auburn are tied for the runnerup spot with 94.4 percentages. Each has sunk 17 of 18. Maryland's Lee Brawley is in eighth place with 10 for 11, a 90.9 percentage.

Bob Peterson of Oregon leads in rebounding with an average of 21.8 recoveries per game. Groat paces the playmakers with an average of nine scoring assists per game.

Marshall Says Halas Blocked Anderson Deal

"Hunk' Still Sought As Redskins' Coach

George Halas

Marshall's statement came on the heels of an announcement by Anderson, veteran Bears' line coach, that he has quit football to devote his full time to the steel business.

Marshall, who paused in Chicago between trains en route to Los Angeles, said:

"George Halas won't let Anderson coach the Redskins unless he can get something for him. I offered Halas our second draft choice and he refused.

"Halas still holds an option on Hunk's services—and that's that."

Marshall sought Anderson's contract early in the past season but the Bears demanded Paul Lipscomb, a tackle, in exchange.

Mickey Grasso, Washington Senators' catcher, has been fined this year to the amount of $110.

Columbia To Play Nine Grid Games

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—Columbia University will play a nine-game football schedule in 1952, including games with every team in the Ivy group and with Army and Navy.

The schedule:

Nov. 1, Cornell; 8, Dartmouth at Hanover; 15, Navy at Annapolis; 22 Brown.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20 (INS) —Joe Kuharich resigned today as director of athletics and football coach at the University of San Francisco.

In a letter of resignation to the Rev. William J. Dunne, S. J., president of the Jesuit university, Kuharich said that his "five year association with the university has been most pleasant."

Browns Given Six-Point Edge

Rams Expect 70,000 For Pro Grid Playoff

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20 (AP)—Bright skies and prospects of good weather for the rest of the week gave impetus today to workouts of the Cleveland Browns and the Los Angeles Rams—and also seat sales for their National League championship football game Sunday.

Coach Paul Brown and his champion Browns assembled before the blackboard this morning, outlining strategy for the big game, and scheduled a two-hour practice in the afternoon at Pasadena City College.

The Rams, seeking the title they failed to win in the blue-ribbon battle a year ago with these same Browns, and the year before from Philadelphia, had a similar schedule mapped out.

Cleveland, now a firm six-point favorite, lost one outdoor drill yesterday when their uniforms and equipment were delayed in the shipment west.

Joe Stydahr, the Ram coach, said one or two of his players are still nursing injuries sustained during the regular season. But his entire squad will be ready for action, he added.

Ticket sales continued brisk, picking up today after yesterday's dampish, bleak conditions. Ram officials expect 70,000 — possibly more—if the weather continues good.

Matthews Offered Fight With Maxim

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—Harry Matthews, Seattle sensation, today was offered a Feb. 22 title bout with lightheavyweight champion Joey Maxim, site to be determined later.

Al Weill, International Boxing Club matchmaker, wired Jack Hurley, Matthews' manager, the offer. Maxim's manager, Jack Kearns, agreed to the match.

Title Bout Set

PARIS, Dec. 20 (AP) — Charles Humez, European welterweight champion, said today he has agreed to meet world welterweight champion Kid Gavilan of Cuba in a title bout at New York's Madison Square Garden, March 28.

FINALIST AGAIN, the Los Angeles Rams and the Champion Cleveland Browns meet in Los Angeles Sunday, Dec. 23, for the National pro league title. In the playoff last year, the Browns defeated the Rams, 30 to 28, on a field goal in the last 20 seconds of the game. In 1949 the Rams also tried for the title, but lost to the Philadelphia Eagles in the mud in L. A. Stars of the two teams are pictured. (International)

Wagner acted as head coach last year when Watts was ill and led the B-W team to the semi-finals of the NAIB tourney in Kansas City. (International)

Dan Bucceroni Faces LaStarza In Garden Ring

Big Fellows Tangle In Ten Round Match

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (INS)—Heavyweight Roland La Starza and lightheavy Dan Bucceroni will throw their choicest bombs at each other tomorrow night in a ten-round fight at Madison Square Garden.

The 24-year-old La Starza, whose only loss in 48 fights was a split decision to Rocky Marciano, is risking his rating as No. 4 in the heavyweight division.

It will be the first fight since Aug. 3 for La Starza, who has been getting a run-around on a promised return bout with Marciano.

Bucceroni, who has won 35 of 37 bouts in his short career, showed punching ability but little ring polish in his only previous Garden bout. He suffered a fifth round technical knockout by Bob Murphy last March.

The La Starza-Bucceroni bout was scheduled originally for Nov. 9 but was postponed when La Starza came down with influenza.

Horse Race Bets Jump 17 Per Cent

Mutuel Handle Hits Over Billion In U. S.

By JOHN CHANDLER

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—Horse racing fans shoved $1,629,239,777 through the pari-mutuel windows last season, and reports from Florida and Louisiana indicate the nation's tracks can look for another big year in 1952.

In some states, racing officials indicated the government drive against bookmakers had resulted in more customers visiting the tracks. Whatever the reason, unofficial figures compiled by the Associated Press showed wagering jumped 17.01 per cent during 1951 compared with the previous year.

The 24 states where pari-mutuel betting is legal profited to the tune of $99,927,423—a revenue record. This was 17.63 per cent above the 1950 total of $84,909,382.

Attendance Up 6 Per Cent

Wagering increased in every one of the 24 states last season. Nationwide attendance jumped 6.01 per cent over 1950.

Topped by New York's attendance of 4,386,315, the nation's tracks had 24,302,020 customers during the season compared with 22,924,517 in 1950. In 1950, the wagering total was $1,392,032,740.

Only the boom war year of 1946, and the following year showed a greater amount bet at the mutuels. In 1946 it was $1,830,287,455, and the total handle for 1947 was $1,680,815,373.

Reports from Miami's Tropical Park, and the New Orleans Fair Grounds where winter racing is flourishing, show attendance some 10 per cent higher than last season. Betting is up better than 30 per cent in New Orleans, and has increased about 25 per cent at Tropical. Santa Anita Park expects one of its best season when racing opens at the Arcadia, Calif. track Dec. 28.

In New York, where betting was up 12 per cent over 1950, the state racing commission attributed the increase to "the spotlighting of illegal operations, accompanied by a stricter enforcement of the law, and the federal government's enactment requiring registration of professional gamblers."

Illinois Has Big Year

In Illinois, betting was up 17 per cent, attendance jumped 10 per cent, while the state collected $2,000,000 more in taxes than 1950. Some of the Illinois revenue hike was due to an added 1 per cent tax on pari-mutuels, begun in July.

Michigan's gross revenue was up 32.2 per cent, and new records were set in New Jersey and Ohio. Wagering at Narragansett Park and Lincoln Downs in Rhode Island hit a record $76,713,196, almost $15,000,000 more than in 1950. Much of this was attributed to the crackdown on off-course illegal bookmaking.

Amelia Earhart was the first woman to make a solo flight across the Atlantic.

KEEPING UP WITH HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 20 (INS)—What a Christmas gift for Debbie Reynolds, that cute little singer and actress at Mg. Her boss, Dore Schary, has bought the Howard Lindsay-Russell Crouse Broadway play, "Remains To Be Seen," especially for her and she is a happy girl.

After Dore saw "Singin' In The Rain" and knew what Debbie could do, he immediately put in a bid for this play, which has done extremely well in the big town with our own Jackie Cooper and Janis Paige in the leads.

Dore tells me it's to be a lavish musical with technicolor and all the trimmings.

Barry Sullivan won't have to give his right arm (he said he would) to do "Sudden Fear" with Joan Crawford. He's set for the role of the man who, with a beautiful accomplice, plans to murder Joan—a heck of a part for a guy who admires her so much.

Of course, this picture is a pet project of La Crawford, as it is her first independent. She telephoned to tell me how happy she is that Barry is to have the lead.

Joan fell in love with the story when she read it and tried to buy the thriller only to learn Joseph Kauffman had written out a check first for the rights. The happy solution was reached when they teamed up as co-producers, with Joan starring and David Miller directing.

If George Sanders wants to do a picture in Hollywood, George Jessel has just the one made to order for him. It's "Music in the Air" in which George would have the singing lead.

As soon as it's finished Georgie is sending the script to Sanders, who still hasn't made up his mind whether he's only "visiting" his wife, Zsa Zsa Gabor, or whether it's a reconciliation.

George has wanted to do a musical for along time and this sounds just like his cup of tea.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD, Jean Simmons received diamond earrings yesterday as an anniversary present from Stewart Granger.

By the time this is written they may be celebrating their first anniversary in Mexico with Liz Taylor and Michael Wilding. Granger had a cold which delayed the trip and it's not certain that they will go.

But as far as I can hear, Liz and her English boy friend will not marry below the border, but will wait until she is free. Amazing how such rumors start, even to the announcement of marriage plans being made in Acapulcoo.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM:

Greer Garson flys to Dallas today with her mother to spend Christmas with Buddy Fogelson. She returns to MGM after the first of the year for "My Mother and Mr. McChesney."

Jimmy Stewart's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Stewart, arrive in town today to spend Christmas with their son and his pretty Gloria. They'll get their first look at the twins.

The Sidney Portiers, (He's the famous Negro actor) expect a baby soon. When Sidney got married Linda Darnell said, "Why don't you tell Louella Parsons?" said Sidney, "If I do that I'll be famous and that would make me nervous." Well, Sid, you're famous anyway.

Can this be true? Martha Stewart has been having dates with her first husband, Joe E. Lewis. Well, Joe E. really never got pretty Martha out of his system.

Bob Cummings came back to town just long enough to pick up Mary and the two children and head back to New York. They'll spend Christmas there. Bob was so busy in the play, "Faithfully Yours," that he didn't have a chance to see any of the other shows.

That's all today.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Can emotional wounds be healed?

Answer: Not so fully that they will not leave scars, but well enough at best so that they will cause no pain unless "re-opened" by a repetition of the blow that caused them. It is as true of emotional wounds as of physical ones that "time is the great healer," but it is psychological, not calendar time that does the healing. The way to recover from a shock to your feelings is to learn to think of it as past, not present—as "then," not "now." Maybe you failed back in school, for instance—that does not mean you cannot succeed in today's job. Stop "living in the past" and old wounds will trouble you no longer.

Is the urge to go hunting neurotic?

Answer: Mr. Joe Hennessy in his column in the St. Paul Pioneer Press asked me whether I "think duck hunters are crazy," describing the physical and mental hardships which they drive themselves to endure each year. He was, of course, joking, but I think there is a serious answer to his question. Killing for "sport" is not "crazy"—it is a relatively harmless outlet for the murderous impulses which civilized life generates in most of us, yet forbids our gratifying. But something inside us warns that killing is still killing and must be atoned for, and we ease our sense of guilt by making ourselves suffer

Answer: Quite the contrary, writes Richard W. B. Ellis of the University of Edinburgh in the British Medical Journal. A study of male and female natives of Nigeria showed that the physical evidence of maturity appeared in native girls at an average age of 14.4 years while the average in Great Britain is 13.73 years. Nigerian schoolboys appeared to mature at substantially the same age as schoolboys in the United Kingdom. Similar results have been arrived at in studies of other countries. Early maturation probably is caused by favorable life conditions, especially adequate nourishment, in which civilized countries excel.

EDMONTON—(AP)—Horse meat is proving popular in Edmonton. That's the word from O. B. Moore and E. S. Ferguson, co-owners of Canada's first horse meat store.

The shop—named The Pony Market—now has been in operation for several weeks and the owners say business is booming. They also claim there hasn't been one serious complaint to date about their product.

Most cuts sell for about 40 per cent of regular beef prices. Top price for a horse tenderloin, for example, is 40 cents against $1.50 per pound for beef cuts of that class.

KEEPING UP WITH HOLLYWOOD
By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 20 (INS)—What a Christmas gift for Debbie Reynolds, that cute little singer and actress at Mg. Her boss, Dore Schary, has bought the Howard Lindsay-Russell Crouse Broadway play, "Remains To Be Seen," especially for her and she is a happy girl.

After Dore saw "Singin' In The Rain" and knew what Debbie could do, he immediately put in a bid for this play, which has done extremely well in the big town with our own Jackie Cooper and Janis Paige in the leads.

Dore tells me it's to be a lavish musical with technicolor and all the trimmings.

Barry Sullivan won't have to give his right arm (he said he would) to do "Sudden Fear" with Joan Crawford. He's set for the role of the man who, with a beautiful accomplice, plans to murder Joan—a heck of a part for a guy who admires her so much.

Of course, this picture is a pet project of La Crawford, as it is her first independent. She telephoned to tell me how happy she is that Barry is to have the lead.

Joan fell in love with the story when she read it and tried to buy the thriller only to learn Joseph Kauffman had written out a check first for the rights. The happy solution was reached when they teamed up as co-producers, with Joan starring and David Miller directing.

If George Sanders wants to do a picture in Hollywood, George Jessel has just the one made to order for him. It's "Music in the Air" in which George would have the singing lead.

As soon as it's finished Georgie is sending the script to Sanders, who still hasn't made up his mind whether he's only "visiting" his wife, Zsa Zsa Gabor, or whether it's a reconciliation.

George has wanted to do a musical for along time and this sounds just like his cup of tea.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD, Jean Simmons received diamond earrings yesterday as an anniversary present from Stewart Granger.

By the time this is written they may be celebrating their first anniversary in Mexico with Liz Taylor and Michael Wilding. Granger had a cold which delayed the trip and it's not certain that they will go.

But as far as I can hear, Liz and her English boy friend will not marry below the border, but will wait until she is free. Amazing how such rumors start, even to the announcement of marriage plans being made in Acapulcoo.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM:

Greer Garson flys to Dallas today with her mother to spend Christmas with Buddy Fogelson. She returns to MGM after the first of the year for "My Mother and Mr. McChesney."

Jimmy Stewart's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Stewart, arrive in town today to spend Christmas with their son and his pretty Gloria. They'll get their first look at the twins.

The Sidney Portiers, (He's the famous Negro actor) expect a baby soon. When Sidney got married Linda Darnell said, "Why don't you tell Louella Parsons?" said Sidney, "If I do that I'll be famous and that would make me nervous." Well, Sid, you're famous anyway.

Can this be true? Martha Stewart has been having dates with her first husband, Joe E. Lewis. Well, Joe E. really never got pretty Martha out of his system.

Bob Cummings came back to town just long enough to pick up Mary and the two children and head back to New York. They'll spend Christmas there. Bob was so busy in the play, "Faithfully Yours," that he didn't have a chance to see any of the other shows.

That's all today.

Mirror Of Your Mind

By LAWRENCE GOULD, Consulting Psychologist

Can emotional wounds be healed?

Answer: Not so fully that they will not leave scars, but well enough at best so that they will cause no pain unless "re-opened" by a repetition of the blow that caused them. It is as true of emotional wounds as of physical ones that "time is the great healer," but it is psychological, not calendar time that does the healing. The way to recover from a shock to your feelings is to learn to think of it as past, not present—as "then," not "now." Maybe you failed back in school, for instance—that does not mean you cannot succeed in today's job. Stop "living in the past" and old wounds will trouble you no longer.

Is the urge to go hunting neurotic?

Answer: Mr. Joe Hennessy in his column in the St. Paul Pioneer Press asked me whether I "think duck hunters are crazy," describing the physical and mental hardships which they drive themselves to endure each year. He was, of course, joking, but I think there is a serious answer to his question. Killing for "sport" is not "crazy"—it is a relatively harmless outlet for the murderous impulses which civilized life generates in most of us, yet forbids our gratifying. But something inside us warns that killing is still killing and must be atoned for, and we ease our sense of guilt by making ourselves suffer

Do primitive children mature early?

Answer: Quite the contrary, writes Richard W. B. Ellis of the University of Edinburgh in the British Medical Journal. A study of male and female natives of Nigeria showed that the physical evidence of maturity appeared in native girls at an average age of 14.4 years while the average in Great Britain is 13.73 years. Nigerian schoolboys appeared to mature at substantially the same age as schoolboys in the United Kingdom. Similar results have been arrived at in studies of other countries. Early maturation probably is caused by favorable life conditions, especially adequate nourishment, in which civilized countries excel.

Does Rush Trade

EDMONTON—(AP)—Horse meat is proving popular in Edmonton. That's the word from O. B. Moore and E. S. Ferguson, co-owners of Canada's first horse meat store.

The shop—named The Pony Market—now has been in operation for several weeks and the owners say business is booming. They also claim there hasn't been one serious complaint to date about their product.

Most cuts sell for about 40 per cent of regular beef prices. Top price for a horse tenderloin, for example, is 40 cents against $1.50 per pound for beef cuts of that class.

Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

To Televise Or Not Televise

In condemning the practice of televising legislative hearings such as the Kefauver investigation, the New York State Bar Association's Committee on Civil Rights has, I think, taken a narrow view of what television is. Television, said the committee, jeopardized individual rights and impaired the efficiency of the hearing.

John Crosby

The lawyers directed their fire what they termed particularly at television's selectivity. Radio and television, they claimed, put pressure on the committee "to telescope and compress the hearings, selecting for their public sessions the most sensational witnesses and the most spectacular part of their testimony, in a measure staging the hearings to accommodate the media over which they are carried."

• — • — •

Well, that't true enough. But selection is not simply confined to radio and television. The reporter with his pencil and notebook and later his typewriter also telescopes and compresses; he too picks out the most sensational witnesses and the most spectacular part of the testimony. Actually, the newspapers edit and compress a lot more drastically and, when misused, can damage an individual far more effectively than can television or radio. Would the legal eagles ban the press, too?

Television is in a way just another form of journalism, a rather too efficient form of reporting the news, above all, a method of communication. I fail to see how an instrument of communication can damage a person's reputation. The damage is hardly being committed by television; if damage is being done, it is being done by the investigators—lawyers, most of them—and by the nature of the hearings themselves.

I have not yet met a lawyer who has not condemned the televising of the Kefauver hearings. Almost without exception these gentlemen have said they could make a monkey out of any witness in front of the cameras. But is that the fault of the cameras? Or of the lawyers? I'm fully aware that lawyers can turn almost any sort of hearing into a carnival; that television makes hams of them all—to say nothing of the witnesses—but then the Bar Association, it seems to me, should clean up its legal procedures, should put some restraints on its own members rather than trying to shield the proceedings from public view.

Anything as spectacular as the Kefauver hearings was bound to attract a good deal of public attention anyhow. Some invasion of privacy was bound to occur. Do the lawyers argue that a man's privacy should be invaded just a little bit (by the press, for example) but not a whole lot? The logic here reminds me of the girl who was just a little bit pregnant.

The main argument in favor of televised public hearings is that they enlighten and educate the public. "This," says the committee, "may be an incidental and often valuable by-product of the legislative process but it is questionable whether education is a constitutional function of the legislature." Maybe it isn't. But education and enlightenment are very much the responsibility of the broadcaster and in televising public hearings he is discharging part of the responsibility.

The Bar Association also fretted openly about the fact that legislators might use the tremendous national audience for personal advantage at the cost of a dignified and fair proceding. There's no doubt but that they'd try. A legislator will use anything—press, pulpit, rostrum—for his personal advantage. But television is a mercilessly honest recording device. An ambitious windbag looks on television like nothing except an ambitious windbay. Television can puncture political aspirations just as well as promote them.

As for the fairness and what the committee calls "the solemnity and decorum" of the hearings, television should further them, not interfere with them. The Kefauver telecasts were witnessed by an estimated 20,000,000 persons. Senator Kefauver had to be dignified, he had to be fair, or he would have excited the wrath of more voters than inhabit his native state of Tennessee.

North was known to all and sundry as a player who never made a psychic bid, but was so conservative that he was almost an under-bidder. The first and only player to suspect his psychic was his own partner. In view of his own holding, South reckoned it impossible for West to have a sound vulnerable takeout double and North a sound opening bid. Since, with vulnerability as it was, West had no motive for psyching and North did, South refrained from taking the 3-Spades to 4-Spades.

East couldn't find a sound response to the double of 1-Spade, so as a necessary evil bid the clubs. Anyway, he had only one way to show his own hearts, by responding with 1-No Trump, very risky with his type of distribution. West could have shown up the psychic by bidding hearts after his double, but it would have had to be at the height of three, dangerous when vulnerable. So he raised his partner's clubs and eventually doubled the 3-Spades.

That double conferred a gift game on North and South, as West led the A of his partner's clubs. South therefore lost only one trick in each black suit and two in diamonds to make his contract. It happens that East and West could have walked home with 4-Hearts plus an extra trick, and would have reached it if either partner had learned about his mate's suit. What do you think you would have done in West's position if everybody else acted as he or she did, and you had known North as utterly dependable? Would you too have been victimized by his trickiness?

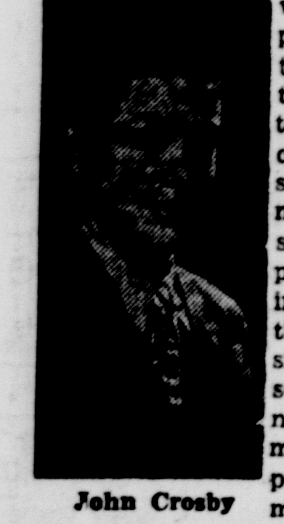
Radio And Television

By JOHN CROSBY

To Televise Or Not Televise

In condemning the practice of televising legislative hearings such as the Kefauver investigation, the New York State Bar Association's Committee on Civil Rights has, I think, taken a narrow view of what television is. Television, said the committee, jeopardized individual rights and impaired the efficiency of the hearing.



John Crosby

The lawyers directed their fire what they termed particularly at television's selectivity. Radio and television, they claimed, put pressure on the committee "to telescope and compress the hearings, selecting for their public sessions the most sensational witnesses and the most spectacular part of their testimony, in a measure staging the hearings to accommodate the media over which they are carried."

● — ● — ●

Well, that't true enough. But selection is not simply confined to radio and television. The reporter with his pencil and notebook and later his typewriter also telescopes and compresses; he too picks out the most sensational witnesses and the most spectacular part of the testimony. Actually, the newspapers edit and compress a lot more drastically and, when misused, can damage an individual far more effectively than can television or radio. Would the legal eagles ban the press, too?

Television is in a way just another form of journalism, a rather too efficient form of reporting the news, above all, a method of communication. I fail to see how an instrument of communication can damage a person's reputation. The damage is hardly being committed by television; if damage is being done, it is being done by the investigators—lawyers, most of them —and by the nature of the hearings themselves.

I have not yet met a lawyer who has not condemned the televising of the Kefauver hearings. Almost without exception these gentlemen have said they could make a monkey out of any witness in front of the cameras. But is that the fault of the cameras? Or of the lawyers? I'm fully aware that lawyers can turn almost any sort of hearing into a carnival; that television makes hams of them all—to say nothing of the witnesses—but then the Bar Association, it seems to me, should clean up its legal procedures, should put some restraints on its own members rather than trying to shield the proceedings from public view.

Anything as spectacular as the Kefauver hearings was bound to attract a good deal of public attention anyhow. Some invasion of privacy was bound to occur. Do the lawyers argue that a man's privacy should be invaded just a little bit (by the press, for example) but not a whole lot? The logic here reminds me of the girl who was just a little bit pregnant.

The main argument in favor of televised public hearings is that they enlighten and educate the public. "This," says the committee, "may be an incidental and often valuable by-product of the legislative process but it is questionable whether education is a constitutional function of the legislature." Maybe it isn't. But education and enlightenment are very much the responsibility of the broadcaster and in televising public hearings he is discharging part of the responsibility.

The Bar Association also fretted openly about the fact that legislators might use the tremendous national audience for personal advantage at the cost of a dignified and fair proceding. There's no doubt but that they'd try. A legislator will use anything—press, pulpit, rostrum —for his personal advantage. But television is a mercilessly honest recording device. An ambitious windbag looks on television like nothing except an ambitious windbay. Television can puncture political aspirations just as well as promote them.

As for the fairness and what the committee calls "the solemnity and decorum" of the hearings, television should further them, not interfere with them. The Kefauver telecasts were witnessed by an estimated 20,000,000 persons. Senator Kefauver had to be dignified, he had to be fair, or he would have excited the wrath of more voters than inhabit his native state of Tennessee.

Television is in a way just another form of journalism, a rather too efficient form of reporting the news, above all, a method of communication. I fail to see how an instrument of communication can damage a person's reputation. The damage is hardly being committed by television; if damage is being done, it is being done by the investigators—lawyers, most of them—and by the nature of the hearings themselves.

I have not yet met a lawyer who has not condemned the televising of the Kefauver hearings. Almost without exception these gentlemen have said they could make a monkey out of any witness in front of the cameras. But is that the fault of the cameras? Or of the lawyers? I'm fully aware that lawyers can turn almost any sort of hearing into a carnival; that television makes hams of them all—to say nothing of the witnesses—but then the Bar Association, it seems to me, should clean up its legal procedures, should put some restraints on its own members rather than trying to shield the proceedings from public view.

Anything as spectacular as the Kefauver hearings was bound to attract a good deal of public attention anyhow. Some invasion of privacy was bound to occur. Do the lawyers argue that a man's privacy should be invaded just a little bit (by the press, for example) but not a whole lot? The logic here reminds me of the girl who was just a little bit pregnant.

The main argument in favor of televised public hearings is that they enlighten and educate the public. "This," says the committee, "may be an incidental and often valuable by-product of the legislative process but it is questionable whether education is a constitutional function of the legislature." Maybe it isn't. But education and enlightenment are very much the responsibility of the broadcaster and in televising public hearings he is discharging part of the responsibility.

The Bar Association also fretted openly about the fact that legislators might use the tremendous national audience for personal advantage at the cost of a dignified and fair proceding. There's no doubt but that they'd try. A legislator will use anything—press, pulpit, rostrum—for his personal advantage. But television is a mercilessly honest recording device. An ambitious windbag looks on television like nothing except an ambitious windbay. Television can puncture political aspirations just as well as promote them.

As for the fairness and what the committee calls "the solemnity and decorum" of the hearings, television should further them, not interfere with them. The Kefauver telecasts were witnessed by an estimated 20,000,000 persons. Senator Kefauver had to be dignified, he had to be fair, or he would have excited the wrath of more voters than inhabit his native state of Tennessee.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

EVEN HE MAY BE LYING

JUST because you know a particular player as having been so unvaryingly conservative that he never had been caught in the act of making a psychic bid—that is no absolute assurance that he won't do it some day. Your machinery for protecting your side against such tactics should be available for use against him the same as against anybody else. Otherwise you may find that the very first psychic bid made by him will steal a game or slam from your side. He has the same right to lie in the bidding as anybody else, so long as there is no secret understanding which enables his partner to know about it.

South:

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠	Dbl
Pass	2 ♣	2 ♠	3 ♣
3 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl

North was known to all and sundry as a player who never made a psychic bid, but was so conservative that he was almost an under-bidder. The first and only player to suspect his psychic was his own partner. In view of his own holding, South reckoned it impossible for West to have a sound vulnerable takeout double and North a sound opening bid. Since, with vulnerability as it was, West had no motive for psyching and North did, South refrained from taking the 3-Spades to 4-Spades.

East couldn't find a sound response to the double of 1-Spade, so as a necessary evil bid the clubs. Anyway, he had only one way to show his own hearts, by responding with 1-No Trump, very risky with his type of distribution. West could have shown up the psychic by bidding hearts after his double, but it would have had to be at the height of three, dangerous when vulnerable. So he raised his partner's clubs and eventually doubled the 3-Spades.

That double conferred a gift game on North and South, as West led the A of his partner's clubs. South therefore lost only one trick in each black suit and two in diamonds to make his contract. It happens that East and West could have walked home with 4-Hearts plus an extra trick, and would have reached it if either partner had learned about his mate's suit. What do you think you would have done in West's position if everybody else acted as he or she did, and you had known North as utterly dependable? Would you too have been victimized by his trickiness?

If South bids 1-Club and West 1-Spade, why is a business double by North not as advisable as a different move he is able to make?

GI'S DELIVER CHARITY FROM HOME TO HAPLESS KOREANS CAUGHT BY WAR

By SFC BRUCE WINTERS
Central Press Correspondent

WITH THE 7th INFANTRY DIVISION, Korea—"And he opened His mouth and taught them, saying . . . blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 5:2, 10.)

THE TWO JEEPS pulled off the dusty road, halting abruptly in front of a bullet-riddled mud shack.

Autumn was chilly and quiet. It rested mutely between the bombed-out buildings, spread softly over the ground which was strewn with rubble, focusing attention on a half-dressed, dirty Korean child who watched the American vehicles with languid unconcern.

An American chaplain dismounted and walked a few steps toward the girl. She was unmoved. He fidgeted until his interpreter beckoned to the waif and explained why they had come.

"Many, many presentos," the interpreter said, holding his arms out wide in front of him. He spoke earnestly in Korean for a moment. Then the girl issued a soft speech and bounded gracefully over the debris, disappearing behind the remains of a wall.

Some of the GIs stood near the chaplain. They waited anxiously. Both of the jeeps and trailers were loaded with winter clothing, donated by the families of the 17th infantry regiment to the innocent victims of war.

* * *

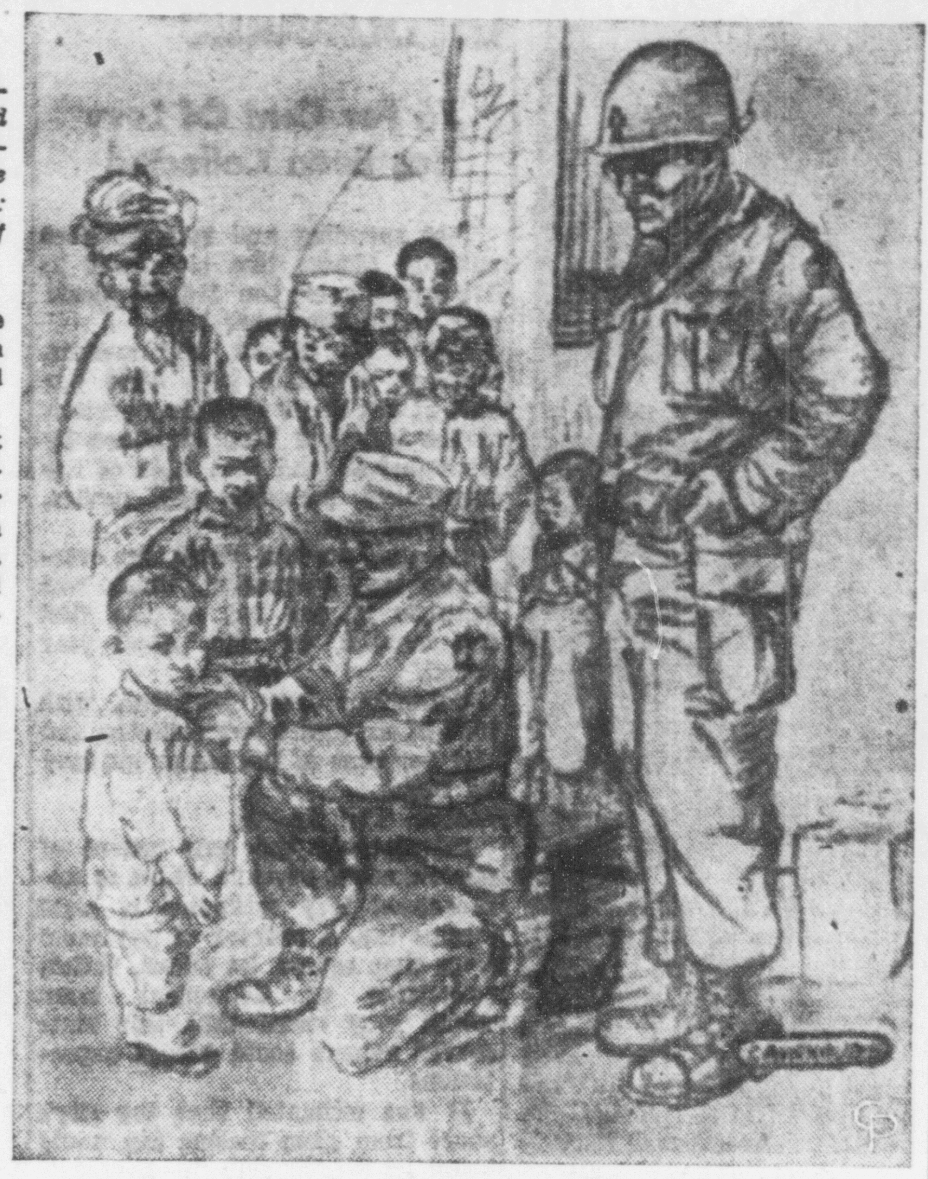
FOR THE moment, the fate of "Kartons for Koreans" was in a delicate balance. In August, while it was still warm, Chaplain (Capt.) John Betzold, West Collingswood, N. J., who had spent one winter in Korea, initiated the project, calling for the men in his congregation to write their folk back home to send old or new clothes so the men could distribute them to the civilians.

Chaplain Betzold explained his idea, saying:

"No one can see these poor little kids and not be touched. We want to see smiles where there haven't been smiles for a long time."

In three months the families of the soldiers had been generous. One box contained all new denim jackets and trousers for boys, and bright plaid skirts and jackets for girls.

Although Chaplain Betzold had been reassigned to the United States, his successor, Chaplain (Maj.) Ralph T. Osborne, Gossville, N. H., was carrying out his will.



Cpl. Tom Cavanaugh sketched this scene as the chaplain watched a Korean waif being togged out in his new finery.

If there were any doubts in their minds how successful their mercy mission would be, they were erased when 25 or 30 people, seeming to spring from nowhere, crowded around them and the jeeps.

The chaplain and his assistants dug into the cartons, displaying all sorts of wearing apparel which the people surely thought were lost to them for the remainder of the war.

Old and young alike smiled and nudged one another, babbling at a great rate in Korean. Mothers, nursing naked babies, crowded forward and were given warm sweater sets for their youngsters.

* * *

SOON THE crowd had tripled. A dignified gentleman, despite his tattered attire, elbowed his way forward and explained that there would be plenty for everyone. Ceremoniously, the mayor of the town bowed to the Americans.

It was a day of rejoicing for the Koreans; no mere words could check their happiness. The GIs stooped to help the kids into their new jackets. Little boys and girls grabbed their bright new clothes and sprinted away to try them on.

There would be more clothing distributed; as fast as it arrived at the 17th regiment headquarters, the chaplain would give it to the needy. As long as the supply and cold weather remained, "Kartons for Koreans" would thrive.

In the town where war had ravaged the landscape, there once again was happiness. There were tears mingled with laughter. Gratitude hurdled the language barrier. The people thanked the Americans in the best English they knew. But their faces told the whole story—and it seemed the blue sky was bluer than it ever had been.

Chaplain Osborne sighed happily. He tilted his steel helmet off his forehead. "At first I thought it would be too big a problem to distribute the clothing ourselves," he admitted. "But now that we've seen the faces of these people—it's worth any amount of trouble that might be involved."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

GI'S DELIVER CHARITY FROM HOME TO HAPLESS KOREANS CAUGHT BY WAR

By SFC BRUCE WINTERS
Central Press Correspondent

WITH THE 7th INFANTRY DIVISION, Korea—"And he opened His mouth and taught them, saying . . . blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 5:2, 10.)

Cpl. Tom Cavanaugh sketched this scene as the chaplain watched a Korean waif being togged out in his new finery.

Autumn was chilly and quiet. It rested mutely between the bombed-out buildings, spread softly over the ground which was strewn with rubble, focusing attention on a half-dressed, dirty Korean child who watched the American vehicles with languid unconcern.

An American chaplain dismounted and walked a few steps toward the girl. She was unmoved. He fidgeted until his interpreter beckoned to the waif and explained why they had come.

"Many, many presentos," the interpreter said, holding his arms out wide in front of him. He spoke earnestly in Korean for a moment. Then the girl issued a soft speech and bounded gracefully over the debris, disappearing behind the remains of a wall.

Some of the GIs stood near the chaplain. They waited anxiously. Both of the jeeps and trailers were loaded with winter clothing, donated by the families of the 17th infantry regiment to the innocent victims of war.

• • •

FOR THE moment, the fate of "Kartons for Koreans" was in a delicate balance. In August, while it was still warm, Chaplain (Capt.) John Betzold, West Collingswood, N. J., who had spent one winter in Korea, initiated the project, calling for the men in his congregation to write their folk back home to send old or new clothes so the men could distribute them to the civilians.

"No one can see these poor little kids and not be touched. We want to see smiles where there haven't been smiles for a long time."

In three months the families of the soldiers had been generous. One box contained all new denim jackets and trousers for boys, and bright plaid skirts and jackets for girls.

Although Chaplain Betzold had been reassigned to the United States, his successor, Chaplain (Maj.) Ralph T. Osborne, Gossville, N. H., was carrying out his will.

If there were any doubts in their minds how successful their mercy mission would be, they were erased when 25 or 30 people, seeming to spring from nowhere, crowded around them and the jeeps.

The chaplain and his assistants dug into the cartons, displaying all sorts of wearing apparel which the people surely thought were lost to them for the remainder of the war.

Old and young alike smiled and nudged one another, babbling at a great rate in Korean. Mothers, nursing naked babies, crowded forward and were given warm sweater sets for their youngsters.

• • •

SOON THE crowd had tripled. A dignified gentleman, despite his tattered attire, elbowed his way forward and explained that there would be plenty for everyone. Ceremoniously, the mayor of the town bowed to the Americans.

It was a day of rejoicing for the Koreans; no mere words could check their happiness. The GIs stooped to help the kids into their new jackets. Little boys and girls grabbed their bright new clothes and sprinted away to try them on.

There would be more clothing distributed; as fast as it arrived at the 17th regiment headquarters, the chaplain would give it to the needy. As long as the supply and cold weather remained, "Kartons for Koreans" would thrive.

In the town where war had ravaged the landscape, there once again was happiness. There were tears mingled with laughter. Gratitude hurdled the language barrier. The people thanked the Americans in the best English they knew. But their faces told the whole story—and it seemed the blue sky was bluer than it ever had been.

Chaplain Osborne sighed happily. He tilted his steel helmet off his forehead. "At first I thought it would be too big a problem to distribute the clothing ourselves," he admitted. "But now that we've seen the faces of these people—it's worth any amount of trouble that might be involved."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

GI'S DELIVER CHARITY FROM HOME TO HAPLESS KOREANS CAUGHT BY WAR

By SFC BRUCE WINTERS
Central Press Correspondent

WITH THE 7th INFANTRY DIVISION, Korea—"And he opened His mouth and taught them, saying . . . blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 5:2, 10.)

Cpl. Tom Cavanaugh sketched this scene as the chaplain watched a Korean waif being togged out in his new finery.

Autumn was chilly and quiet. It rested mutely between the bombed-out buildings, spread softly over the ground which was strewn with rubble, focusing attention on a half-dressed, dirty Korean child who watched the American vehicles with languid unconcern.

An American chaplain dismounted and walked a few steps toward the girl. She was unmoved. He fidgeted until his interpreter beckoned to the waif and explained why they had come.

"Many, many presentos," the interpreter said, holding his arms out wide in front of him. He spoke earnestly in Korean for a moment. Then the girl issued a soft speech and bounded gracefully over the debris, disappearing behind the remains of a wall.

Some of the GIs stood near the chaplain. They waited anxiously. Both of the jeeps and trailers were loaded with winter clothing, donated by the families of the 17th infantry regiment to the innocent victims of war.

* * *

FOR THE moment, the fate of "Kartons for Koreans" was in a delicate balance. In August, while it was still warm, Chaplain (Capt.) John Betzold, West Collingswood, N. J., who had spent one winter in Korea, initiated the project, calling for the men in his congregation to write their folk back home to send old or new clothes so the men could distribute them to the civilians.

Chaplain Betzold explained his idea, saying:

"No one can see these poor little kids and not be touched. We want to see smiles where there haven't been smiles for a long time."

In three months the families of the soldiers had been generous. One box contained all new denim jackets and trousers for boys, and bright plaid skirts and jackets for girls.

Although Chaplain Betzold had been reassigned to the United States, his successor, Chaplain (Maj.) Ralph T. Osborne, Gossville, N. H., was carrying out his will.

This was the first distribution of the gifts.

If there were any doubts in their minds how successful their mercy mission would be, they were erased when 25 or 30 people, seeming to spring from nowhere, crowded around them and the jeeps.

The chaplain and his assistants dug into the cartons, displaying all sorts of wearing apparel which the people surely thought were lost to them for the remainder of the war.

Old and young alike smiled and nudged one another, babbling at a great rate in Korean. Mothers, nursing naked babies, crowded forward and were given warm sweater sets for their youngsters.

* * *

SOON THE crowd had tripled. A dignified gentleman, despite his tattered attire, elbowed his way forward and explained that there would be plenty for everyone. Ceremoniously, the mayor of the town bowed to the Americans.

It was a day of rejoicing for the Koreans; no mere words could check their happiness. The GIs stooped to help the kids into their new jackets. Little boys and girls grabbed their bright new clothes and sprinted away to try them on.

There would be more clothing distributed; as fast as it arrived at the 17th regiment headquarters, the chaplain would give it to the needy. As long as the supply and cold weather remained, "Kartons for Koreans" would thrive.

In the town where war had ravaged the landscape, there once again was happiness. There were tears mingled with laughter. Gratitude hurdled the language barrier. The people thanked the Americans in the best English they knew. But their faces told the whole story—and it seemed the blue sky was bluer than it ever had been.

Chaplain Osborne sighed happily. He tilted his steel helmet off his forehead. "At first I thought it would be too big a problem to distribute the clothing ourselves," he admitted. "But now that we've seen the faces of these people—it's worth any amount of trouble that might be involved."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

City Spending, Receipts Are On Schedule

76 Per Cent Of Levy Has Been Collected

City spending and receipts were running almost like clockwork as five months of the 1951-52 fiscal year ended November 30.

Arthur B. Gibson, city auditor, reported yesterday that 44.44 per cent of the city's operating portion of the levy had been expended by November 30 and that 46.42 of the entire levy, including debt service, was paid out.

The only account which was overdrawn was Recreation, which was $6,501.30 in the red as the first five months of the fiscal year ended.

Collections were excellent, with 76.73 of the entire levy collected and 87½ per cent of the entire tax levy on hand.

Income Tax Up

Gibson said the only source of miscellaneous revenue which is approaching levy estimates is state income tax. A number of payments from that source, he added, reflect collections of delinquent taxes which may mean that this state shared income could exceed expectations.

It was estimated that the city's share from state income tax would bring in $40,000 and the payments are already at the $37,182.87 mark.

Debt service payments were at the $130,233.24 mark. The levy includes $236,717.74 for debt service.

Spending Is Normal

All accounts are in good condition, Gibson said, and total expenditures are running only two to three per cent ahead of what they would be if spending could be alloted equally for all months.

In actual practice, however, spending is never equal, since some activities, such as playgrounds, take a heavy bite of appropriations early in the fiscal year.

Most of the fund for Street Paving, he added, was spent early in the fall so streets slated for repairs could be improved before bad weather arrived.

If corrections were made for heavy recreation and street paving expenses early in the fiscal year, spending would be at 41.80 per cent, instead of 44.44. The percentage would be 41.67 per cent if it were possible to allot 1-12 of the appropriation to each department each month.

Completion Of POW Listings Shows 11 Area Men In Camps

Over 30 Soldiers Remain Unaccounted For

With emphasis that there is no guarantee of the listing of prisoners of war held by the Reds, the Department of Defense has completed checking the roster of more than 3,000 names. Of more than 40 area men reported missing, only eleven are accounted for on the list and there is some confusion about one of those.

Yesterday the NEWS listed eight names, as having been identified with the next of kin and home addresses. Three more have since been gleaned from the list.

Street Workers Swamped; More Snow Falls

Many Traffic Snarls Are Reported Here

At least five times the available equipment and men would be needed to clear city streets of ice and snow which has fallen here since last Friday, Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent, reported yesterday.

Corrigan said other crews were placed on maintenance tasks yesterday morning.

He reported at 3 p. m. that the men were home getting some needed food and rest in preparation for manning all available snow plows last evening.

Can't Remove Snow

Corrigan said one way traffic will have to be used in several sections if more snow falls since the only thing cleaning crews can do is to push the snow and ice aside.

The already dangerous streets became more hazardous early in the afternoon as over an inch of sleet and rain, froze as it hit the ground.

Temperatures remained below the freezing mark most of the day but rose steadily in late afternoon and was about 35 degrees in the downtown area by 9:30 p. m.

Traffic Is Snarled

Taxicabs chalked up another record day as the weather worsened. They have generally refused to take time calls since the storm broke last Friday.

Severe traffic snarls were reported on Wineow Street, Greene Street, Cumberland and Allegany Streets and in virtually all of the hilly areas of the city.

Joseph Humbertson, 315 Water Street, reported that a snow plow headed for Kelly Boulevard passed his home with the blade up, making no attempt to clear that street. Similar reports came from other parts of the city.

Four Area Men Enlist In Navy

They are Richard Edward Biggs, 18, 30 Lyon Street, Ridgeley; Marvin Charles Josephsen, 18, RFD 2, Grantsville; Lee Austin Weaver, 18, and Richard Johnson Bruce Lehman, Jr., 21, both of RFD 2, Ridgeley.

Weather Wins Out As Schools Start Holiday Early

Consequently, the holiday started at 3:30 p. m. yesterday and will continue until 9 a. m. Thursday, January 3. Originally it would have started today. Attendance at most schools was off at least 25 per cent again yesterday.

School Superintendent Charles L. Kopp said he thought it was the "part of wisdom" to start the holiday early because sleet and rain on top of the third snow in a week made driving hazardous throughout the county.

Judge Hears Suit Seeking To Void Deed

Matter Taken Under Advisement

Evidence in an equity suit which seeks to void a deed signed 17 years ago was heard yesterday by Associate Judge Morgan C. Harris in Allegany County Circuit Court but he has taken the case under advisement.

Brothers Sue

The Krapfs assert that their grandmother, Mrs. Mary J. Krapf, died intestate November 14, 1933. In the settlement of the estate, her husband, Charles Krapf, and her grandsons, Charles E. Krapf and William F. Krapf, each received a one-third interest in the Virginia Avenue property.

The brothers, who were then in their early 20's, were influenced by their grandfather to sell him their shares in the property for $1,000 each, they state. They did so in the deed signed December 18, 1934, because they were promised that the property would revert to them upon his death, they testified. They had lived with their grandfather for years and looked upon him as a father, the brothers asserted.

Ignored In Will

When the elder Krapf died in 1950 he left the Virginia Avenue property to various nieces and nephews.

In testimony yesterday, witnesses said the property was worth $8,000 in 1934 and is now valued at $14,000.

B & O Plans Special Trains To Carry Holiday Travelers

Christmas holiday travel on its lines is expected to reach a substantially high volume, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad stated yesterday.

In order to accommodate the "going home for Christmas" travel of the military personnel, as well as the public, extra sections have been scheduled on most of its feature trains.

The pre-Christmas westbound movement is expected to be especially heavy. Extra sections will be operated on such trains as the "Capital Limited" and "Columbian" to Chicago, and extra sections will also be added to trains from the East to Cincinnati and St. Louis. Some eastbound trains will also operate in extra sections.

Holiday travel has already begun and will reach its peak tomorrow. For that period the Batimore and Ohio has scheduled 34 trains that will be operated as specials or as extra sections of the feature trains. This number of trains is unusually high. It is expected they will be heavily patronized because of the hazardous conditions on the highways throughout B. & O. territory.

Carver Presents Yule Assembly

Christmas Star, Tree Atop Naval Armory

A huge lighted Christmas star has been installed atop the U. S. Naval Reserve Armory on McKaig's Hill.

Members of the reserve corps are also working on a Christmas tree which will be outlined by red, green and blue lights. When completed the 52 bulb star which is about 133 feet from point to point will be located on top of the tree and a blinker system will be used. The tree and star will be secured to the flag mast and lashed to the yard arm.

Potomac Edison Adds Over 4,000 New Customers

Directors Hear Of Project Progress

During the first 11 months of this year, the Potomac Edison Company added 3,877 domestic customers and 307 commercial customers bringing the total of electricity customers to 135,107, compared with 130,858 a year ago.

This fact was stressed by President R. Paul Smith in his report for the fourth quarter of 1951 submitted at the quarterly meeting of the Potomac Edison Board of Directors Wednesday at the Francis Scott Key Hotel in Frederick.

Albright Project

Smith observed that the principal project in the company's program of new facilities construction is the new Albright station in Preston County, W. Va. Potomac Edison's part in this job is 75,000 kilowatt capacity, which Smith said is scheduled to go into operation the latter part of 1952.

To introduce power from the new Albright station into the system, practically all right-of-way and some clearing has been done on the proposed transmission line from Albright to Ridgeley, W. Va. Smith noted that the terminal facilities for this line at Ridgeley are now being constructed.

Approximately 330 miles of new rural lines have been built during the year, a somewhat smaller total than in previous years. Smith stated that fewer applications for rural service were received because the "saturation" point is being reached. For this reason he expects that in 1952 a little less mileage will be constructed.

New Building

Smith also reported that a new building to house the substation construction group has been provided here in Cumberland in line with expansion requirements. Also added was a new garage building in Winchester, Va.

One of the large and unusual new projects under construction on the Potomac Edison system which will require a considerable amount of reliable power is known as the Underground Communications Center or the "Pentagon Building" at Raven Rock, new Blue Ridge Summit, Pa. This is scheduled for completion during 1952, Smith said.

A large expansion program also is under way at Camp Detrick near Frederick and Letterkenny Ordnance Depot near Chambersburg, Pa. Smith also reported that E. I. duPont deNemours is beginning construction on its new plant near Martinsburg, W. Va., which will be ready for operation by the latter part of next year.

Revenues Up

Total operating revenues for the 11 months ending November 30 show an increase of 7 per cent, Smith reported. He also said that operating expenses, including depreciation and taxes, for the same period also went up 7 per cent.

Officers and directors present for the meeting included Donovan R. Beachley, J. Glenn Beall, William B. Bennett, G. Hunter Bowers, Raymond E. Creager, Robert B. Crothers, David K. Cushwa, Jr., R. E. Delaplaine, Merwyn C. Fuss, J. H. Grambrill, III, Harry George, Jr., Owen E. Hitchins, Amos Holter, Henry Holzapfel, Jr., George S. Humphrey, Harry J. Lebherz, Harry LeGore, Frank S. Leiter, A. F. Startzman, D. E. Stultz, Glenn T. Swisher, Earle S. Thompson, G. Frank Thomas, Asa H. Watkins, B. A. Winebrenner and E. W. VanFossen.

Beall Will Speak

Congressman J. Glenn Beall will be a guest speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Cumberland Lions Club Wednesday at 12:15 p. m. in Central YMCA. His will report on the First Session of the 82nd Congress.

District Highways Hazardous Following Snow, Sleet, Rain

Bureau Predicts Cold Temperatures For Today

About three inches of new snow and sleet fell over the area, but was changing to rain last night as temperatures began to climb. Mercury was up into the 40s in West Virginia and Pennsylvania last night, and climbing into the high 20 and low 30 degrees in Western Maryland.

Colder Today

The Weather Bureau predicts freezing rain in Western Maryland this morning with rising temperatures. However, mercury will plunge in the afternoon and become extremely cold tonight.

In Pennsylvania and West Virginia temperatures were expected to dip only to 35 degrees during the night with light snow and flurries in the afternoon. Temperatures in both states will drop to freezing tonight.

In the wake of yesterday's snow, sleet and freezing rain, highways in the Tri-State area were reported in bad condition by State Police last night. Motorists were warned that all roads were hazardous and they should not try to travel unless it was extremely necessary.

Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania State Police said roads were extremely slippery and icy. Slush-covered roads were freezing last night, but another real hazard was ice forming over windshields.

Road Crews Busy

Plowing and cindering crews were busy all day yesterday and last night clearing roads. They expected to work all day today.

In Allegany County 15 trucks, one auto patrol and 32 men were cindering, salting and plowing highways in this area. State Road Commission pickup trucks were going to hazardous places not yet reached by plows and were aiding autos which were stuck.

The Potomac Edison Company and Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company were alerted to be prepared for damage that may occur as snow turned to sleet and freezing rain yesterday afternoon.

Engineering Crews Alerted

Eight emergency line crews were alerted by the telephone company here. Richard Harman, branch manager, said the danger was in rain freezing on the lines and snapping the wires.

Crews were also on stand by at Oakland and Hagerstown.

It was raining in most of the nearby West Virginia counties last night and temperatures were reported in the 40s. At Elkins, Thomas, and Terra Alta, W. Va. the

Weather

More than three inches of new snow and sleet fell on the Queen City yesterday turning to freezing rain in late afternoon. This makes about 18 inches of snow falling in Cumberland since Friday. The Weather Bureau predicts a break in the "bad" weather for the city today, but mercury will tumble to below freezing. Extreme cold temperatures are expected tonight. The temperature yesterday was 30 degrees according to the weather station in Constitution Park. The low was 12 degrees, and official snowfall was 3.2 inches. Melted precipitation was measured at 1.09 inches.

Associated Charities Will Send Out 175 Food Baskets

The Associated Charities will distribute food baskets to 175 local families Saturday as part of its Christmas aid program.

The food baskets will be delivered Saturday morning by two city trucks manned by city workers.

Miss Jeanette Bonig, executive secretary said the Associated Charities has no allowance in its budget for additional Christmas aid and that all of the food baskets were made possible by donations.

Aid Yule Program

Among the many groups who provided food or money donations for the program included Cumberland Lodge No. 63, BPO Elks; Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, the Knights of Columbus, sororities, many local churches, Boy and Girl Scout troops, Fort Hill and Allegany High School groups and many interested individuals.

The Associated Charities has also made arrangements to send children to the Forty and Eight Christmas party Saturday morning at the Strand Theater; the Knights of Columbus Yule party Sunday at 2 p. m at the K. of C. Home; a party at the Legion Home Saturday afternoon, sponsored by the Auxiliary of Fort Cumberland Post and to the Allegany High Tri-Hi-Y party at Central YMCA December 26.

Toys Distributed

The Associated Charities has also distributed some 6,000 toys to over 350 families of the area.

Miss Bonig said the toys distributed this year were especially beautiful and reflected the work of hundreds of volunteers who built, repaired and dressed toys which had been used.

Many of the toys were new ones which were donated by groups following Jingle Parties.

The toys were distributed from a storeroom set up at 119 North Centre Street, where parents were asked to come and select toys which would be suitable for their children.

Check "Artist" To Be Released To Ohio Police

Frank Toth Wanted For Parole Violation

The State's Attorney's Office will release Frank J. Toth, alias Frank Joseph Etters and Frank Dawson, of West Salem, Ohio, to authorities of the state of Ohio today.

Toth was arrested Wednesday on charges of plaguing bankers of four states with bogus checks since his release from prison six months ago.

William H. Geppert, assistant state's attorney, said Toth was sent to prison in Ohio for one to 20 years on charges of passing fraudulent checks. After serving 25 months of his sentence, Toth was released on parole. Yesterday, Ohio authorities requested that Toth be released to them because he violated parole there.

Lt. Edwin R. Lilya yesterday sent a message to Ohio Police informing them he would be released and requested them to pick him up here.

Lt. Edwin R. Lilya said Toth passed a worthless check to entertain a girl friend.

Authorities said the prisoner signed a statement admitting he had passed at least 15 bad checks. He was picked up after Eugene Turano, proprietor of a Baltimore Street business establishment, said a check for $89.60 "bounced".

Questioned at the State's Attorney's office, Toth reportedly said he would stamp a blank check "Doueghty Const. Co." and "Payroll," sign the name J. B. Doueghty, fill in his own name or an alias, and pass the check.

Police said he had used the name F. Etters on the local check. Further investigation showed the Doueghty company to be a nonexistent firm.

Toth also said he had passed 15 checks—usually for about $80—in Youngstown, Ohio, Detroit, and Terra Haute, Ind. since his release from the Ohio Penitentiary where he had served 25 months of a 20-year forgery sentence.

He said the checks were drawn on Pittsburgh and Cleveland banks.

Turano told police that Toth had been spending lavishly to entertain a girlfriend in his bar for three or four days before passing the check.

Police said Toth's girl friend, also from Ohio, told them she knew little of his activities, but that he had told her he was a traveling railroad diesel mechanic. She was not detained here.

City Spending, Receipts Are On Schedule

76 Per Cent Of Levy Has Been Collected

City spending and receipts were running almost like clockwork as five months of the 1951-52 fiscal year ended November 30.

Arthur B. Gibson, city auditor, reported yesterday that 44.44 per cent of the city's operating portion of the levy had been expended by November 30 and that 46.42 of the entire levy, including debt service, was paid out.

The only account which was overdrawn was Recreation, which was $6,501.30 in the red as the first five months of the fiscal year ended.

Collections were excellent, with 76.73 of the entire levy collected and 87½ per cent of the entire tax levy on hand.

Income Tax Up

Gibson said the only source of miscellaneous revenue which is approaching levy estimates is state income tax. A number of payments from that source, he added, reflect collections of delinquent taxes which may mean that this state shared income could exceed expectations.

It was estimated that the city's share from state income tax would bring in $40,000 and the payments are already at the $37,182.87 mark.

Other sources of miscellaneous revenues, Gibson said, are running true to form.

The financial report shows that $455,907.13 of the city's $1,025,842.26 appropriation had been spent, leaving $576,436.43 for the rest of the year.

Debt service payments were at the $130,233.24 mark. The levy includes $236,717.74 for debt service.

Spending Is Normal

All accounts are in good condition, Gibson said, and total expenditures are running only two to three per cent ahead of what they would be if spending could be alloted equally for all months.

In actual practice, however, spending is never equal, since some activities, such as playgrounds, take a heavy bite of appropriations early in the fiscal year.

Most of the fund for Street Paving, he added, was spent early in the fall so streets slated for repairs could be improved before bad weather arrived.

If corrections were made for heavy recreation and street paving expenses early in the fiscal year, spending would be at 41.80 per cent, instead of 44.44. The percentage would be 41.67 per cent if it were possible to allot 1-12 of the appropriation to each department each month.

B & O Plans Special Trains To Carry Holiday Travelers

Christmas holiday travel on its lines is expected to reach a substantially high volume, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad stated yesterday.

In order to accommodate the "going home for Christmas" travel of the military personnel, as well as the public, extra sections have been scheduled on most of its feature trains.

The pre-Christmas westbound movement is expected to be especially heavy. Extra sections will be operated on such trains as the "Capital Limited" and "Columbian" to Chicago, and extra sections will also be added to trains from the East to Cincinnati and St. Louis. Some eastbound trains will also operate in extra sections.

Holiday travel has already begun and will reach its peak tomorrow. For that period the Batimore and Ohio has schedued 34 trains that will be operated as specials or as extra sections of the feature trains. This number of trains is unusually high. It is expected they will be heavily patronized because of the hazardous conditions on the highways throughout B. & O. territory.

Potomac Edison Adds Over 4,000 New Customers

Directors Hear Of Project Progress

During the first 11 months of this year, the Potomac Edison Company added 3,877 domestic customers and 307 commercial customers bringing the total of electricity customers to 135,107, compared with 130,858 a year ago.

This fact was stressed by President R. Paul Smith in his report for the fourth quarter of 1951 submitted at the quarterly meeting of the Potomac Edison Board of Directors Wednesday at the Francis Scott Key Hotel in Frederick.

Albright Project

Smith observed that the principal project in the company's program of new facilities construction is the new Albright station in Preston County, W. Va. Potomac Edison's part in this job is 75,000 kilowatt capacity, which Smith said is scheduled to go into operation the latter part of 1952.

To introduce power from the new Albright station into the system, practically all right-of-way and some clearing has been done on the proposed transmission line from Albright to Ridgeley, W. Va. Smith noted that the terminal facilities for this line at Ridgeley are now being constructed.

Approximately 330 miles of new rural lines have been built during the year, a somewhat smaller total than in previous years. Smith stated that fewer applications for rural service were received because the "saturation" point is being reached. For this reason he expects that in 1952 a little less mileage will be constructed.

New Building

Smith also reported that a new building to house the substation construction group has been provided here in Cumberland in line with expansion requirements. Also added was a new garage building in Winchester, Va.

One of the large and unusual new projects under construction on the Potomac Edison system which will require a considerable amount of reliable power is known as the Underground Communications Center or the "Pentagon Building" at Raven Rock, new Blue Ridge Summit, Pa. This is scheduled for completion during 1952, Smith said.

A large expansion program also is under way at Camp Detrick near Frederick and Letterkenny Ordnance Depot near Chambersburg, Pa. Smith also reported that E. I. duPont deNemours is beginning construction on its new plant near Martinsburg, W. Va., which will be ready for operation by the latter part of next year.

Revenues Up

Total operating revenues for the 11 months ending November 30 show an increase of 7 per cent, Smith reported. He also said that operating expenses, including depreciation and taxes, for the same period also went up 7 per cent.

Officers and directors present for the meeting included Donovan R. Beachley, J. Glenn Beall, William B. Bennett, G. Hunter Bowers, Raymond E. Creager, Robert B. Crothers, David K. Cushwa, Jr., R. E. Delaplaine, Merwyn C. Fuss, J. H. Grambrill, III, Harry George, Jr., Owen E. Hitchins, Amos Holter, Henry Holzapfel, Jr., George S. Humphrey, Harry J. Lebherz, Harry LeGore, Frank S. Leiter, A. F. District Highways Hazardous Following Snow, Sleet, Rain

Old Man Winter hurled its chilly elements of snow, sleet and rain over the Tri-State yesterday all but paralyzing travel and communication.

About three inches of new snow and sleet fell over the area, but was changing to rain last night as temperatures began to climb. Mercury was up into the 40s in West Virginia and Pennsylvania last night, and climbing into the high 20 and low 30 degrees in Western Maryland.

Colder Today

The Weather Bureau predicts freezing rain in Western Maryland this morning with rising temperatures. However, mercury will plunge in the afternoon and become extremely cold tonight.

In Pennsylvania and West Virginia temperatures were expected to dip only to 35 degrees during the night with light snow and flurries in the afternoon. Temperatures in both states will drop to freezing tonight.

In the wake of yesterday's snow, sleet and freezing rain, highways in the Tri-State area were reported in bad condition by State Police last night. Motorists were warned that all roads were hazardous and they should not try to travel unless it was extremely necessary.

Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania State Police said roads were extremely slippery and icy. Slush-covered roads were freezing last night, but another real hazard was ice forming over windshields.

Road Crews Busy

Plowing and cindering crews were busy all day yesterday and last night clearing roads. They expected to work all day today.

In Allegany County 15 trucks, one auto patrol and 32 men were cindering, salting and plowing highways in this area. State Road Commission pickup trucks were going to hazardous places not yet reached by plows and were aiding autos which were stuck.

Most of the 180 crew members were physically worn out after working day and night since the snow Friday.

The Potomac Edison Company and Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company were alerted to be prepared for damage that may occur as snow turned to sleet and freezing rain yesterday afternoon.

Engineering Crews Alerted

Eight emergency line crews were alerted by the telephone company here. Richard Harman, branch manager, said the danger was in rain freezing on the lines and snapping the wires.

Crews were also on stand by at Oakland and Hagerstown.

It was raining in most of the nearby West Virginia counties last night and temperatures were reported in the 40s. At Elkins, Thomas, and Terra Alta, W. Va. the

Weather

More than three inches of new snow and sleet fell on the Queen City yesterday turning to freezing rain in late afternoon. This makes about 18 inches of snow falling in Cumberland since Friday. The Weather Bureau predicts a break in the "bad" weather for the city today, but mercury will tumble to below freezing. Extreme cold temperatures are expected tonight. The temperature yesterday was 30 degrees according to the weather station in Constitution Park. The low was 12 degrees, and official snowfall was 3.2 inches. Melted precipitation was measured at 1.09 inches.

Associated Charities Will Send Out 175 Food Baskets

The Associated Charities will distribute food baskets to 175 local families Saturday as part of its Christmas aid program.

The food baskets will be delivered Saturday morning by two city trucks manned by city workers.

Miss Jeanette Bonig, executive secretary said the Associated Charities has no allowance in its budget for additional Christmas aid and that all of the food baskets were made possible by donations.

Aid Yule Program

Among the many groups who provided food or money donations for the program included Cumberland Lodge No. 63, BPO Elks; Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, the Knights of Columbus, sororities, many local churches, Boy and Girl Scout troops, Fort Hill and Allegany High School groups and many interested individuals.

The Associated Charities has also made arrangements to send children to the Forty and Eight Christmas party Saturday morning at the Strand Theater; the Knights of Columbus Yule party Sunday at 2 p. m at the K. of C. Home; a party at the Legion Home Saturday afternoon, sponsored by the Auxiliary of Fort Cumberland Post and to the Allegany High Tri-Hi-Y party at Central YMCA December 26.

Toys Distributed

The Associated Charities has also distributed some 6,000 toys to over 350 families of the area.

Miss Bonig said the toys distributed this year were especially beautiful and reflected the work of hundreds of volunteers who built, repaired and dressed toys which had been used.

Many of the toys were new ones which were donated by groups following Jingle Parties.

The toys were distributed from a storeroom set up at 119 North Centre Street, where parents were asked to come and select toys which would be suitable for their children.

Check "Artist" To Be Released To Ohio Police

Frank Toth Wanted For Parole Violation

The State's Attorney's Office will release Frank J. Toth, alias Frank Joseph Etters and Frank Dawson, of West Salem, Ohio, to authorities of the state of Ohio today.

Toth was arrested Wednesday on charges of plaguing bankers of four states with bogus checks since his release from prison six months ago.

William H. Geppert, assistant state's attorney, said Toth was sent to prison in Ohio for one to 20 years on charges of passing fraudulent checks. After serving 25 months of his sentence, Toth was released on parole. Yesterday, Ohio authorities requested that Toth be released to them because he violated parole there.

Lt. Edwin R. Lilya yesterday sent a message to Ohio Police informing them he would be released and requested them to pick him up here.

In the State's Attorney's office yesterday, Toth agreed to make restitution for the bad check which he signed while in Cumberland.

Lt. Edwin R. Lilya said Toth passed a worthless check to entertain a girl friend.

Authorities said the prisoner signed a statement admitting he had passed at least 15 bad checks. He was picked up after Eugene Turano, proprietor of a Baltimore Street business establishment, said a check for $89.60 "bounced".

The Cumberland bank checked with a Pittsburgh bank and found it held several unpaid checks similar to the one Turano had accepted.

Questioned at the State's Attorney's office, Toth reportedly said he would stamp a blank check "Doughety Const. Co." and "Payroll," sign the name J. B. Doueghty, fill in his own name or an alias, and pass the check.

Police said he had used the name F. Etters on the local check. Further investigation showed the Doueghty company to be a nonexistent firm.

Toth also said he had passed 18 checks—usually for about $80—in Youngstown, Ohio, Detroit, and Terra Haute, Ind. since his release from the Ohio Penitentiary where he had served 25 months of a 20-year forgery sentence.

He said the checks were drawn on Pittsburgh and Cleveland banks.

Local police notified Ohio authorities via State Police teletype that Toth was being held here.

Turano told police that Toth had been spending lavishly to entertain a girlfriend in his bar for three or four days before passing the check.

Police said Toth's girl friend, also from Ohio, told them she knew little of his activities, but that he had told her he was a traveling railroad diesel mechanic. She was not detained here.

City Spending, Receipts Are On Schedule

76 Per Cent Of Levy Has Been Collected

City spending and receipts were running almost like clockwork as five months of the 1951-52 fiscal year ended November 30.

Arthur B. Gibson, city auditor, reported yesterday that 44.44 per cent of the city's operating portion of the levy had been expended by November 30 and that 46.42 of the entire levy, including debt service, was paid out.

The only account which was overdrawn was Recreation, which was $6,501.30 in the red as the first five months of the fiscal year ended.

Collections were excellent, with 76.73 of the entire levy collected and 87½ per cent of the entire tax levy on hand.

Income Tax Up

Gibson said the only source of miscellaneous revenue which is approaching levy estimates is state income tax. A number of payments from that source, he added, reflect collections of delinquent taxes which may mean that this state shared income could exceed expectations.

It was estimated that the city's share from state income tax would bring in $40,000 and the payments are already at the $37,182.87 mark.

Other sources of miscellaneous revenues, Gibson said, are running true to form.

The financial report shows that $455,907.13 of the city's $1,025,842.26 appropriation had been spent, leaving $576,436.43 for the rest of the year.

Debt service payments were at the $130,233.24 mark. The levy includes $236,717.74 for debt service.

Spending Is Normal

All accounts are in good condition, Gibson said, and total expenditures are running only two to three per cent ahead of what they would be if spending could be alloted equally for all months.

In actual practice, however, spending is never equal, since some activities, such as playgrounds, take a heavy bite of appropriations early in the fiscal year.

Most of the fund for Street Paving, he added, was spent early in the fall so streets slated for repairs could be improved before bad weather arrived.

If corrections were made for heavy recreation and street paving expenses early in the fiscal year, spending would be at 41.80 per cent, instead of 44.44. The percentage would be 41.67 per cent if it were possible to allot 1-12 of the appropriation to each department each month.

Street Workers Swamped; More Snow Falls

Many Traffic Snarls Are Reported Here

At least five times the available equipment and men would be needed to clear city streets of ice and snow which has fallen here since last Friday, Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent, reported yesterday.

Fresh snow, sleet and freezing rain kept traffic snarled repeatedly in various section of the city yesterday.

Three inches of fresh snow fell here yesterday morning just as night crews halted work in clearing the downtown section of rutted ice and snow from last Tuesday's heavy snowstorm.

Corrigan said other crews were placed on maintenance tasks yesterday morning.

He reported at 3 p. m. that the men were home getting some needed food and rest in preparation for manning all available snow plows last evening.

Can't Remove Snow

Corrigan said one way traffic will have to be used in several sections if more snow falls since the only thing cleaning crews can do is to push the snow and ice aside.

The already dangerous streets became more hazardous early in the afternoon as over an inch of sleet and rain, froze as it hit the ground.

Temperatures remained below the freezing mark most of the day but rose steadily in late afternoon and was about 35 degrees in the downtown area by 9:30 p. m.

Traffic Is Snarled

Shortly after 5 p. m. one Maryland Avenue bus broke down and blocked traffic.

Another Maryland Avenue bus arrived in the downtown without auxiliary lights, buzzer or air to operate doors.

Taxicabs chalked up another record day as the weather worsened. They have generally refused to take time calls since the storm broke last Friday.

Severe traffic snarls were reported on Wineow Street, Greene Street, Cumberland and Allegany Streets and in virtually all of the hilly areas of the city.

Joseph Humbertson, 315 Water Street, reported that a snow plow headed for Kelly Boulevard passed his home with the blade up, making no attempt to clear that street. Similar reports came from other parts of the city.

Four Area Men Enlist In Navy

They are Richard Edward Biggs, 18, 30 Lyon Street, Ridgeley; Marvin Charles Josephsen, 18, RFD 2, Grantsville; Lee Austin Weaver, 18, and Richard Johnson Bruce Lehman, Jr., 21, both of RFD 2, Ridgeley.

Weather Wins Out As Schools Start Holiday Early

After trying to carry on classes despite obstacles all week, public school officials in Allegany County yesterday finally gave up the fight against the terrible weather and decided to start the Christmas holiday a day early.

Consequently, the holiday started at 3:30 p. m. yesterday and will continue until 9 a. m. Thursday, January 3. Originally it would have started today. Attendance at most schools was off at least 25 per cent again yesterday.

School Superintendent Charles L. Kopp said he thought it was the "part of wisdom" to start the holiday early because sleet and rain on top of the third snow in a week made driving hazardous throughout the county.

Judge Hears Suit Seeking To Void Deed

Matter Taken Under Advisement

Evidence in an equity suit which seeks to void a deed signed 17 years ago was heard yesterday by Associate Judge Morgan C. Harris in Allegany County Circuit Court but he has taken the case under advisement.

Brothers Sue

Charles E. Krapf and William F. Krapf, brothers brought the suit against the executors and heirs of the estate of their grandfather, Charles Krapf, in a dispute over a three-story double house at 243-245 Virginia Avenue.

The Krapfs assert that their grandmother, Mrs. Mary J. Krapf, died intestate November 14, 1933. In the settlement of the estate, her husband, Charles Krapf, and her grandsons, Charles E. Krapf and William F. Krapf, each received a one-third interest in the Virginia Avenue property.

The brothers, who were then in their early 20's, were influenced by their grandfather to sell him their shares in the property for $1,000 each, they state. They did so in the deed signed December 18, 1934, because they were promised that the property would revert to them upon his death, they testified. They had lived with their grandfather for years and looked upon him as a father, the brothers asserted.

Ignored In Will

When the elder Krapf died in 1950 he left the Virginia Avenue property to various nieces and nephews.

In testimony yesterday, witnesses said the property was worth $8,000 in 1934 and is now valued at $14,000.

The Krapfs are represented by Attorney John M. Robb. The heirs are represented by Attorneys William A. Gunter and F. Brooke Whiting.

About three inches of new snow and sleet fell over the area, but was changing to rain last night as temperatures began to climb. Mercury was up into the 40s in West Virginia and Pennsylvania last night, and climbing into the high 20 and low 30 degrees in Western Maryland.

Colder Today

The Weather Bureau predicts freezing rain in Western Maryland this morning with rising temperatures. However, mercury will plunge in the afternoon and become extremely cold tonight.

In Pennsylvania and West Virginia temperatures were expected to dip only to 35 degrees during the night with light snow and flurries in the afternoon. Temperatures in both states will drop to freezing tonight.

In the wake of yesterday's snow, sleet and freezing rain, highways in the Tri-State area were reported in bad condition by State Police last night. Motorists were warned that all roads were hazardous and they should not try to travel unless it was extremely necessary.

Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania State Police said roads were extremely slippery and icy. Slush-covered roads were freezing last night, but another real hazard was ice forming over windshields.

Road Crews Busy

Plowing and cindering crews were busy all day yesterday and last night clearing roads. They expected to work all day today.

In Allegany County 15 trucks, one auto patrol and 32 men were cindering, salting and plowing highways in this area. State Road Commission pickup trucks were going to hazardous places not yet reached by plows and were aiding autos which were stuck.

Most of the 180 crew members were physically worn out after working day and night since the snow Friday.

The Potomac Edison Company and Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company were alerted to be prepared for damage that may occur as snow turned to sleet and freezing rain yesterday afternoon.

Engineering Crews Alerted

Eight emergency line crews were alerted by the telephone company here. Richard Harman, branch manager, said the danger was in rain freezing on the lines and snapping the wires.

Crews were also on stand by at Oakland and Hagerstown.

It was raining in most of the nearby West Virginia counties last night and temperatures were reported in the 40s. At Elkins, Thomas, and Terra Alta, W. Va. the

Miss Jeanette Bonig, executive secretary said the Associated Charities has no allowance in its budget for additional Christmas aid and that all of the food baskets were made possible by donations.

Among the many groups who provided food or money donations for the program included Cumberland Lodge No. 63, BPO Elks; Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, the Knights of Columbus, sororities, many local churches, Boy and Girl Scout troops, Fort Hill and Allegany High School groups and many interested individuals.

Miss Bonig said the toys distributed this year were especially beautiful and reflected the work of hundreds of volunteers who built, repaired and dressed toys which had been used.

The toys were distributed from a storeroom set up at 119 North Centre Street, where parents were asked to come and select toys which would be suitable for their children.

Check "Artist" To Be Released To Ohio Police

Frank Toth Wanted For Parole Violation

The State's Attorney's Office will release Frank J. Toth, alias Frank Joseph Etters and Frank Dawson, of West Salem, Ohio, to authorities of the state of Ohio today.

Toth was arrested Wednesday on charges of plaguing bankers of four states with bogus checks since his release from prison six months ago.

William H. Geppert, assistant state's attorney, said Toth was sent to prison in Ohio for one to 20 years on charges of passing fraudulent checks. After serving 25 months of his sentence, Toth was released on parole. Yesterday, Ohio authorities requested that Toth be released to them because he violated parole there.

Lt. Edwin R. Lilya yesterday sent a message to Ohio Police informing them he would be released and requested them to pick him up here.

In the State's Attorney's office yesterday, Toth agreed to make restitution for the bad check which he signed while in Cumberland.

Lt. Edwin R. Lilya said Toth passed a worthless check to entertain a girl friend.

Authorities said the prisoner signed a statement admitting he had passed at least 15 bad checks. He was picked up after Eugene Turano, proprietor of a Baltimore Street business establishment, said a check for $89.60 "bounced".

The Cumberland bank checked with a Pittsburgh bank and found it held several unpaid checks similar to the one Turano had accepted.

Questioned at the State's Attorney's office, Toth reportedly said he would stamp a blank check "Doueghty Const. Co." and "Payroll," sign the name J. B. Doueghty, fill in his own name or an alias, and pass the check.

Police said he had used the name F. Etters on the local check. Further investigation showed the Doueghty company to be a nonexistent firm.

Toth also said he had passed 15 checks—usually for about $80—in Youngstown, Ohio, Detroit, and Terra Haute, Ind. since his release from the Ohio Penitentiary where he had served 25 months of a 20-year forgery sentence.

He said the checks were drawn on Pittsburgh and Cleveland banks.

Local police notified Ohio authorities via State Police teletype that Toth was being held here.

Turano told police that Toth had been spending lavishly to entertain a girlfriend in his bar for three or four days before passing the check.

Police said Toth's girl friend, also from Ohio, told them she knew little of his activities, but that he had told her he was a traveling railroad diesel mechanic. She was not detained here.
